ocrats had voted for the resolution to make the bill a party measure. Several democrats, however, were not present when that action was taken.

As agreed upon, the bill provides for a shipping board to consist of the secretaries of the treasury and commerce, together with three civilians to be appointed by the president with the consent of the senate.

Senator Kern and Stone and others who fought for an agreement declared they expected the bill to pass before March 4.

Senator Hoke Smith and Hardwick have taken the opposite side of the ownership and not government operation.

MANN ACCUSES WILSON OF BUILDING A MACHINE

G. O. P. Leader in House Alleges President Plans to Secure Renomination.

Washington, January 23.—Republican Leader Mann, in a speech in the house today charging President Wilson with using a personal machine to secure renomination.

"I notice on every side," said Mr. Mann, "that the president is building up a personal machine, as far as he can, to secure his renomination."

Mr. Mann said he called attention to the Baltimore platform "in good humor, because it is almost an offense in this house nowadays to refer to the last democratic platform."

INTERESTING POLITICAL CAREER OF S. P. KENNEDY

Sketch of Rise to Presidency of Alabama Railroad Commission.

By Harvey W. Laird. Montgomery, Ala., January 23.—(Special.) To an influence that had its origin in Georgia way back in 1908, Hon. Sam P. Kennedy has just been elevated to the presidency of the Alabama railroad commission, a position which two governors found successful stepping stones to the office of chief executive of the state.

It is also illustrative of the vicissitudes of politics that the man with whom Mr. Kennedy first came into power was the bitter opponent of the railroad business.

When E. B. Comer began a fight for lower railroad rates in the morning immediately following the adoption of the new constitution, he has heartily joined Mr. Kennedy, a railroad man of prominence and long standing, resident at Anniston.

Mr. Comer was elected president of the railroad commission in 1903, and the first man so chosen, the honor having previously been conferred by appointment by the legislature.

Mr. Kennedy came to the railroad commission at this time as secretary, but with the understanding that as an expert he was to work out for the state the problems of reform which was desired by the legislature.

As already noted, Mr. Kennedy came into power with former Governor Comer, but refused to follow him when the latter became governor.

FOR RURAL CREDITS HOWARD MAKES PLEA

Atlanta Congressman Advocates Measure He Thinks Will Solve Problem.

(By John Corrigan, Jr.) Washington, January 23.—(Special.) Representative William Howard addressed the house at length in support of his rural credits bill and urged the speedy enactment of this important legislation of interest to the nation's farmers.

Mr. Howard's scheme provides for the establishment of county land mortgage banks, out of state banks and finally of a central bank. Its purpose is to enable farmers to get low interest rates on long term loans by consolidating their resources.

Since congress has already passed a currency act which improves the nation's system of commercial banking, and a law which placed upon the side of business and industrial life, he believes it should not stop until it aids the farmer to realize on his credit to get money to make permanent improvements.

The strongest criticism urged against Mr. Howard's scheme is that it will be an expensive one to operate. If profits must be made by local county banks, the central bank will have to pay a higher rate of interest for the money it obtains from banking institutions.

WAREHOUSE FOR GRAINS. Cartersville Firm Will Meet New Condition.

Cartersville, Ga., January 23.—(Special.)—Realizing the need of a market for the handling of corn, oats, wheat and other grains in Cartersville, so that such products can be readily converted into money, E. E. Field & Son, of Cartersville, have established a warehouse on their private railroad track here just south of their cotton warehouse, and in the same building have installed the local demand and most up-to-date machinery, which will make grain products of Bartow county and surrounding counties marketable and give them a commercial value.

ATTACKED BY BRANDEIS

He Says They Develop Absolutism and Are Foes of Democracy.

New York, January 23.—Louis D. Brandeis, of Boston, testified today before the commission on industrial relations investigating great philanthropic foundations and the causes of industrial unrest, that he believed the great corporations tended to degenerate the type of labor.

Mr. Brandeis said, with the statement of Samuel Gompers that immigration is a menace to labor, he said: "If labor has anything to fear from immigration the remedy is not to be found in restriction."

Mr. Brandeis said he did not believe a minimum could be fixed by legislation, as different conditions prevailed in different towns and cities and in different industries.

DEATH PENALTY GIVEN TO PROMINENT FILIPINO

Manila, January 22.—Governor General Harrison today directed that General Noriel, the insurgent leader, who is one of the most prominent natives of the province of Cavite, be hanged on January 27. The execution originally was set for January 12, but Judge Sevilla, a native jurist, later intervened on behalf of General Noriel, but Governor Harrison directed that the death sentence be carried out. The pending measure abolishing capital punishment offers the only hope for the general.

RENFROE'S PENSION ORDINANCE OPPOSED

Councilman Proposes to Abolish System of Caring for Old Employees.

Councilman Frank Reynolds, chairman of the ordinance committee, does not believe the Renfro pension ordinance should be adopted, and he declared Saturday that he will oppose the measure when it reaches the ordinance committee.

Councilman Renfro's ordinance provides for a charter amendment which will abolish the system of pensioning city employees who have served the allotted thirty years, or who have reached the age limit of 60. The amendment would only give pensions to men and women who are actually maimed or incapacitated in actual service.

The reason for Councilman Renfro's amendment is seen in the rapidly increasing pension roll of the city. Four years ago the pension system was adopted. At the present time the city is spending $12,014 annually to take care of its oldest employees.

Councilman Reynolds believes that the city should adopt a new system. He would have the law so framed that the pension fund should be deducted from salaries to create a pension fund. He would have the law so framed that the pension fund should be deducted from salaries to create a pension fund.

Mayor Woodward is in favor of some change in the pension laws of the city. He says that at the rate the city has been granting pensions to employees it will be only a matter of a few years before the city will be spending $50,000 a year for pensions alone.

IN THE LOCAL THEATERS

Emma Carus and Carl Randall at the Forsyth, and Lola May, leading lady of Baldwin-Melville stock company at the Lyric.

Baldwin-Melville Stock

(At the Atlanta.) Tomorrow Monday night Baldwin-Melville stock company under the personal direction of Walter S. Baldwin will inaugurate a permanent stock season at the Atlanta theater presenting strictly high-class dramatic and comedy productions.

Mr. Baldwin is well and favorably known as the most successful stock producer in this country. He is not a stranger to Atlanta theatergoers, having presented most excellent stock productions in Atlanta before.

Mr. Baldwin promises that the company this time will prove to be superior to any similar organization ever seen in this city. Only the biggest and best Broadway successes will be given and those that have never been seen in Atlanta at popular prices.

For the opening day, commencing tomorrow night and continuing the entire week with matinees Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, the three-act comedy "Our Wives," the big New York and Chicago success, will be presented. This is the same play which has been set to music by Victor Herbert and under the title of "The Only Girl" now being sung at the Lyric theater, New York city.

The story of "Our Wives" is exceedingly clever. Frank Bowers, nicknamed "Patsy," a librettist (played by William H. Shaw), the man who is doing anything female, thus argues, feeling feminine. He and his pals, "Corky," Sylvan Martin, a stock broker (played by Edgar Ryder), "Spider," Harry Lyon, an artist (stocked by J. Hartman Roeder), and "Katie," Miss Helen, a dentist (played by Stuart Fox). He also has his faithful valet, "Otto" (played by Hugh Gibson), who usually is not firm in his attitude between "Bowers" and womankind. He also has a look. With these he asks: "Bowers is a flimsy, fidgety genius, depending upon his man Otto to see to everything except the signing of checks."

Bowers is working upon an opera. Upstairs he hears the strains of original melody. Such melody, he declares, would fit, to a nicety, the theme of his opera and he makes an appointment with the "man" upstairs, when he finds that a woman and a very pretty woman, is responsible for the music. He is not a man, but a woman, and he has nothing to do with her—then he has an inspiration. He suggests that she lose her identity as a woman, to lose his equal footing, two artists with but a single thought, and the play is pushed to the background. She agrees and Bowers and Wilson collaborate.

Enter the stockbroker "Corky,"

Martin. He has found the most wonderful woman in the universe. Enter "Spider" Lyon, the artist. He has discovered the most perfect gem of femininity in the universe. Enter "Rattle," Tatum, the dentist. He has won for himself the affection of female human loveliness. Toward the end of the play, Bowers' man "Otto" also discovers the finest cook in the world, Bowers' cook, and confesses that they are to wed.

The three bachelor friends of Bowers promise to call on him after their honeymoon and when they return with their wives, trouble starts. One of the wives, an Irish lass, has fed him another wife claims that it is not natural. A third wife tells of the gossip of the red-headed one. The husbands are asked to untangle the gossip knot and they in turn fall out with their erstwhile friends, while trying. Bowers, meanwhile, looks upon squalling wives and blesses himself for being single.

Complications grow deeper. One couple after another leaves the writer's apartment. Wives cry or quarrel with their husbands and Bowers again puts himself on the back because he is single.

Deserted by all his old pals he leaves home for a walk in a park, returning, he again hears the strains of music above his head and he suddenly realizes that sex does not exist where man and woman are concerned. He sends for Miss Wilson. He tells her of his love, which is reciprocated. The feminine portion of the cast will be cleverly handled by Miss Lola May, as Wilson (the woman upstairs), Miss Anne Bradley as Elizabeth Tatum nee Brooks, Miss Verney Barrett as Margaret Lyon, the comedy dog, "Bobby," but not least, the "cook" by herself.

Mr. Baldwin has in preparation for the second week of his stock season the big successful play of human interest, "The Man from Home."

Keitt Vaudeville

(At the Forsyth.) The well-known star, Emma Carus, assisted by Carl Randall, will headline the Forsyth bill, commencing with matinee on Monday. The mention of the name of Emma Carus brings to mind a number of the biggest musical comedy successes on Broadway, in which this famous comedienne has played a prominent part for herself. Two of her most recent successes, before entering the vaudeville world, were "Up and Down Broadway," Miss Carus, assisted by Mr. Randall, appeared in vaudeville a year ago and scored quite a hit. She is one of the few comedienne who can be depended upon to tickle an audience's funny bone in the funniest spot. Mr. Carl Randall made himself quite popular here with his up-to-date dancing and assisting Miss Carus to make her act a real drawing card.

A splendid feature will be Harry Tatum, the dentist. He has won for himself the affection of female human loveliness. Toward the end of the play, Bowers' man "Otto" also discovers the finest cook in the world, Bowers' cook, and confesses that they are to wed.

HART COUNTY FARMERS GOING IN FOR CATTLE

Diversification and Attendant Benefits to Result From Cotton Situation.

Hartwell, Ga., January 23.—(Special.) Hart county has made a law unto herself in respect to diversification, and while the farmers of this section are affected by low prices for cotton and the shortage in this country's crop, yet they are seeing many evidences of good that will undoubtedly flow from the present situation. Many farmers are turning their attention to cattle-raising and other methods of diversification.

One of the prettiest sights to be seen anywhere is "The Meadow," the country home of James B. Thornton, in McCurry's district. In his large pasture may be seen about twenty coats raised on that farm. Mr. Thornton is a great believer in horses, and will not allow a mule on his farm, and though one of northeast Georgia's largest farmers has never owned but one mule. He has lately invested quite a neat sum of money in Kentucky draft horses. He is a model farmer and has a model farm. In the year of the beautiful poetry, which is the property of Mrs. Thornton, presents another attractive picture.

Jack G. Craft, cashier of the Hartwell bank, and Lamar Mochet have gone extensively into the cattle business on Mr. Craft's magnificent river plantation at Craigs Ferry. Several carloads of Hereford cattle have been shipped into the county and Hart farmers are turning their attention to the raising of beef cattle. P. D. Taylor, one of the foremost farmers of this section, is devoting his energies to the cultivation of alfalfa. W. L. Hodges is interested in this line, and has considerable land to the growth of this great farm product. S. L. Thornton, in lower Hart, is the owner of the beautiful poetry, which is the property of Mrs. Thornton, presents another attractive picture.

URGUE COUNCIL TO CALL ELECTION ON CHARTER

Retail Merchants' Resolutions Are Sent to Mayor J. G. Woodward.

Grover Megabee, secretary of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, has written a letter to Mayor Woodward in which he asks that the mayor transmit to council a resolution adopted by the association at a recent meeting, urging that the general council allow the people to vote on the question of changing the form of government in Atlanta.

The resolutions urge that the general council authorize three committees to draft a charter for the city, one to submit an amendment to the present charter, one to submit an amendment to the present charter, and that the three charters be submitted to the people for a popular vote. Mayor Woodward will send the communication to council at its next meeting.

Baby's Happiness Depends On Health

Cross, fretful babies usually need a laxative to make them comfortable, and comfort begets happiness. Constipation is the cause of much discomfort. Mothers should watch closely the condition of their children's bowels and see that they are regular. A mild, pleasant tasting laxative such as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is ideal for children because of its natural composition and gentle action, and because it contains no opiate, narcotic or other harmful habit-forming drug. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold by druggists everywhere. A teaspoonful at bedtime will bring easy, certain relief. A free trial bottle can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 152 Washington St., Monticello, Ills.

SEABOARD ROAD FORMALLY ENTERS BRUNSWICK TODAY

Brunswick, Ga., January 23.—(Special.)—The Seaboard Air Line railroad will formally enter Brunswick tomorrow, when a regular through schedule between this city and Savannah will be inaugurated. Through the Seaboard has passed within 19 miles of Brunswick ever since the road was built, never has the service been extended into this city.

By the inauguration of this service all short trails over the Aleda, Birmingham and Atlantic railroad between Brunswick and Thalmann will be discontinued. Through the Seaboard this business will be handled by the Seaboard, as that line will not only handle all through traffic between Brunswick and Savannah, but will make connection for the north and south at Thalmann. Two trains each between Brunswick and Savannah will be operated, thus making the first time that travelers can go to and from these two cities without a change of cars. It is understood that a chair car the patrons of the road.

SIX MURDER CASES ON DOCKET IN GLYNN

Brunswick, Ga., January 23.—(Special.)—The Glynn superior court will convene again Monday morning to hear the docket of the criminal docket, with the largest number of murder cases in the history of the county—six in all. It is hardly probable that the cases will all be tried long enough to dispose of them all.

The first case to be taken up Monday will be that of the negro Herbert Edwards, who is charged with the murder of his father-in-law, C. A. Shaw. Shaw was the leader of his race in Brunswick.

On Monday week the court will take up the case of J. H. Davis, who, for the third time will be charged with the murder of his wife. In both of the previous trials a mistrial was declared, the jury being unable to agree.

Whether or not the two young men of Sealey, Bruce Edmunds and Pete Padgett, who were indicted last week charged with the murder of young Frank Wynn, of Jessup, will be tried during the session is not known. There are also two negroes to be tried on the charge of murder.

MY TIRED FEET ACHED FOR "TIZ"

Let Your Sore, Swollen, Aching Feet Spread Out in a Bath of "TIZ."

Just couldn't wait to take my hat off!

Just take your shoes off and then put those weary, aching, burning, corn-pestered, bunion-tortured feet of yours in a "TIZ" bath. Your feet will wriggle with joy; they'll look up at you and almost talk and then they'll take another dive in that "TIZ" bath.

When your feet feel like lumps of lead—all tired out—just try "TIZ." It's grand—its glorious. Your feet will wriggle with joy; they'll look up at you and almost talk and then they'll take another dive in that "TIZ" bath.

There's nothing like "TIZ." It's the only remedy that draws out all the poisonous exudations which puff up your feet and cause the howl of discomfort your shoes feel. You can wear shoes a size smaller if you desire.

Just Try This When Hairy Growths Appear (Modes of Today.) A smooth, hairless skin always follows the use of a paste made by mixing some water with plain powdered delatone. This paste is applied to the hairy surface 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed, when every trace of hair will have vanished. No pain or discomfort attends the use of the delatone paste, but caution should be exercised to be sure that you get real delatone.

A PEARLMAN HELD FOR GRAND JURY ON ARSON CHARGE

Valdosta, Ga., January 23.—(Special.)—At the commitment hearing of A. Pearlman and Joe Greenberg, charged with the arson of the fireproof building of the city court this afternoon, Greenberg was discharged and Pearlman held under a bond of $2,000 to await investigation by the grand jury.

Pearlman, a merchant, and Greenberg, a sales promoter, were charged with attempting to burn the three-story Ashley building, which is located in the store of Pearlman, on the evening of January 12. The evidence in the case was entirely circumstantial, and failed to connect Greenberg with the affair. The attorneys for the prosecution suggested his release, as no case had been made out against him.

The fire inspector Jones appeared as prosecutor, and was an important witness. He stated that the fire, which started in a closet adjoining the second floor of the Pearlman store, was undoubtedly of incendiary origin, and said that the fire or gasoline was first pronounced on the day after the fire.

The prosecution sought to show that Pearlman fired the building to obtain money from the insurance companies. In binding him over, Judge Cranford reduced the bond from $4,000 to $2,000.

J. PIERPONT MORGAN EXPECTED AT JEKYLL

Brunswick, Ga., January 23.—(Special.)—J. Pierpont Morgan will arrive in the city tomorrow, and will leave at once by special boat for Jeckyl island, where he goes to spend some time. It is understood that he will have apartments in the Sans Souci inn, where his father, for many years, came down each winter and spent two or three weeks.

This will be the first visit to Jeckyl by the young Mr. Morgan. His father was a prominent member of the Jeckyl club, and he has visited the island many times. Mrs. Morgan, who has been in the city for some time, is expected to accompany him on his trip.

WILSON AND SENATORS TO AGREE ON PATRONAGE

Washington, January 23.—Indications that difficulties between the president and the senate over appointments would be adjusted soon, were evident tonight in persistent reports that the president would make other nominations for positions now filled by men whose nominations have been rejected. At the white house it was said no definite decision had been reached on this question.

In connection with the Missouri situation it was reported that the president was considering Robert L. Gregory for postmaster at Kansas City in place of Mr. Collins, and Shannon Douglas as marshal in place of Ewing Blaine. The nominations of both Collins and Blaine had been rejected, but they are being under recess appointments.

DEKALB CITIZENS WILL DISCUSS BIG PAGEANT

A mass meeting of DeKalb county citizens will be held at the courthouse in Decatur Friday night of this week, when plans will be considered for the big "Product" pageant, which will be held in Decatur next fall, when $1,000 in premiums will be offered for the best agricultural displays.

The meeting will be held at the home of the county agricultural promoters, and will be held at the home of the county agricultural promoters, and will be held at the home of the county agricultural promoters.

THIRD OF COTTON CROP YET TO BE MARKETED

Commerce, Ga., January 23.—(Special.)—Commerce has received 11,179 bales of cotton to date, against 18,432 to corresponding date last year, indicating a shortage of 7,253 bales. It is estimated that at least one-third of the crop in this section will yet be marketed. With one-third of the crop yet to sell, on an increased price, it is evident that a little sum of money, turned loose within the next few months. All of this money will be available and will flow into all channels of business, and will naturally give new life and infuse confidence in all lines of industry.

Dr. Calderwood, the Western Congregational minister, will preach at the regular Sunday morning service at 11 o'clock in the Central Congregational church, Carnegie way, near the library.

Noon, Afternoon and Night Meetings in All Parts of City During the February Revival

Standing: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Alexander; seated, Dr. and Mrs. J. W. Chapman.

There will be meetings every afternoon and evening, except on Saturday, during the four weeks the Chapman-Alexander revival forces are conducting evangelistic rallies in Atlanta.

The evangelistic party, with the exception of Charles M. Alexander, the "singing evangelist," will reach Atlanta in time for the opening meetings.

Many Volunteer Workers. The executive committee in charge of the campaign is particularly gratified at the general responses to its appeal for volunteers to serve in various capacities during the meetings proper.

Another important preliminary undertaken by the committee is the enrollment and training of personal workers who will take hold of the individual converts.

Along the "Sawdust Trail." The committee will have a sure-enough "sawdust trail" in the tabernacle being built to house the meetings on Peachtree street, north of Ellis.

Work is being pushed on the tabernacle so that it will be ready when the first meeting is held. The revival can stay in a city only a short period, whereas the churches are always here, and their duties are permanent.

tee having this part of the revival under way. There will be held meetings in factories and shops and parlor meetings in the homes of society women.

MOULTRIE FOLKS LOSE SUIT TO CARNIVAL MAN

Albany, Ga., January 23.—(Special.) Thomas P. Littlejohn, proprietor of the Littlejohn United Shows, was awarded a verdict of $1,000 by a jury in the United States court here today, for damages sustained by reason of a petition for an injunction in the state courts which prevented his carnival company from exhibiting in Macon in December, 1912.

HARTWELL TO BUILD WATERWORKS SYSTEM

NEW LIBRARY OFFER STILL OPEN TO CITY

Carnegie Foundation to Give Building if Atlanta Furnishes Lot.

Contrary to reports to the effect that the failure of the aldermanic board to pass the finance sheet which carried $3,000 for a library lot in the third ward, had the effect of nullifying the proposal of the Carnegie Library Foundation to erect a $15,000 building on the site, it was learned on reliable authority on Saturday that the offer still stands good and that the building will be erected whenever the city provides the money for the site.

CURFEW LAW IS PASSED BY CITY OF BAINBRIDGE

Thomasville, Ga., January 23.—(Special.)—Bainbridge has passed a Curfew law to go into effect the first of February. This law requires that all boys must be safely in their homes by 9 o'clock at night or they will be liable to arrest.

BLACK HAND NOTES SENT TO DECATUR CO. PEOPLE

Thomasville, Ga., January 23.—(Special.)—Several black hand letters demanding that $400 be sent to a certain address and threatening the life of his entire family and the destruction of his turpentine stills in the event of failure to comply with the demand, have been received during the past week by G. W. Egan, of Iron City, Decatur county. These letters are signed "Desperate Citizens," etc. The police are working on clues. It is said that several prominent citizens of that section have received similar letters.

A BIG INFLUENCE. It is surprising the wonderful influence GOOD DIGESTION has on your general health. It not only promotes strength, but also keeps the liver active and bowels open.

HOW OUR INCREASED EXPORTS HAVE PEERED ALL KINDS OF BUSINESS FOREIGN OFFERINGS ARE QUICKLY TAKEN

Higher values for securities of foreign selling of stocks and bonds here, but all offerings from abroad are quickly taken up by investors. The only effect of heavy sales here during the last week has been to slacken the pace at which prices were advancing, but they are still going higher in spite of the European liquidation. There is no indication that this sailing from the other side of the Atlantic will continue for a long time, the principal proof of it being the London market for American shares and bonds is continually weaker than on this side, and heavy offerings are being handled by our market satisfactorily at times.

GOOD BEING DONE BY LARGE EXPORTS

New York, January 23.—(Special.)—Never in the history of this country has a credit trade balance been established like that piled up during the past few months. As late as August our imports exceeded exports. The turn came the next month, our exports exceeding imports by $16,000,000. For October there was a balance of $27,000,000. In December, however, it showed a balance of $80,000,000. This week's statement from Washington showing a balance of $131,000,000 for the month, was greeted by Wall Street with an outburst of enthusiasm. The credit for December alone would take care of 1,500,000 shares of American railroad and industrial stock, around the present average price. If Europe wanted to sell all the goods it produced now, however, that only a few short weeks ago many people were afraid to estimate Europe's desire to do us back our stocks as they were in figuring how the business of the whole country was to be ruined, helplessly, by the war.

No Need for More Gold. Ordinarily, we would expect gold to cancel the foreign credits of the past four months. Under existing conditions, however, we will take none of the gold offered. The gold in first place, partly because of trade restriction and partly because of the new federal reserve system. The bank of the country have the largest cash surplus on record. With call loans down to 2 1/2 per cent, certainly we have no need in this country for more gold. It is one thing to say why we are not drawing in the usual manner, but it is another thing to say that we are not drawing in the usual manner. It is a decidedly friendly act. With England's battleships patrolling the coast, it would be impossible to take gold from Germany.

Strength of Copper. The copper metal market has gained further strength as a result of a break at 14 cents a pound in large lots during the past week, and with many of the smaller lots of copper metal being so encouraged over the outlook that they will raise their rate of output to meet the demand. The market has been operating at a rate by which about half of the total production of the world has been brought out. Surplus stocks of metal have been cut into sharply during the past few months.

Cotton and Wheat. Cotton prices advanced sharply in several sessions of the exchange here, and this is a result of the export buying, and also because of the belief that the surplus carry-over from the previous year is smaller than had been hitherto expected. Another factor in the advance is the fact that cotton is being less active on the selling side than they have been in the New York market for several months.

Dry Goods More Active Than For Many Weeks. New York, January 23.—Trade in cotton goods has been broader and more active than for many weeks. Jobbers, printers, converters and manufacturers here have been buying in large quantities and prices have steadily risen. Several other contracts have been made for deliveries to the end of the year and a great many were entered into for deliveries to the end of the year. Staple prints are quarter cent a yard, and a full size yard from the bottom of last year.

Live Stock. Chicago, January 23.—Hogs—Receipts, 11,000; mixed, $6.00 to $6.15; heavy, $6.40 to $6.75; rough, $6.00 to $6.15; pigs, $6.40 to $6.75. Cattle—Receipts, 10,000; mixed, $5.00 to $5.25; western, $5.00 to $5.25; calves, $5.50 to $6.00. Sheep—Receipts, 3,000; mixed, $5.75 to $6.00; lambs, $6.00 to $6.50. Horses—Receipts, 2,000; higher, pigs and hogs, $6.00 to $6.75; muttons and butchers, $6.00 to $6.75.

Interior Movement. Houston, midling, 8-10; receipts, 18,200; shipments, 20,100. Memphis, 8-10; receipts, 2,383; shipments, 2,400. Augusta, midling, 8-10; receipts, 2,864; shipments, 2,800. WEEK WITH STOCKS WAS AN EXCEPTION ONE AT SESSION'S CLOSE

Market Opened at Advance, But Bearish View of Census Report and Realizing Caused Break. New York, January 23.—Business today on the stock exchange was relatively dull and the movement more than recently. The trend of prices was downward from the outset, but further liquidation, combined with the pressure of the later declines, the list made partial recovery under the lead of Reading, which scored a net gain of almost 1 point.

WHEAT WAS STRONG AT SESSION'S CLOSE

Transactions Larger Than Any Week Since the War Began—Saturday Was a Rather Dull Day. Chicago, January 23.—Bearish attempts to utilize the talk as to Austria and Hungary failed today to cause more than a temporary turning back in an upward march of the price of wheat. Quotations closed strong at an advance of 1/4 to 1/2 above last night. Corn finished 1/4 to 3/8 higher, and oats with a gain of 1/4 to 3/8, and provisions unchanged to 5/16 lower.

RESERVE DEPOSITS INCREASE $7,000,000

Washington, January 23.—Reserve deposits of the twelve federal reserve banks increased about seven million dollars up to the close of business January 23, according to the weekly consolidated statement today. Resources. Gold coin and certificates, $235,652,000. Federal reserve notes, $1,450,000. Subtotal, $237,102,000. Total, $237,102,000. Bills, $1,000,000. Total, $238,102,000. Maturity within 30 days, $6,333,000. Maturity within 60 days, $1,039,000. Other, $1,160,000. Total, $15,532,000. Investment, $2,024,000. Due from federal reserve banks: items in transit, $12,491,000. All other sources, $12,491,000. Total resources, $24,526,000.

Chicago, January 23.—Bearish attempts to utilize the talk as to Austria and Hungary failed today to cause more than a temporary turning back in an upward march of the price of wheat. Quotations closed strong at an advance of 1/4 to 1/2 above last night. Corn finished 1/4 to 3/8 higher, and oats with a gain of 1/4 to 3/8, and provisions unchanged to 5/16 lower.

New York, January 23.—Business today on the stock exchange was relatively dull and the movement more than recently. The trend of prices was downward from the outset, but further liquidation, combined with the pressure of the later declines, the list made partial recovery under the lead of Reading, which scored a net gain of almost 1 point.

No Need for More Gold. Ordinarily, we would expect gold to cancel the foreign credits of the past four months. Under existing conditions, however, we will take none of the gold offered. The gold in first place, partly because of trade restriction and partly because of the new federal reserve system. The bank of the country have the largest cash surplus on record. With call loans down to 2 1/2 per cent, certainly we have no need in this country for more gold. It is one thing to say why we are not drawing in the usual manner, but it is another thing to say that we are not drawing in the usual manner. It is a decidedly friendly act. With England's battleships patrolling the coast, it would be impossible to take gold from Germany.

Strength of Copper. The copper metal market has gained further strength as a result of a break at 14 cents a pound in large lots during the past week, and with many of the smaller lots of copper metal being so encouraged over the outlook that they will raise their rate of output to meet the demand. The market has been operating at a rate by which about half of the total production of the world has been brought out. Surplus stocks of metal have been cut into sharply during the past few months.

Cotton and Wheat. Cotton prices advanced sharply in several sessions of the exchange here, and this is a result of the export buying, and also because of the belief that the surplus carry-over from the previous year is smaller than had been hitherto expected. Another factor in the advance is the fact that cotton is being less active on the selling side than they have been in the New York market for several months.

Dry Goods More Active Than For Many Weeks. New York, January 23.—Trade in cotton goods has been broader and more active than for many weeks. Jobbers, printers, converters and manufacturers here have been buying in large quantities and prices have steadily risen. Several other contracts have been made for deliveries to the end of the year and a great many were entered into for deliveries to the end of the year. Staple prints are quarter cent a yard, and a full size yard from the bottom of last year.

Live Stock. Chicago, January 23.—Hogs—Receipts, 11,000; mixed, $6.00 to $6.15; heavy, $6.40 to $6.75; rough, $6.00 to $6.15; pigs, $6.40 to $6.75. Cattle—Receipts, 10,000; mixed, $5.00 to $5.25; western, $5.00 to $5.25; calves, $5.50 to $6.00. Sheep—Receipts, 3,000; mixed, $5.75 to $6.00; lambs, $6.00 to $6.50. 40 First-Run Picture Reels To Be Seen at Auditorium Today at Shriner Benefit

"Sunday is an appropriate day for the beginning of Atlanta's sunniest period of 'good humor,' declared Henry Heinz, noble of Yaarab temple, announcing yesterday afternoon the program for today's moving picture entertainment by the Shriners in the Auditorium.

"We want everybody around this town to begin wearing his broadest smile. We want those few who are away down in the dumps to come up and look on the bright side of things with the members of Yaarab," said he.

"We are beginning today a series of entertainments that will last till summer. Some will be frolics, but this one today must not be confused in that classification."

The program for this afternoon and evening shows 40 first-run reels, all of high order, all good and each taking about 15 minutes. The aggregate time being 10 hours. The first will start at 1 o'clock and the last (a 6-reel presentation of "The Musketeers") will close at 11 o'clock. Anyone may see all of them. There will be no admission charge, but boxes will be ready at the Auditorium for such contributions as the patrons care to give. Part of the proceeds will go to charity, and the rest will be used to help with Yaarab temple plans to send its patrol and band to the Shriners' meeting in Seattle on Monday.

ORR RETURNS FROM BIG EXPORT MEETING

Number of Country's Leading Business Men and Government Experts Attended.

J. K. Orr returned to the city Saturday morning from St. Louis, where he attended last week a highly interesting and important meeting of some of the largest and most influential business men in the country, who had gathered to discuss American exports.

"We had a very fine and enthusiastic meeting," said Mr. Orr. "It was attended by many leading bankers and manufacturers of high government officials and others. So far as I know, I was the only manufacturer from this section, but it was a tip worth while secretary Redfield was there, and was much interested in the discussion. The president of the United Steel company was also there, besides many export government men.

The discussions were along general export lines, particularly in trade in South America. The consensus of opinion was that the time was now most opportune to bring about a great trade over there. Of course, no definite was done—it was just a meeting to awaken interest and to look into the possibilities which await our country in the export market of goods. Every man will naturally have to work out his own salvation, so to speak, but the meeting will be a help in the matter of much good to be accomplished along this line."

JOHN HOWZE IS KILLED BY AUTOMOBILE IN WEST

Athens, Ga., January 23.—(Special.) The remains of John Howze, aged 39, a prominent real estate man of Los Angeles, will arrive in Athens today for burial here on the day following. He was a son of Judge A. C. Howze of Birmingham, a grandson of the late Dr. H. B. Long, and the nephew of his grandnephew of the late Dr. Crawford Long. Mr. Howze was killed in an automobile accident in Los Angeles on Wednesday.

IT RUINS HAIR TO WASH IT WITH SOAP

Soap should be used very sparingly, if at all, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Most soaps and prepared shampoo contain too much alkali to be good for the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it. The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified coconut oil (which is pure and greaseless) is heavier and better than soap or anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly and it leaves the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified coconut oil at any pharmacy, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

Has a Cure For Pellagra

Patric Nicholas Laurel, Miss., writes "Seems to me if I had not obtained your remedy when I did I would not have lived much longer. I am glad we discovered this wonderful remedy that will cure Pellagra. When I began taking Baughn's Pellagra Remedy my weight was 60-odd pounds now it is 90-odd. I would like to have this published and sent to sufferers of Pellagra."

This is published at her request. If you suffer from Pellagra or know of any one who suffers from Pellagra, it is your duty to consult the resources of Baughn, who has fought and conquered the dreaded malady right in the Pellagra Belt of Alabama.

The symptoms—hands red like sunburn, skin peeling off, sore mouth the lips, throat and tongue a flaming red with much mucous and choking indigestion and nausea, either diarrhoea or constipation.

There is hope if you have Pellagra you can be cured by Baughn's Pellagra Remedy. Get a big free book on Pellagra. Address: American Compound Co., Box 2003, Jasper, Ala. remembering money is refunded in any case where the remedy fails to cure—(adv.)

GEORGIA FIDDLERS MAY MEET THOSE OF OTHER STATES

Whether the Georgia Old-Time Fiddlers' convention shall be converted into an all-southern championship affair is the problem which just now is being discussed by the members of the association which is to hold its third annual convention at the Atlanta Auditorium next week.

Fiddler John Carson, present holder of the Georgia championship, has announced his willingness to defend his title against all-comers, inviting fiddlers from Seattle to Key West to take the prize with him. But the Old Time Fiddlers' association has hitherto confined its contests to Georgia musicians and is anxious to have the state title definitely decided before extending its challenge to the outside world. The matter is, therefore, still under discussion.

The question of throwing open the title to all-comers was presented by a challenge received Saturday from the Cole Blaine Fiddling Club, of Clear River, S. C., offering to send a delegation of five of the best fiddlers in the Palmetto State to compete with Georgia musicians at the convention which will open on February 2 and continue four nights.

"We have been reading about Georgia fiddlers and their wonderful fiddling," said the writer, "but we believe old South Carolina has you beat. We will put Squire Inoch Tutwiler up against the best and we've got for speed, endurance and melody barring nothing except playing by note. Squire Tutwiler don't play by note, nor any other of us, but our motto is 'fast and frolicsome, is our motto. Let us know by next mail!'"

It is possible that a double championship may be arranged, one for Georgia only and the other for the state affair, but that detail will be worked out this week. From the applications for places in the contest being received, it is indicated that more fiddlers and better than ever before.

The daughters of the Confederacy will again be the beneficiaries, the rather than financial enjoyment of a number of prominent people will be the result of the contest, and it is probable that Judge Carson, who introduced the fiddlers last year, will serve as master of ceremonies.

B. C. RANDALL DIES OF PARALYSIS AT HOME IN GRIFFIN

Griffin, Ga., January 23.—(Special.) B. C. Randall, a prominent merchant of Griffin and past grand patriarch of the Georgia Old Fellows, died at his home here at 8 o'clock tonight following an attack of paralysis at his store this morning.

Mr. Randall was 60 years of age and is survived by a wife and three children. Mr. Randall was well known throughout the state and was especially prominent in fraternal circles.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

EVANGELISTIC SERVICES OPEN AT NEGRO CHURCH

The annual evangelistic services of the First Congregational church, 200 Pryor, will begin this morning, 10 o'clock, at the Negro church, assisted by Rev. G. Lake James, dean of the popular Bible school. Dean James is a popular speaker and makes a strong appeal for higher living. This is the first time in which he has assisted in these meetings, and he has always been heard by large audiences. One of the features of the services will be the singing, which will be led by a chorus. The services will continue tonight, and on every night the coming week, and including the following Sunday.

ROGERS OPENS 55TH RETAIL GROCERY STORE

The chain of stores conducted by the L. W. Rogers company continues to expand. Another retail place was opened Saturday at Marietta, Ga. The company found it necessary to establish this latest store to take care of the trade in that section. The opening of new stores has grown to be almost a habit with the Rogers company, and it is to be expected that the Marietta store will be opened by the Rogers company.

WATER FOR CHATSWORTH COMES FROM MOUNTAINS

Chatsworth, Ga., January 23.—(Special.) Chatsworth, the new county seat of Murray county, is just completing a new water system which will provide the town with cool spring water brought from the mountains 600 feet above.

During the year just closed there have been a number of offices and mercantile buildings and dwellings erected in Chatsworth and a number of buildings are now under way.

To the Chatsworth folk the story of hard times is a myth.

SIGNAL WORM DRIVEN MOTOR TRUCKS

From Points of Economy, Cost, Maintenance and Efficiency

A Convincing Testimonial

L. W. ROGERS COMPANY

GROCCERS AND COFFEE ROASTERS

ATLANTA, GA Jan. 23, 1915

Mr. G. C. Dugas,
Sou. Distributor Signal Motor Truck Co., Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:

Pursuant to our conversation of this date regarding the Signal Motor Trucks I recently purchased from you, I wish to confirm same by letter, and to state my reasons for doing so.

Five years ago we began using what was then known as power wagons. We have used several makes, but the experience has proved costly to us. However, we now feel that the motor truck has passed through the experimental stage, and in keeping abreast of the times, we feel that the time has come when we must adopt the new era of transportation--standardized motor trucks.

This decision has brought to our attention many demonstrations of the leading trucks now on the market. We have given careful attention to the claims of all, but have finally decided to adopt the Signal Worm-Driven Motor Truck because in our opinion it is the best truck on the market. We reached this decision after a careful estimate of the cost of maintenance and operation of your truck, figuring the cost to us per ton to deliver and stock our fifty-four stores. This cost has been reduced to a minimum and will assist us to further reduce our already reduced prices to our patrons.

We believe your truck gives the greatest dollar-for-dollar value of any offered on the market. We purchased one of your ton trucks with a view of giving it about six months test, and then purchase another, but owing to the remarkable saving in delivery cost, though having used your truck only a short time, you are hereby authorized to enter our order for a one and one-half ton truck for immediate delivery.

I wish to thank you for the prompt manner in which you handle our business. It will give me pleasure to answer any and all inquiries from the trade pertaining to Signal trucks.

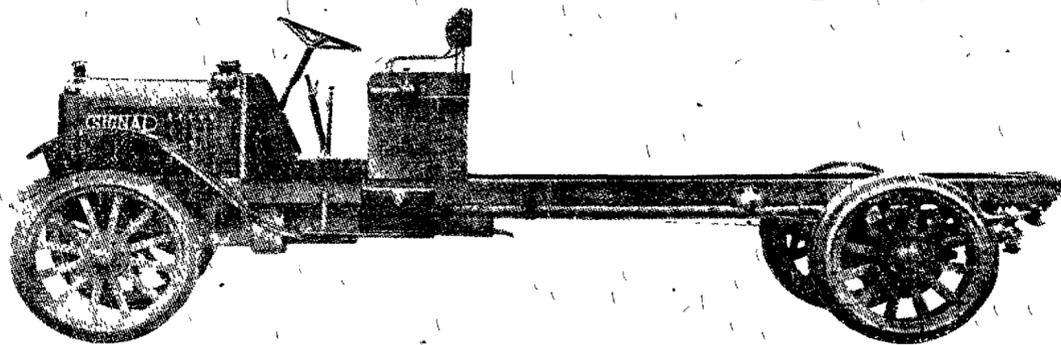

Yours very truly,
L. W. ROGERS CO.

General Manager.

P. S.--Please equip above truck with Firestone Tires.

It Behooves all First Class Automobile Dealers to Investigate the Merits of the Signal Truck. Some Valuable Territory NOW Open.

THIS TRUCK IS A BUSINESS BUILDER

This is a mighty important factor to the dealer who is building for permanence. It is more important than immediate profits. A truck may sell because of low price or some fancied advantage only to fall down in the tests of hard usage. The immediate profits are lost in giving free service and repairs while the task of living down the hard feelings and bad reputation is even more costly. There is no such danger with the SIGNAL. It is a different kind of truck. It is not only built to sell, but is also built to serve. That is important, for a truck that serves faithfully and well is one that creates business for you. Every one on the road is a moving advertisement of SIGNAL quality and efficiency. This is mighty valuable, and the records these trucks make serve to bring new business to your doors. Therefore, a SIGNAL agency means a signal success. Why is the SIGNAL so successful? First of all--because it is built right. The standard parts used are typical of the construction throughout. Such names as Timken Axles and Bearings, Continental Motor, Brown-Lipe Transmission, Detroit Springs, Timken-David Brown Worm-Drive Rear Axle, Gemmer Steering Gear, Eisemann Magneto, Stromberg Carburetor tell an indisputable story of quality. Then the capacities--one ton and one and one-half ton, two ton and three ton--are the easiest to sell. They have the widest application to delivery conditions. The worm-drive and two lengths of wheelbase meet practically all requirements. The SIGNAL sells because its quality and value are readily apparent and its adaptability is the greatest. It builds business because it gives such service that repeat orders and new business are inevitable. The agency for such a truck is profitable now and in the future. Surely you are sufficiently interested to write us now asking for proof. Write for agency proposition and catalogue.

DRUID HILLS GOLF.

Two Flights Filled Saturday. Additional Tourney Planned.

Although it was announced at noon that the golf tournament scheduled for Druid Hills had been called off, there were forty-eight golfers at the club ready to start play, and the tournament committee decided to hold the tourney and the players started out in the qualifying round.

All those who desire to play in a tournament can qualify and play in a separate tournament of their own. This includes those players who failed to turn in cards yesterday afternoon. The same rules will prevail in the additional tournament as in the other.

It requires one golf ball as entry fee. The winner in each flight, either tournament or individual, will receive ten golf balls, while the runner-up will receive six.

Walter E. Browne made the low qualifying score with a gross 88. The pairings in the two flights and the handicaps of the players are as follows. Players who qualify today will be paired to the pairings listed below:

- First Flight.
- W. F. Spalding (11) v. J. O. Smith (14).
 - C. W. Baldwin (16) v. A. Davidson (12).
 - Dr. J. D. Eby (19) v. R. S. McMichael (15).
 - J. L. Pinksy, Jr. (18) v. Perry Adair (13).
 - Hunter Perry (17) v. Dargatzis (16).
 - Frank Adair (15) v. Forrest Adair, Jr. (19).
- Second Flight.
- Donaldson (12) v. San Dinkins (21).

Athletics Will Have Two Teams Built Around Two Infielders This Spring

Philadelphia, January 23.—The Philadelphia Athletics will not have a strictly yanigan team in their spring practice this year, but will have two nines—one built around Third Baseman Baker and First Baseman McLinn, and the other around Shortstop Barry and Second Baseman LaJoie. Connie Mack's squad will go to Jacksonville, Fla., the training ground, by water, and is due there March 1.

The Baker-McLinn combination will play the Chicago Nationals at Tampa, March 1; at St. Petersburg, March 12 and 13; Louisville, at Lakeland, March 15 and 16; Chicago, at Philadelphia, March 17, 18 and 19; Jacksonville club, at Jacksonville, March 26 and 27.

The Athletics then will come north, playing at Charleston, March 30 and 31; Columbus, April 1; Richmond, April 2 and 3; Raleigh, April 5; Winston-Salem, April 6. The team will play the Philadelphia Nationals at home, April 7 and 8, and will meet the Brooklyn Nationals in Brooklyn, April 12 and 13.

Thomasville Pleased With State League's Action at Its Meeting

Thomasville, Ga., January 23.—(Special.)—Thomasville baseball fans are pleased with the action of the directors of the Georgia State League at American this week and rejoice that it insures ball for Thomasville again this summer.

The selection of Dick Jenison, of Atlanta, as president of the league, also meets with general approval, and the sentiment seems that a man outside of the league will be more acceptable, as he will be entirely unbiased. Mr. Jenison stands high in public estimation here as an all-around baseball man, well known in all points of the state.

The Thomasville association will hold a meeting soon and take steps in regard to arrangements for the coming season. There is much speculation as to who will be chosen manager, and it is generally expected that the position will be offered to "Red" Murch, former second baseman of the Thomasville team. Murch has been in Thomasville for some time, and has engaged in business here, and is quite popular with many of the fans. Of course, however, all meetings of the association is held.

DABNEY CO. TO HANDLE MOTORCYCLE SIDE CARS PAIGE AND MAXWELLS GAINING IN POPULARITY

Well-Known Company Takes New Models Show Reduction in Prices and Improvement in Construction.

Interest in automobile circles has been awakened by the announcement that the W. J. Dabney Implement company, on Forsyth street, has added a line of motor cars to its large line of agricultural implements and farm machinery.

While the company has made no official announcement of the line of cars to be handled, it is learned that it will carry a complete line of Paige and Maxwell cars. Both these makes of cars are well known and popular in this section, and it is expected that the friends of the Dabney company that it will make a splendid success of these agencies.

Elliott Takes Charge of Retail Department of Harley-Davidson

Russell Elliott, who for the last four or five years has been connected with the automobile accessory and sundry line with several of the leading firms in Atlanta, has taken charge of the retail department of the Harley-Davidson Motor company, at 224 Peachtree street.

Mr. Elliott is thoroughly familiar with the motorcycle line, having sold motorcycles ten years ago. He has a thorough and practical knowledge of engines and all mechanical parts. Some years ago when Charles Hamilton, the famous airplane flyer who was killed some years ago, was making flights out at Piedmont park, he was unable to get his machine up in the air on account of engine troubles.

After trying all of the experts in Atlanta, Mr. Elliott was called in by Hamilton, who in a very short time found the trouble and through his expert knowledge, Hamilton was able to make the flights that he had guaranteed to make, driving his machine from Piedmont park, circling up as far as the Candler building and back again.

Mr. Elliott invites all his friends in the automobile and accessory line and others who have called on him here to come to see him at his new place. Motorcycle riders will find in Mr. Elliott one who can answer their questions or every difficult problem regarding motorcycles.

ENGLAND LIFTS BAN ON EXPORTING RUBBER

There have been many reports as to the effect of England's crude rubber embargo on tire manufacturers and users, and consequently on the whole automobile business. Now that the embargo has been lifted on all American concerns who comply with Great Britain's requirements, the following statement of interest in the trade is given out by W. Litchfield, factory manager of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company:

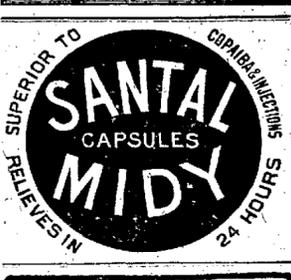

"The rubber embargo by Great Britain, after being in force for nearly two months, has been raised on all concerns who have guaranteed not to re-export rubber to the enemies of Great Britain. The Goodyear Tire and Rubber company has not been inconvenienced by this embargo. Anticipating possible disturbances, owing to the war, we endeavored to carry larger stocks than usual, and have had more rubber in our factory at Akron during the embargo than we ever had before.

"The factory production for the month of November was 20 per cent greater than last November, and the factory production for December was 33 per cent greater than last December. During the embargo our rubber has been coming into Canada and stored in Toronto, and we now have more than 100 tons of crude plantation rubber in storage there, which we are making arrangements to have shipped to us at once, and which will arrive long before our present supply in Akron is exhausted."

Next this means that while the embargo held potential dangers for crude rubber consumers and later for our manufacturers and users, those dangers have been avoided. It is not likely that there will now be any advance in tire prices, and crude rubber prices are dropping gradually back in the direction of their level at the beginning of the war. The price of crude had almost doubled during the two months

You Can Now Treat This Trouble in Your Own Home and Get Relief at Once.

How the Remedy for Catarrh Was Discovered.

THIS terrible disease has raged unchecked for years simply because symptoms have been treated while the cause of the trouble has been left to circulate in the blood, and bring the disease back as fast as local treatments could relieve it.

C. E. Gauss, who experimented for years on a treatment for Catarrh, found that after perfecting a balm that relieved the nose and throat troubles quickly, he could not prevent the trouble beginning all over again.

On test cases, he could completely remove all signs of Catarrh from nose and throat, but in a few weeks they were back.

Removes the Cause and Immediately Gives Relief to the Nose and Throat

Reese Jones, of Scranton, Penn., says that after trying many other treatments, he used this new method and his nose is now clear and free from all trouble. The treatment is worth its weight in gold.

Goes to the Root of Stopped-up noses

Constant "frog-in-the-throat" Nasal discharges Sneezing and spitting Spitting at night Bad breath Frequent colds Difficult breathing Smothering sensation in dreams Sudden fits of sneezing Dry mucous membrane and any of the other symptoms that indicate approaching or present catarrh.

Atlanta Actress Dreams, and Her Dreams Come True; Now She Wishes For Simple Life, or Thinks That Is What She Wishes

Quaint Philosophy Marked Life Of "Mrs. Wiggs" of Newton County

Two striking pictures of Claire Rochester, the Atlanta girl who has made good on the vaudeville stage, and a flash-light of Hammerstein's theater in New York, showing Rochester and Houdini sharing honors in the electric light advertisement.

By Britt Craig.

When Claire Rochester ran away from home four years ago she had an undying dream of the stage, 15 cents and a hole showing in her stocking. Since that time she has had as many ups and downs as an elevator box.

Last week she came back to her home town in the splendor of a stage favorite whose name is emblazoned in incandescents all the way from Broadway to Kamehatcha. Fame and fortune are no longer mere dreams, but tangible treasures. Following in wealth and popularity, she came back to entertain and smile upon those of her home town who had snubbed and ridiculed her.

They patronized her now, where, in her girlhood, they had lifted noses and turned proud backs.

But, with all this—and even more—Claire is a poor, unhappy girl. She has all on earth she wants. And that's just why she's blue. She can't find anything else to want.

Search as she might, she can't find anything else to want. Money? Just another of it? Fame? Her picture adorns the covers of the season's latest songs lists, and her name goes into the electric display "out front." Love? The most devoted husband on earth!

NOW, ISN'T CLAIRE TO BE PITIED.

What is there left for poor, unhappy Claire?

It was nothing but a fanciful dream of a life before the footlights that lifted Claire Rochester from the obscurity of an awkward, impudent waif through years of extremely disheartening vicissitudes to the limelight of stage popularity.

"Yet they say I'm lucky," she observes. "Well, it's about time luck was breaking."

Up until a year ago the ambitious Claire had received nothing but cuffs and rebuffs from a heartless world and profession that seemed to offer her naught but discouragement and cruelty. There is none but the thorny road to success. Claire Rochester traveled every inch of that road and didn't miss a thorn.

Six years ago she left school. Six months later she took a business course and tried to be a stenographer. She wasn't cut out for a stenographer, and three different employers told her so in words unmistakable. She took to manufacturing, but threw her job in her boss' face when he insisted that she refrain from slapping the face of "gentlemen" customers who exerted wiles and flattery to cajole her out to dinner.

A SLIP OF A GIRL, SHE SLIPPED AWAY.

She was but a mere slip of a girl, somewhere along seventeen, when the footlight grim assailed her. She would steal away from home and coax nickels from friends to go to the movies. Howard Wimburn, organist, and an institution in Atlanta's theatrical world, used to chase her away from his theater with the advice to go home and put some paint on her face to hide the freckles.

The older she grew the keener became her ambition for the stage. She would sit for hours in a cheap vaudeville theater, doling the fat and painted hussies who shouted songs and couldn't make their feet behave. Her mother, Mrs. John Rochester, who now lives on Myrtle street, looked with acute disfavor upon the daughter's ambitions.

The more mother Rochester sought to dissuade the more truant Claire would slip away from home. It all summed up to one thing, during the summer of 1910, when the girl, after having pleaded with Manager Ed Wall, of the Vaudeville theater, for days to permit her to go on amateur night, was permitted to try out.

She bravely went behind the scenes and borrowed a soubrette's ballet dress and silk stockings from one of the performers. The stockings were too short for the borrowed bloomers. The amateur had to wrap ferny red ribbon around the intervening nudeness. The moment she stepped upon the stage, her act got a rousing laugh, but it wasn't the sort the house management required.

THAT NEW, CHEERFUL MELODY, "SILVER THREADS."

She started to sing "Silver Threads Among the Gold" and was leading some three or four notes ahead of the orchestra, when frantic Manager Wall ran back from the box office and instructed his stage carpenter to ring down the curtain in relief of a suffering audience.

However severely this experience disrupted her belief that she could sing and narrow alley that led to the stage door, quite undaunted and still clinging to her dreams of the mimic world, neither were they dispelled by the whipping she received at home that night.

For Claire still thought that the big laugh she got as she stepped before the footlights was legitimate appreciation. Perhaps, if there had been no loud guffawing in the Vaudeville that night, vaudeville would be without Claire Rochester today and some barber shop would be graced with her beauty behind the manœuvre table.

She bundled a handkerchief and petticoat in an old handbag, tried to darn the hole in her stocking, and stole from home the next morning. She went to Birmingham. There, on a side street, "The Merry Maids of Mirth," composed of several girls, several women and an avalanche of indebtedness, held the boards in a 10, 20, 30 house.

Claire told the brusque manager that she had been in the chorus for years, and when it came to a question of experience—well, she was there with dead loads of it. She got a job at $8 per and went to work. When pay day came around, she urged the box office to just give her $3 so she could pay living expenses, and keep the rest to prevent her from spending it all.

PRESTO! AND CLAIRE'S SAVINGS WERE GONE.

For eight weeks thrifty Claire saved $5 and scamped along on $3. The eighth week the show closed. She had the price of four Irish stews and a box of bannings. She went to the box office. The treasurer was gone, the manager, too. Claire wasn't the only one in search of them. Two deputy sheriffs joined her on the trail.

Three days later found her hungry and penniless. This was but the beginning of her hardships. She eventually landed in a moving picture where she sang fifteen songs a day. She saved money enough to go to Columbus, Miss., and join the chorus of a cheap musical comedy. Two weeks and the show disbanded. She was penniless again.

From then until the time she landed, broke, in New York, her life was one uninterupted round of vicissitudes. Singing her way in moving picture houses—joining the Salvation army in one town—and staying herself until she was pinched and haggard, she reached Bowling Green, Ky., where she signed up for the double job of singing in the chorus and acting as maid to the leading lady.

She made a better maid than chorus girl, and she was later assigned wholly to that job. When "The Flower of the Branch" disbanded in New York, she was as penniless as ever. Her belief that she was stage material, matter not how severely disputed by her series of failures, and her dream of fame before the footlights were the only forces that held out staying hands when she wandered along East river contemplating its muddy depths for success.

On her way uptown—it was late and Broadway was alive with pleasure hunters—she passed an obscure cabaret, from which came the noise of a singer badly off key. The desperate girl resolved to make one more stab at work. She strode boldly into the stuffy restaurant, and, making her way through the diners, reached the side of the singer. She joined in the chorus and there her wild hopes of bread and employment into her voice.

HER VOICE A SCREAM IN A CABARET.

The proprietor threw up his hands in astonishment, but his patrons threw theirs together in appreciation, and the regular singer gave way to the newcomer. She responded to two encores, then asked for the manager.

"Think you can hire me?" she asked.

"Yes, at $10 per, he answered. Whereupon she signed up.

The manager of Churchill's restaurant, casting about for cabaret material, happened upon the girl and offered her $5 more to sing in his cafe. All this was less than two years ago.

When the cabaret craze was at its height, the reform element in civic circles grew perturbed over the moral effect of these varied temples of food and song. A committee of fourteen, composed of clergymen, laymen and lawyers, was appointed to investigate the cabarets of New York.

On that investigating body was Carl Helm, a young Columbia law graduate but shortly out of college, whose wealthy parents and antecedents have had their names in the city directory of Tacoma, Wash., ever since there was a directory to hold them.

Ambitiously upon his path of reform, Young Helm and his colleagues invaded Churchill's and sat at Churchill tables to partake of Churchill food and entertainment whilst they decided whether or no Mr. Churchill's style was a credit or discredit to circumspect Broadway's morals. Claire Rochester took particular pains to sing her sweetest songs.

ROMANCE COMES A-PROBING ALONG.

One was an Irish ballad which particularly pleased the Columbia graduate. When she had left the floor after responding to two encores, he followed her to the tiny dressing room near the kitchen where, in the manner of investigators ever since the first grand jury was organized, he asked her many questions.

"You oughtn't to be singing in these places," he told her.

"No," she replied sardonically. "And my father ought to have been a millionaire."

"I'm going to get you a good job," he said.

"Well, you'd better introduce me to it. I wouldn't recognize it."

"Will you have lunch with me tomorrow?"

"Yes, if you'll go where there isn't a piano and singing."

The law graduate showed up for lunch and got sentimental, which vexed the struggling girl. A month elapsed and she saw nothing of him. He had promised to get her a real job. She had about forgotten him—and would have forgotten, had it not been that he had brown eyes, good language and a courtly style with women.

During this time she went to the noted Willie Hammerstein and told him she wanted work.

"Why, you little cabaret upstart," he answered, "how could I do with you in my theater—put you to scrubbing floors?"

This made her mad, and she retorted: "Just for that, I'll see to it that some day you plaster my name all over the front of your cheap theater."

Many things happened in the months that ensued. Less than two months ago, the United Booking offices gave her a week in Hammerstein's famous house, the ultima thule of all vaudeville performers. She opened her mitts away down on the bill in an obscure position, that served only to keep her out of the limelight while the audience was getting seated.

INCANDESCENTLY HANDCUFFED, SHE AND HOUDINI.

That night they gave her a spot in the enviable center of the Hammerstein bill and illuminated Broadway and Forty-second with her name in incandescents together with the only electric display "out front"—Houdini's Impishly, she photographed it and mailed

Passing of Picturesque Old Woman Mourned by Old and Young Alike.

By Wightman F. Melton.

The recent death of Miss Lucy McWaters, 82 years old, marks the passing of a simple life and a pure soul—the "Mrs. Wiggs" of Newton county.

Some sixty years ago, when the McWaters family settled just above Oxford, there were, including a few slaves, twenty-one people to occupy the four-roomed house—in which "Miss Lucy" died—and a little "lean to," or shed room.

Miss Lucy was well advanced in years before she married. Her husband drank and was otherwise disagreeable. One morning he announced that he was going to leave her. "I give you a most cordial welcome to depart, for I think I can enjoy my diet without you," was the only good-by she said. A few years later she heard that her husband was dead. Immediately she assumed her maiden name, saying, "I don't want no dead man's name hanging onto me."

With advancing years, Miss Lucy became almost dependent. The rent from her little farm, $50 a year, was supplemented with funds from the treasury of the Oxford Woman's Home Mission society. Individual friends in Oxford also took an interest in the welfare of the good old woman.

HER PRAYER IS ANSWERED.

Miss Lucy often said: "When I was left alone, I prayed to God to raise up friends for me in my old age, but I didn't know He was going to overdo it." Another prayer of hers was that she might be able to bake the last "pone o' bread" she ate. This prayer was also answered. Neighbors found her paralyzed at her dinner table.

For a long while Miss Lucy's friends could not induce her to visit them in Oxford. She was afraid their manner of life was so different from hers that she would feel uncomfortable. Finally she tried it. The minute she stepped inside Miss Lynn Branham's home, she exclaimed, "Why, good lady, I feel entirely destitute of crampness."

The ice broken, this unique character afterward visited in Oxford frequently. Once she was induced to attend a reception of the Kil Kare club. When asked how she enjoyed the reception, she replied, "Agreeable to my ignorance, good lady, the diet was fine, but I couldn't get the little green wads." (She tried only one olive.)

After the Allen Memorial church was completed, Miss Lucy attended a service, accompanied by a carpenter and a blacksmith, and rigged up the device. A week later, when she went back, wire, dums and pulleys and said, almost tearfully, "Good lady, I couldn't enjoy my diet till I first went down to the spring and looked at the trees as I have done early every morning for so many years."

WHY, SHE NEVER LIKED CHICKEN.

Miss Lucy firmly believed that God does not give a person a taste for that which cannot be afforded. For that reason she never cared for chicken.

It had well Miss Lucy directs that her little farm of 90 acres be sold, one-half the money sent to a nephew, Key McWaters, in Atlanta, and the other half administered by the missionary society of Oxford, as a fund to help others who may be in need. One of the last things she was heard to say was, "I would have been diminished, long ago, if it hadn't been for the good ladies of Oxford."

Miss Lucy's home was the mecca, especially in springtime, of the Emory boys and the Oxford girls. If a boy seemed to be more interested in one girl than others, Miss Lucy's quick eye detected it, and that pair was called by her, "Jacob and Rachel."

A former Emory student, Edward G. Mackay, native of Belfast, Ireland, and now professor of English, in Birmingham college, Birmingham, Ala., has written the following lines in memory of Miss Lucy:

MRS. LUCY McWATERS, The "Mrs. Wiggs" of Newton county.

To "Miss Lucy,"
Like beads of pearls fall on winter
So shone thy faith on dreary solitude.
As glowing rays of rosy light amid morn,
Thy hope's pure flame amid misty
Thy life was thus a volume largely
In words of gold for those who understood
Though hard thy lot, though full thy Days of toil,
In patience didst thou bow to bear
The yoke,
If poverty thy portion would depose,
Thy spirit never sank beneath the stroke,
If wounded sore by foolish, faithless
love,
At higher, purer love thou didst invoice,
Thy greatest joy in life's declining years,
To greet the friends who sought thy humble roof,
And bless their shadows and employ with tears
Their quick return as friendship's kindly proof,
The very bushes would their presence wish,
And why should friends for long remain aloof?
Thy prayer was over for the heavenly home,
When once the earthly, pilgrim way was o'er,
"Life's Railway" was for all who tread night,
Outside the fold's inviting, friendly
door,
"The good old-fashioned way" was always sweet
When friends around thy spotless hearth did meet.
And glad are we, who knew thy thorny
way,
Some flowers were there whose perfume
sweet did bleed
With thy last years, and often leads to
A song of gladness to its dusk end,
The Lord a solace gives to those who mourn,

Drawing Room Recital

The ideal drawing room recital found expression in Mrs. W. J. Morrison's appearance last week before the Sunday Night club at the Georgian Terrace.

Her program, one of musical dignity, was planned to excite a variety of interest, rather than to hold the sustained concentration necessary to the more abstruse concert selection, while the intimate graciousness of the artist, which placed her hearers at once in touch with the charm of the player, as well as of her work, was similarly fitted to the "drawing room" character of the occasion.

A final detail, completing the truth of the picture, was the seating of the audience in informal groups, which filled the spacious lounge room, instead of in stiff concert rows.

Mrs. Morrison, in her first number, a Gigue by Bach, at once established confidence and quickened the interest in whatever she might do. Definite in tone and phrasing, authoritative in style, the Gigue was a compelling statement of first principles, and an illuminating introduction of the player, which made an impression not to be altered, but only amplified, by the rest of her program.

An Albumblatt by Spangenberg in reminiscent mood showed the purposeful side of Mrs. Morrison's art, which was repeated in the beautiful Wagon by Schumann, its indeterminate charm given delightful translation.

The "Black Key" study by Chopin, "Etincelles" by Mozakowski, truly a sparkling bit of musical fire, and a sweeping, buoyant performance of the Rigaudon by Raff, were the program numbers, and for encores Mrs. Morrison pictured in graphic style Liszt's "Nightingale" and "Tschakowsky's "Trotka" (Sleigh Ride).

Selections by the Terrace orchestra, notably from "Tosca" and "Lohengrin," completed a brilliant evening of music.

MID-WINTER SONG HITS. Variety in February Offering of Disc Records.

The announcement of records by Madame Elena de Cisneros, an American by birth and native of the Empire State, is certain to interest the American music public. Madame Cisneros has the proud distinction of being the first American woman to make her debut in the Metropolitan Opera house without musical training abroad. She is a mezzo-soprano of extraordinary talent. Her repertoire, in French, German and Italian, comprises fifty-two operas, which is in itself unique. When one considers the remarkable range of voice—from low G to C sharp in it—the diversity of roles she may sing gives her a covetable advantage.

Morgan Kingston, the Welsh tenor, who has just closed his operatic season, and who, it is understood, will shortly appear in concert, sings two popular ballads. One of them, Tennyson's "Come Into the Garden, Maud," with marking by the composer of "The Bohemian Girl"—Michael William Balfe—needs no further recommendation. Coupled with this is Tosca's "Parted."

Master Minolta Funes, the 12-year-old pianist, who has gained conspicuous recognition on both sides of the water, has been engaged by the Columbia company. His first record comprising "Ariquiné" and "The Whispering Wind," by Wolcott-haupt.

The list of recorded selections for the month of February, embrace many mid-winter song hits. "Love Moon," from Franz Carl's "Chun-Chun," as presented by Montgomery and Stone in the big Broadway success, is to be found here. Also "When You're Away," from "The Only Girl," Victor Herbert's latest triumph and many other popular songs of the season.

There is also listed a particularly pleasing record by the Wellesley College Glee club.

Not the least important, though, as lighter vein are the six popular dance records.

THE ETERNAL SNARL.

Atlanta has staged its annual snarl, as to finances and improvements and maintenance, the effect of which reaches into every home in the city.

The finance sheet is again deadlocked. Even when it is untangled, after a liberal use of the ax, no one will be satisfied.

The departments and institutions do not know where they stand or what to expect. Each city interest is struggling over the city's money like dogs over a small bone.

It is the old story over again of up the hill and down again.

All for what? At rock bottom, because of the effete, obsolete and inadequate system under which the city of Atlanta is administered—a system good enough thirty years ago, but causing the city to strain and almost burst at the belt today.

No private business with Atlanta's resources could for a week escape bankruptcy under the system that rides us like the old man of the sea. No city of Atlanta's importance in the country would for a month tolerate an archaic system that paralyzes progress and puts a penalty on civic initiative.

The amazing paradox is that not one intelligent man in Atlanta defends the present system.

Even those opposed to the principle of a commission form of government concede that the present charter must be radically amended to bring it to efficiency.

Yet—nothing is done! With things going from bad to worse, there is a general and hopeless twiddling of thumbs.

The school system having reached an impasse, congestion threatening its efficiency, hardly a feeble finger is lifted to avert the calamity. Not one new school-house has been built in two years, a confession of stagnation not witnessed in four decades. Yet there is running round in circles, ermination and re-ermination, and nothing—DONE!

If Atlanta were intrinsically poverty-stricken the lapses might be understood.

But for its size and assets and liabilities, Atlanta is the richest city on the American continent. It is fully able to keep abreast of the times. And yet we toddle along with a governmental system that would be the derision of a tank town.

Municipally, we advertise to the country that we are tied to the chariot wheels of stagnation and paralysis.

Measured by past achievements and civic enterprise in other directions, Atlanta ought to be the least stagnant, the most alert municipality for its size on the continent.

That is the inexplicable paradox of our present miserable administrative system.

Everyone in Atlanta knows the administrative system is extravagant and inefficient. As it stands it has not one defender.

Yet Atlanta, the "Atlanta spirit" in full knowledge of these facts and their penalties, tolerates their continuance, takes no definite steps toward improvement.

Let us have an end of this inaction! Let us get together and find some way out of the jungle of the inefficient system that paralyzes departments and institutions, fosters wrangling and threatens stagnation.

Let us find a plan that makes for efficiency, that cuts out lost motion and extravagance in administration.

Let us put Atlanta upon a twentieth-century basis of administrative efficiency.

Let us make the job non-partisan, for the present system is non-partisan in its disastrous effects.

Let us have a quick rebaptism of the Atlanta spirit that will find a way to clear away the debris that now clutters the city's advancement and set the signals for an era of progress never equalled in Atlanta's history.

Let us throw off the "Old-Man-of-the-Sea!"

A STRIKING SPEECH.

"Does anyone ever believe that Lincoln would have signed a paper (the emancipation proclamation) in which he could have foreseen such a saturnalia of wickedness as reigned over the south during the days of reconstruction; a period that every man who remembers it would blot out if he could? No!"

That statement does not come from a southern white man, a northern white man or an unbiased historian. It comes from a—negro, Dr. Wilkins, of Little Rock, Ark., and it is only a part of a remarkable Emancipation Day address he made at that city. So amazing is the address and so far in advance of his race is the viewpoint of this negro, that The Constitution reproduces a liberal summary of the address on this page. It is healthful reading for every negro, and for every white man in America. If ever the truth was spoken, without fear of consequences, it was by this courageous negro at Little Rock.

Dr. Wilkins reviews with accuracy the conditions immediately following the close of the war. He analyzes the horrors of reconstruction. He scathingly castigates and carpetbag governments as the foes of the negro no less than the white man. He shows that the alien governments here set up set the negro's best friends against him, a handicap from which he is but now recovering. He shows how the better class of whites liberally helped the starting negro after the war. He declares what is obvious truth, that emancipation did not mean freedom, but that it meant for the negro a slavery worse than that which had prevailed before the civil war.

Here is another of his striking sentences:

Let us first free the white man from the impressions we made on him under the vicious leadership of false friends, and then we may hope for him to free us from the bonds which our own hands have welded about our feet. The day the viewpoint of this clear-visioned negro becomes universal throughout his race will mark the genuine "emancipation" of his people.

THE SAME OLD DISGRACE.

Dr. E. Eston Jones, deputy commissioner of fisheries, has made a report regarding the treatment of Alaskan natives that ought to galvanize the conscience of every white voter in this country, irrespective of party. His story is a repetition of the old disgraceful debauching of the Indians in the early days, the white settlers and traders passing on to the natives all the vices and none of the virtues of the Caucasian race.

Dr. Jones lays special stress upon the violation of the liquor laws as a means to quick wealth and quick appeal to the untrained appetites of the aborigines. The American familiar with the manner in which the Indian race has literally been decimated by alcohol and unmentionable diseases, through the connivance of vicious whites, will find familiar chapters in the recitals of Dr. Jones.

He says it is a common occurrence for the homes of the natives to be violated by white settlers, and that unless stern repressive measures are adopted it will not be long before the native tribes disappear from the face of the earth, or become worthless mongrels.

The United States has been more remiss than any other colonizing nation in dealing with its alien subjects. The European powers are guilty of their share of debauching and exploiting, but after a season rapacity and overreaching were scourged into decency. England's abandonment of the opium traffic at tremendous loss is an example.

It seems that in Alaska the United States has learned no lessons as to the obligation of the superior power, and there are rumors that comparable abuses exist toward the Indians even on the reservations.

It is to be hoped congress will make a thorough investigation and spare no pains to apply a remedy. We are about to project a governmental railway through Alaska to develop the wonderful resources of that territory. It would be a lasting shame if this monument to commercialism were marred by brutal disregard of humanitarianism and Christianity.

GOETHALS' GOOD WORK.

In these days when so many economic and industrial crimes are being committed in the name of "scientific efficiency," it is refreshing to encounter an individual who can teach the efficiency experts, giving them cards and spades, and making no noise about it. It is Colonel Goethals we have in mind, and his latest exploit entitles him to be christened the leading efficiency engineer of the country, unconscious of the distinction and getting things done without disorganization and grumbling, which not many of his professional efficiency rivals can do. He told a congressional committee the other day that he could name no definite day on which the American naval armada could safely pass through the canal. A professional efficiency engineer would have prophesied the time to the minute and befuddled the congressmen with his explanations if his calculations went awry. Not so Goethals. He told the exact truth and he will have no embarrassing explanations to make if the fleets cannot negotiate the canal.

Goethals has followed the same creed of unostentatious efficiency throughout his connection with this big enterprise. When he went in there he steered clear of flashy and spectacular statements. The canal might or might not be completed on a certain date. The "slides" might or might not be dredged away in a given time. He threw around his work no air of mystery, such as some of our industrial charlatans delight in doing. He was just a plain wonder-worker, with zeal, diplomacy, a realization of the dimensions of the job ahead and determination to conquer them.

He completed the canal ahead of scheduled time, with the humblest one of the workers willing to swear by him. How he did it all and fenced off the politicians is another secret which not even the kinglyness of the professional efficiency "experts" could teach him.

THE NEGRO AND THE GUN.

In an address at Tuskegee the other day, Booker Washington declared he knew many negroes who spent more money on pistols than on the education of their children. Coming from such a source, this statement ought to inspire serious reflection among the more responsible leaders of negro sentiment.

As between the white man who packs a gun in violation of law and the negro who does so, there is little to choose, save that the white man, inheriting centuries of respect for law and order, should know better.

That said, it remains that the negro, by reason of the position he occupies in the social fabric and his shortcomings in other directions, is even more on probation in the matter of law and order than the white man. When a white bully runs amuck and kills someone or shoots up a settlement, society does not tend to shrug its shoulders as though that were a characteristic of his race. On the other hand, the vicious negro, for reasons it is needless to enumerate, damages in the minds of the prejudiced the members of his whole race.

On the educational side, the school that is operated for the negro and the white man is tragically needed in the south today. There are certain well-defined fields open to the negro, and for which he is obviously fitted. Domestic service, farm labor, a certain species of skilled labor offer rich rewards to the negro willing to work to attain them. But until those responsible for the education of the negro realize that it is impossible to educate from the top, and that work must begin from the bottom as well, the negro educational problem will not be on the way to solution. It is well enough to educate the exceptional negro. But it is the typical negro, the average negro, that is today most in need of help in the way of manual, mental and spiritual training.

A HOME-LIVING STATE.

The federal department of agriculture reports, after nation-wide investigation, that fifty farmers' families living in Troup and Meriwether counties, Georgia, come nearer being absolutely self-supporting than any similar number in any similar territory in the United States. The facts that exact book-keeping was kept in this procedure, and that the competition covered the entire country, reflects especial credit on these thrifty inhabitants of Troup and Meriwether.

The real significance, however, of the government analysis is the vista of possibilities it opens up for every county in Georgia. It is not detracting anything from the energy or enterprise of the inhabitants of these two western Georgia counties to say that climatic and soil conditions there prevailing are reproduced virtually in every county in Georgia.

In other words, given the proper incentive and the proper first aid, there is no reason why every farmer in Georgia should not be almost entirely self-supporting. In every county from the Chattahoochee to the sea, and from the Florida to the Tennessee line, the counties can produce enough grain and cattle, vegetable and poultry products not only to sustain life the year round, but also to produce an export surplus.

In counties where all-cotton has long been the fetish, and there are still too many of them in Georgia, despite the diversification propaganda, the soil also adapts itself amply to the production of food crops. The best part of the game of living at home is that it builds up the land, while the farmer who single-shots on cotton year after year either exhausts the fertility of the soil, or runs up a ururious bill for fertilizer.

The farmer who owns his farm is, to an extent, in enjoyment of a handicap over the tenant farmer, even though the former must pay a certain toll to the banker. If, therefore, every county in the state is ultimately to become self-supporting, and that is by no means an illusory hope, it is the banker and merchant that must develop breadth, foresight and tolerance, as well as the farmer. The war with Europe gives every one a chance to break away from ancient tradition.

Another reason of the war kings for barring intoxicants is that war doesn't need their help in raising it.

London, looking up for Zeppelins, is only half-wise. Digging deep seems safer.

Don't be a New Year neutral. Keep any good resolution with a forward swing to it.

Considering the rush to the door, prosperity must always have the right ring.

The Dacia is still afloat, but the racket she has raised is certain to make her go down in History.

The song of "The open sea—the blue, the fresh, the ever free" was written before the ship hold-up business came on.

They say the Zeppelins look so much like clouds it's hard to distinguish them from thunderstorms.

WOUNDED SOLDIERS HAD MERRY XMAS

Miss Lillie Hill, of Georgia, Writes of Experiences in Paris.

(From The Savannah News.) How the refugees and wounded soldiers were provided a merry Christmas in Paris is told in a very interesting letter just received by Mrs. George J. Baldwin from Miss Lillie Hill, formerly of Savannah, but who is now in the Federal Hospital in the "Ambulance of the American Hospital of Paris."

The letter is as follows: "The 24th was the most wonderful Christmas day of my life. The spirit of Christmas was everywhere, and when I arrived at the Ambulance at 8 o'clock a. m. I found holly, mistletoe and decorations, and at 10 o'clock the soldiers streamed in from the different wards and received their gifts. A beautiful Christmas dinner was prepared. Each man got a stocking full of goodies and a very nice present. The English received in addition to their gifts from King George, Queen Mary and the Princess May, all of which pleased them greatly and interested us in the very friendly way in which the boxes were packed and delivered.

A Motley Crew. "Such a motley crew were these soldiers—Singulars, Arabs, Scotch, Irish, English and French. Some were brought in on stretchers, many were wounded and led about in and out of the ward. They were all bandaged in every conceivable way, crutches, slings and steel braces, yet each man, but had smile, steady and most grateful and hearty thank you. But for us beholders the tears, and even the sobbing, were very touching for many of these men had come very near death after their entrance into the hospital, and we have all learned to respect every one of them. The two blind men were the recipients of much attention. We all tried for the first time to understand the Frenches, the soldiers waiting for the help which, perhaps, never came and the soldiers lying alone on the beds.

"After the girls were distributed a well-trained choir of men and boys walked through the halls singing our familiar Christmas carols. The Frenches were singing, a star in the grand opera, sang 'The Marseillaise,' 'Carmen,' 'It's a Long Way to Tipperary,' 'Your King and Country Needs You,' etc.

A Dog Hero. "After the exercises were over I went up to ward 247 to see a soldier who had just been decorated with the Médaille Militaire, the highest decoration given to a soldier. He went twice into the German line to save life, the first time to get his comrade and the second time to pick up his officer. Although dreadfully wounded himself, he succeeded in placing his officer in safety. The medal is a little piece of metal, and yesterday, at the simple little ceremony, the mother and sister of the soldier, who were in the ward, took the rough, work-worn hands of the wounded soldier.

"One of our very nicest hospital stories is that of the dog who saved his master's life, and we are the proud and happy possessors of both the man and the dog, though for a better world. The man is Jacques, serving in Morocco, was recalled to France at the beginning of the war, and his dog, a setter, named 'Pendlar,' followed him to the front. Together these two have been in the trenches and on the battlefield. Yesterday, the dog was seen to be killing nearly every man. Jacques received seven ghastly wounds and was so concerned for his dog that he was almost killed. He was overpowered by the Red Cross people. When he recovered his consciousness he realized that he was alone, a voice or a footstep, but very soon he heard the sniffling of a dog, and recognizing Pendlar's sniffling he called to him. Pendlar was wild with joy and immediately barked to attract attention. The dog barked and so brought Jacques and Pendlar to the hospital. Every morning before 10 o'clock Jacques had to lead into ward 83 to the sixth bed on the left. He gently places his two front paws on his master's feet and then he lies down on his back and there he stays until he is led away again. I saw a photographer taking some pictures of the dog, and when I asked him if he would hold of some I will send you one.

Work is Interesting. "Have I told you that I am now in the dressing or smaller operating room? After Ethel Roosevelt Derby left, the head nurse sent me to the place. The work is tremendously interesting and also instructive. Sometimes we dress the wounds of the men, and each man has anywhere from one to five wounds. The wounds were taken at work the other day, and just as soon as they are on sale I will send you pictures of the work, about the way to spend the money. Miss Nourse, whose address is 80 Rue d'Assas, has helped me to help the Belgians, not in any other person. She is most ingenious with her hands, and always making muffs, chest protectors, and other things. I am making very fascinating dolls, a sort of rag affair to be raffled off for the refugees.

"The Belgians have just called and told me a touching story. Her visit to the Belgian refugees in the Cirque de Paris the other day. The girl of about 7 caught her by the skirt and when she asked her had found her (the child's) mother yet. Of course, Mrs. B. had to say no, and she found that this girl was a very interesting visitor and asked the same question. Isn't it heartrending? Perhaps the mother and child will never meet again.

Who Was Best Friend of Federal Constitution—North or South?

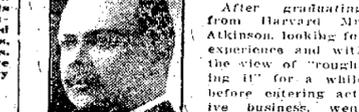

Professor J. A. Richardson of Atlanta, has written the following open letter in reply to an article in The Independent: Editor Independent: The following clipping is from your issue of the 4th instant. It is a very interesting and timely article, touching on most of the constitutional arguments advanced in Richardson's Debate of the South. J. A. Richardson, its 400 pages are concerned with the north, and not the south, was the enemy of the constitution. Sincere patriotism marks a wide field of opinion on this subject. We appreciate the spirit of this criticism, and commend it; but combat the idea that Webster was the friend of the constitution. Our question at issue between the two sections, Webster, himself, being the judge. We intend that this reply shall be of the same excellent character as yours. Perhaps we should not confuse the north for being so thorough as to ask all questions pertaining to that terrible war. It is undisturbed. If we can prove that Webster, after this debate, taught a very different doctrine from that advanced on this momentous occasion, doubtless you will concede that he, at that time, settled the issue to the real character of this government. In January, 1829, six years later than the Webster-Hayne debate, the supreme court of the United States, in the case of the Bank of Augusta v. Earle, rendered a decision which settled the constitutional principles. He then and there argued as follows: "The Sovereignty of States. "But it is argued that though this law of comity exists between independent states, it is not a law of the states, but a law of the union. That argument appears to have been the foundation of the judgment of the court below. "In respect to this law of comity, it is said that the states are not nations; they have no national sovereignty; a sort of residuum of sovereignty is all that remains to them. The national sovereignty, it is said, is conferred on the states by the constitution of the national government. The rest of the municipal sovereignty belongs to the states. Notwithstanding this, the states are not to be taken for the learned judge, who presided in that court, I cannot follow in the train of this argument. I can make no diagram such as that of the partition of national character between the states and general government. The states and institutions are practical, admirable, glorious, blessed creations. Still, they were when created experimental institutions; and if the convention which framed the constitution of the United States had set down certain general definitions of power, such as have been alleged in the argument of the supreme court, we should have believed that in the course of fifty years, which have since elapsed, this government would never have gone into operation. It is not prepared to say that the states have no national sovereignty. The laws of some of the states—such as the laws of Virginia, which have a law of treason, declare that they extend to a foreign nation. Does not the question necessarily arise, when a power is exercised outside the limits of the state, in whom? The law of each state, which exists in all the states, is also the exercise of a great sovereign power. "The term sovereignty does not occur in the constitution at all. The constitution treats the states as states, and, by careful enumeration, declares all the powers that are granted by the states belong to the United States, and all the rest are reserved to the states. The constitution of the states, no state is subject to all the voluntary and customary laws of nations. "Supreme Court's Decision. "Along the line of this inexorable argument the supreme court records its decision. Here it is in part: 'It has, however, been supposed that the rules of comity between nations do not apply to the states of the United States, that they extend to other rights than those which are given by the constitution of the United States; and that the courts of the United States are not at liberty to presume, in the absence of all legislation on the subject, that a state has the power to extend its jurisdiction to other states, as a part of its jurisdiction, or that it acknowledges any right but the right to the territory within its own limits of the United States. The court thinks otherwise. The intimate union of these states, as a part of the same great family, the deep and vital interests which bind them together, should lead us in the absence of proof to the contrary, to presume a greater degree of comity than is usually supposed toward one another, than we should be otherwise authorized to presume between foreign nations. It is not to be supposed that occasionally (as it is supposed to be) of any state requires it to restrict its rule, but that the courts of the United States, in the absence of all legislation on the subject, should presume in what amount could this court require the states to restrict their jurisdiction toward each other the laws of comity in their mutual relations. "We think it well settled, that by the law of comity among nations, a corporation created by one sovereignty is permitted to sue and be sued in the courts of another state; and that the same law of comity prevails among the several sovereignties of this union. In 1851, at Capon Springs, Va., in a speech Webster said: "If the south were to violate any part of the constitution intentionally or systematically, and persisted in so doing year after year, the north would be bound to resist it, if the north deliberately, habitually, and for a purpose, would disregard one part of it, would the south be bound any longer to observe its other obligations? . . . I have not hesitated to say, and repeat, that if the north were to violate any part of the constitution, to carry into effect that part of the constitution which respects the restoration of fugitive slaves, and Congress should not remedy, the south would no longer be bound to observe the compact. A bargain cannot be broken on one side, and still bind the other side." (This contradicts what he said in his inaugural address.) "The great utterances of the immortal Webster made in the course of the election of Lincoln, and twenty-eight after the Webster-Hayne debate. Did not thirteen northern states deliberately and deliberately refuse to carry into effect that part of the constitution? They were so willful and deliberate that they refused to obey laws to that effect. (Curtis' Life of Webster, chapter 37, vol. 2, pp. 518-519.) The signs of another year did not rise and set behind him. It was the time of sober thought and sober utterance. Who can deny the sincerity of the great American statesman, the greatest of American orators? (Richardson's Defense, pp. 83-84.) "When we were told that Webster shall be followed by the representative of an inflamed Massachusetts, that the Webster in his old age, calm and wise in his ripe old face toward the west and his eyes lifted

Brother of Light. By FRANK L. STANTON. EARTH holds that he's built on the higher plan Of the finest gold in the dust that's man. Who even in the dark, with the red thorns rife. Is brother still to the Light of Life: His soul faith-strong where the shadows throng,— Out of his sorrow there shines a song; Light to the gloom of a sad world given When the stars of Hope are stormed from Heaven. SIMPLE to snag, and simple to say That a world-old Trouble's made winter-gray Can smile the wounds of its thorns away. For thorns strike deep when their wrath you reap, And it's God's own mercy that Life can keep Till Grief has sighed its soul to sleep;— But mark the flight of the Thunder-Night When the world swings into a smile of Light! THERE are brave world-builders whose starborn thought The gleam o' the dream of worlds has caught, And they are of wonder, and strength of Might, But the smile of the soul is the living light That visions in sunset's skyward sorrow The flame that'll leap to life tomorrow. Light o' the weary lives that grope Through dark o' the valleys to Hills of Hope. LIGHT of Life on the storm-dark way, That never a war-wild sword can slay! For even with altars in ashes gray The world is better than Madmen say! With Love, a rose in the wreck and strife, And Life's hands reaching out to Life: And lowly roofs 'neath Heaven's starred dome Where even Heaven feels at home! Love's benediction on cot and clod Where the smile of the Soul is the Light of God.

How Harry M. Atkinson Was Brought to Atlanta By the Late S. M. Inman

Incident to the recent death of S. M. Inman it is a fact not generally known, that through Mr. Inman, Harry M. Atkinson, who has contributed so much to the development of Atlanta and the state, became a resident of this city. It happened this way: After graduating from Harvard Mr. Atkinson, looking for a fact not generally known, that it was largely through his father that the great Lindala mills near Rome were built. He was a great believer in the development of the south as the chief source of supply of American cotton mill goods, so he advocated building the Lindala mills.

When young Harry returned from the west he entered, at his father's suggestion, the Amoskeag mills at Manchester, N. H., in order to acquaint himself with the details of cotton mill work.

How They Became Friends.

The firm of S. M. Inman & Company, of Atlanta, is the most prominent of the commission houses of the south, and represented the cotton mills in which Mr. Atkinson's father was largely interested. Most of their cotton was bought through this firm until the late S. M. Inman and George Atkinson became intimately associated in this association ripening into cordial friendship. Incidentally it is of interest to note that Mr. George Atkinson is still living, at 55 and 57 years at the ripe old age of 94 years.

About the time Harry Atkinson entered the Amoskeag mills S. M. Inman was visiting at the home of George Atkinson in Boston, and in casual conversation Mr. Atkinson told Mr. Inman of the fact that his young son had returned from the west and had entered the Amoskeag mills. "Why don't you send him south," said Mr. Inman, "and let him enter my firm? It will be a rare opportunity, and if you will consent I will put him to work at once with the very best of opportunities to 'make good.'"

Come to Atlanta.

No sooner said than done. The suggestion met not only the favorable response of the father but of the son and in a short time Mr. Inman met him on his way to Atlanta. Mr. Inman met him at the depot, took him direct to his home, where Mr. Atkinson was received as kindly as if a relative and made to feel that the Inman home was his home. It was while he was in the cotton business as a cotton sampler and buyer with S. M. Inman & Co. that Harry Atkinson met and married Miss Mary Peters, daughter of Richard Peters, one of Atlanta's earliest pioneers, and a man whose name will ever be electrically associated with the birth and the development of the city. Atkinson "made good" in the cotton business, but one after another his developing ventures were assuming such proportions as to devote his entire time to industrial rather than trade pursuits. He saw the wonderful industrial opportunities offering on every hand and his Boston friends were ready to follow him. He constructed the first real electric lighting system in Atlanta, acquired the several companies then operating street railways of Atlanta and brought these institutions together to make the present electric street railway and lighting system—a fact not generally known, that it was largely through his father that the great Lindala mills near Rome were built. Emancipation Has Been Our Worst Foe, Says Negro Leader

Declares It Alienated the Southern White Man—Address in Little Rock Creates Widespread Comment

Little Rock, Ark., January 23.—(Special.)—In a notable address delivered here to negroes, Dr. Wilkins, a negro leader, told them that in the matter of alienating the southern white man from the negro, emancipation had been the negro's worst foe.

His address is "going the rounds" of the country.

"Among other things, he said: "I say here now, once for all, if we are to celebrate this occasion (Emancipation day), we cannot in any conscience forget those who, in anguish and pain, still held out to us a hand without which we must have perished from the earth—our freedom traders, and Lincoln's proclamation would have had no place except as an epitaph of what might have been.

Celebrate White Man's Kindness. "Let us then celebrate this day, in memory of their helpful friendship and in memory that we had the good sense to prove our worthiness of their benefactions by not resorting to torch and anarchy. And with a blush of shame that anywhere in our beloved southland any negro pretended friends supposed that Lincoln's proclamation ever contemplated the immediate elevation of the ex-slave to place and power that meant the humiliation, not only of the negro's best friends but the destruction of that mutual reliance which was the most important element in the remaining of this southland.

"Does anyone believe that Lincoln would ever have signed a paper in which he could have foreseen such a saturnalia of wickedness as reigned over the south during the days of reconstruction? A period of our history that every man who remembers it would gladly blot out if he could. 'No, it would have been better for that great heart to be still in that noble breast than know that an instrument of his making could be so construed as to produce such a condition in the land of his birth. God was merciful in taking him from such a scene. He never intended it. No! Not that man, whose tender heart held no malice. And like the master of Galilee, he taught love of one's enemies.

Touching Incidents. "Please excuse this seeming digression. I remember well, as if it was but yesterday, when old mistress came into the kitchen and told my mother: 'Richard, let us go free. As free as I am. And you can go.

"She wore a large gray shawl, and as she turned to go I saw tears on her pale cheeks. My mother caught hold of her shawl and with streaming eyes said:

"Miss Jehine, where shall I go? What shall I do? I have nine children and I know no one but you. Why must I leave you? We were all crying now.

"Oh, no, Aunt Jane, she said, 'you need go nowhere. You can stay right here if you wish, and as long as I have a crust of bread you and your children shall eat. I will pay you what wages I can. And so long as I live and you stay, if you suffer I will suffer, too.' More than we! This today with you, moment being enacted in thousands of homes all over this broad land. Those that dark night to every negro then on the plantations of the south, and he stood dumfounded at seeing old mistress in tears.

Denounced Carpetbagger. "And when old master came to his dimming home from the war, he said 'amen' to every word that old mistress had said. And all was well, until the carpetbagger came and, with this damnable preaching and promises, hatched the hell into which the south was plunged from '65 to '76 and out of which the negro came reft of the friendship and help of those whom he loved and who loved him, those whom he scamp led with his ill-gotten gains to suffer quarters and left us to shift the outraged manhood. Today wish you to celebrate the release of our friends from a worse slavery, a more galling yoke, than we ever wore. And let us celebrate by returning to our first and best love, and let us join hearts and hands with them and sing with all the soul:

"I never will leave or forsake thee. Where you live I will live, your God and where you die there will I be buried.

The Real Freedom. "If this celebration shall mean this to us, then there long we shall have occasion to shout 'free at last.' This is the only kind of blow that we may strike which will mean liberty and freedom. It is in this way, and in this way only, will the negro in America ever be free. Let us first free the white man from the impressions we made on him under vicious leadership of false friends and then we may hope for him to free us from the bonds which our own hands have welded about our feet. And not until that day arrives can we have an emancipation celebration that will mean anything.

"Let us regain the love which we forfeited for the few political hucks on which we fed, and that love will make us free. At present I think we are foolish for celebrating an event which has never taken place, and you know it as well as I. But some things did take place on that memorable first day of January. The ruined southern white man gave us homes and food. He fed us when hungry, clothed us when naked, administered unto us when sick and visited us when in prison. And our Lord says for one to do that, let us do it for Him. Let us not forget, let us celebrate it. Remember all ye who think that Lincoln's proclamation set you free, that if it is so, our white friends were our saviors."

EVERETT ENTERS RACE FOR RECORDER PRO TEM.

Friends of Latest Entrant into Contest Are Entimistic as to His Success.

A surprise has been sprung in city political circles by the announcement that James E. Everett, ex-alderman and ex-councilman, has been in the race for recorder pro tem. for the past three months and is claimed by his friends to be a certain winner. There have been numerous suggestions of a "dark horse" in the race and it now develops that Mr. Everett is the candidate who has thus been hinted at.

Mr. Everett served as councilman and alderman from the fourth ward and made an excellent record. While occupying these positions he served as acting recorder. He is a professional bookkeeper and for this further reason has been pushed forward for recorder pro tem, as that official is required to keep the court's docket. It is now stated that three hundred well-known citizens and business men have been quietly working in Mr. Everett's behalf and they say they are confident that he will be elected.

The election takes place on the first Monday in March and will be held by the general council, the mayor presiding.

Other Candidates in Race. The candidates who have been active in the race are Wesley H. Freeman, the incumbent, A. J. Holcomb, sergeant of the police department; Harry D. White, ex-policeman and real estate salesman. A month ago there were said to be some score of candidates or would-be candidates, but they nearly all, one by one, dropped out.

"Jubilee Week" to Mark Opening Of Georgia-Made Goods Exhibit

A permanent exhibit of Georgia-made goods will be opened in Atlanta in a few weeks in the building adjoining the chamber of commerce. The exhibits will occupy all the six floors of the building. On each floor convenient comfort rooms will be furnished for those who wish to sit and rest.

The opening exhibit will be marked by jubilee week, when there will be a gala time for the entertainment of the visitors and exhibitors. This entertainment will be repeated each year. It is expected that every manufacturer in Georgia will take advantage of this opportunity to let the people know what he is placing upon the

Ralph Parlette Makes Plea For Lyceum and Chautauqua

"What's all this scare about?" said Ralph Parlette, the widely known American lecturer and magazine editor, through Atlanta on his way to address the Savannah men's mass meeting last Sunday.

"The sun shines just the same, the birds sing just the same, the flowers bloom just the same—all nature is just the same. We have this fair world just the same with its blue skies and its green grass, and its privileges of living, loving, helping and working.

"This scare is mostly about the shortage of surplus dollars in our pockets. It is wonderful how little money we really use and how much we hoard. With a dollar in our hand we own the earth and its fullness thereof and this earth today is a greater paradise than Adam's.

"Why, with a dollar in my hand, with God on His throne, with Uncle Sam on his job, I am a millionaire stockholder in everything I don't own what I hoard, but what I enjoy. I own the Piedmont hotel for a dollar or two a day. You can't eat the hotel or stick it in your pocket, you just own the living in it.

"I own the Atlanta Constitution for a nickel. I own the Atlanta street market. Already many have been heard from who have engaged space. The cost, it is stated will be small.

The exhibit will be an every-day, all-the-year-round exposition of the products of the state. Horse collars of hair oil, bread or bricks, stoves or suspenders, pickles or pins—no matter what it is, if it's made in Georgia, it will find cordial welcome and desirable display.

totally to be spared about. This panic is all artificial. Last years are more profitable than fat years. We learn to be strong by struggle.

Parlette says that all over the south where he has traveled he finds the lyceum and chautauqua movement that has been leading communities as an auxiliary of the churches and the schools.

"The lyceum means so much to every community, as does the chautauqua," says Parlette. "It is the great aid to the churches and schools. It is a pure uplift movement. The lyceum brought Emerson, Beecher, John B. Gough and that galaxy of great men to the people.

The lyceum enabled that prince of the confederacy, General Gordon, to carry his message from the south all over America. The lyceum and chautauqua of later days broke the political machines, deposed party bosses, and inaugurated the present political era of democratic progress. Senator La Follette says the lyceum has been responsible for almost every great movement and reform America has known.

"I was a poor boy working my way through an Ohio college when on the advice of a professor I spent two hard-earned dollars every term to buy a Lyceum ticket. This professor told me I would find it one of the greatest investments of my life. He was right. Those lectures thrilled and awakened me. Hon. J. T. Rose, now a high official of the Atlanta Steel company, was a contemporary of mine. There I heard my own John Temple Graves, Colonel Ham, Sam Jones—all of Georgia. There I heard Joseph Cook, Dr. Willits, Dr. Henson, Dr. MacArthur, Thomas Dixon and a score of great speakers. Their lectures became a part of my life.

Need of Inspiring Messages. "Today in every town there are boys and girls needing the same messages of the orator to inspire them to highest effort. They need the same messages of cheer, shows and tawdry amusements, and there never was a time when it was the duty of every good citizen, father and mother, regardless of any cost and sacrifice, so much as today, to carry on the lyceum and bring these great lives to their communities. There is no argument for hard times or poverty that can justify any citizen for stopping the church, the school, the lyceum and the chautauqua.

"Every year I come south I get a higher regard for southern people. I love their fine sentiment, their lofty ideals, their princely hospitality. And I know that the same spirit is in the new south as in the old south—that great spirit of devotion to principle that inspired the old south to rise at the sacrifice of fortune and life to itself, to rise in the face of tremendous odds, to be true to its ideals and convictions in that magnificent struggle of a half century ago.

"That same spirit in the new south today, once aroused, will stop this wholesale wrecking of the lyceum and chautauqua movement that is opening the gates to a greater tomorrow in the communities where it has been established.

"Twenty-five years from now we will look back and see that this war year was a blessing. It gives us strength through struggle. It taught the farmer to grow diversified crops. It drove the people from hoarding and money-making alone back into the churches, drove them to art, to high thinking, to higher endeavor. For the greatest school in life is the University of Hard Knocks."

How Women Can Give Help To Atlanta's Unemployed

Atlanta will have a municipal employment bureau. That is settled, for the representative women of Atlanta have made up their minds to work for it. The 1st of January a committee from the Atlanta Woman's club, appointed to look into the status of Atlanta's unemployed women, registered, and the outlook of the war has been difficult to handle.

GEORGIA-FLORIDA FAIR COMMITTEE PICKS DATE

Valdosta, Ga., January 21.—(Special.) An important meeting of the Georgia-Florida fair committee of the Georgia-Florida fair was held here today, at which the date for the fair was fixed for October 13 to 22 inclusive. The action of the committee gives nine full fair days, and how much the fair will be, but to place the exposition near fall in the front ranks of the best fairs to be held in any part of the country, everything will be on a bigger and better scale than ever before attempted in south Georgia.

TRAMPS MAKE MISTAKE OF ROBBING SHERIFF

Waycross, Ga., January 23.—(Special.)—Three white "tourists" made the mistake of robbing the sheriff of Charlton county's sheriff in Folkston this week. The night marshal saw them and caught them, but they were mugged after they had raided the house. The feast the men had anticipated was not a good one, as they were locked up. In police court the men, after examinations, were bound over to superior court for trial.

Mrs. Percy's Report

Mrs. William M. Percy, chairman of the committee from the Atlanta Woman's club, stated yesterday, "We have every hope that Atlanta's municipal employment bureau will be established. When our committee was appointed, plans, means and the possibilities of creating work for women now idle were discussed with precision, and the establishment of a municipal employment bureau, suggested by the committee, was carefully gone into. The mayor stated that if the need of the bureau could be proved, he was ready to establish it, and that he was ready to secure an office, some one to take charge of it, and means to operate, in order to make a test during the few weeks just at Christmas, before the city council was organized, was a complete impossibility, and this phase of the question had to be dropped.

The Atlanta Constitution Makes It Possible For You To Visit the Two Great International Expositions This Year Held at San Francisco and San Diego

DESCRIPTION OF CONSTITUTION TOUR NO. 3, AND ITINERARY, GIVEN IN DETAIL BELOW

HOW YOU CAN OBTAIN A TRIP

The plan evolved by The Atlanta Constitution whereby you can take one of these wonderful trips as outlined is as simple in understanding as it is easy of execution. Although The Constitution has a large circulation, there are some who at present are not subscribers. They want the Daily and Sunday Constitution, but have put off ordering from day to day. The Constitution desires your assistance in locating and placing these people on its subscription list, and for this favor you are to be liberally rewarded.

Points will be given on each new subscription payment to The Atlanta Constitution according to the schedule given below and after you have obtained the required number of points a wonderful trip to the greatest of all expositions will be yours.

You may nominate yourself or a friend as a candidate for one of these trips. The names of all candidates nominated will be published in The Daily Constitution from time to time, giving their respective standing.

Each candidate on nomination will be credited with 100 points free, and will be provided with an authorized Constitution receipt book. These receipt books may be had by applying to the Circulation Department of The Constitution. Each candidate obtaining one of these free tours may take the trip to San Francisco any time during 1915 he or she may desire. The exposition opens on February 20, and closes December 4, 1915.

Special arrangements have been made with the McFarland Tourist Agency to furnish the various trips we are offering and the starting point of all of the successful candidates will be Atlanta. If you want to go to the exposition this is your opportunity. Send in your nomination at once and request The Constitution Receipt Book.

Description of Southwest Circle Tour No. 1 and No. 2, also "PANAMA CANAL TOURS," No. 4 and No. 5, will be furnished upon application.

No. 1 Constitution "SPECIAL" tour, known as "SOUTHWEST CIRCLE," is a special sixteen day tour and will be given for 4,800 points.

No. 2 Constitution "STANDARD" Tour, a Southwest circle tour of 24 days, covering over 7,000 miles, given for 6,400 points.

Nos. 4 and 5 CONSTITUTION "PANAMA CANAL" Tour, a 14,000-mile circle tour of thirty-five days by steamer and rail, given for 11,800 points and 12,600 points.

NO. 3—CONSTITUTION TOUR "DE LUXE"

Northwest Circle Tour of 30 Days, Covering More Than 9,000 Miles by Rail and Steamer

Given For 7,800 Points

This Tour includes some of the most interesting parts of the United States, Canada and Mexico. As much can be seen on this trip as on a tour around the world.

The Canadian National Park, British Columbia, Rocky Mountains, Puget Sound, California, Golden Gate, Mexico, Yellowstone Park, Royal Gorge, Pike's Peak, Garden of the Gods, the Mormons in Utah, the Cowboys and Indians, all have formed themes of grandeur and romance for the writers of the age.

Never before has such a marvelous collection of travel features been offered on such terms by any newspaper.

ITINERARY

CHICAGO—ONE DAY will be spent in Chicago, the second largest city in the United States, stopping at the Great Northern Hotel. Special automobiles will carry the party for a tour of the city.

ST. PAUL AND MINNEAPOLIS, the twin cities of the Northwest, the center of the great wheat growing section, will have the party for several hours. A trolley tour of the two cities will be given the party.

CANADA—Two days will be spent on our luxurious train, speeding through the great wheat and cattle country of Minnesota, North Dakota and Canada.

CANADIAN NATIONAL PARK—TWO DAYS will be spent in the Canadian National Park. This park forms a continuous panorama of bewildering magnificence; wondrous glacial fields, startling precipices, snow-capped peaks, wide forest areas, clear lakes and peaceful valleys, combine in making this indeed the "Wonderland of America." A side trip to Great Glacier included.

VANCOUVER, B. C.—After a short stop in Vancouver, the party will board the Canadian Pacific steamer for a day's sail on Puget Sound on our way to Seattle, visiting Victoria en route, with a trip through the Parliament Buildings.

SEATTLE, the "Queen City of the Northwest," will entertain the party for one day, stopping at the New Richmond Hotel. Here an automobile tour of the city will be given our party.

PORTLAND, the Rose City of the Northwest, will be a stop of special interest, our party stopping at the Seaward Hotel. A special trolley trip will be arranged for our party. From this port the party will leave by steamer for San Francisco.

PACIFIC OCEAN—This trip would be incomplete without a cruise on the Pacific Ocean, where invigorating salt air will give rest and comfort to our travelers. For this sail we will use the new palatial steamer "GREAT NORTHERN," the finest ocean-going steamer ever built in the United States. This ship is 234 feet in length, with a tonnage of 12,000, and accommodations for 1,000 people. Passengers will have choice of stateroom or rail between Portland and San Francisco, where notice is given five days in advance of leaving time.

SAN FRANCISCO—SEVEN DAYS will be spent in San Francisco at the world's greatest exposition. "The Golden City" will surpass itself with a panorama of never ending brilliancy. The grandeur and magnificence of the huge exhibition palaces and the Grand Court of Honor stamp it as the University of the West. Illuminated Cavalcade, Oriental Pageants, Beauty, Splendor, Life, Art, Grandeur—everywhere. Lodging will be furnished for eight nights at the renowned Argonaut Hotel, where you will be made to feel "at home" in every way. We give our party the following assortment of side trips: "Here" Muir Woods, via the cross-Island railway in the world to the "Big Trees" in California. Auto seeing trip of San Francisco, including Golden Gate Park, Cliff House, Seal Rookery, Trip to Oakland, University of California and Berkeley.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA, the land of perpetual sunshine and flowers, will be viewed from our luxurious train of reclining chair cars, with stops at many points of interest, including Santa Cruz and Santa Barbara, during a daylight run from San Francisco to Los Angeles.

The route of our train will include the Pacific Coast line, paralleling the ocean for hundreds of miles, and in some instances projecting over the ocean itself. This route will include the most picturesque scenery of California, as well as the great fruit growing section.

LOS ANGELES, the "City of the Angels," will have our party for three days, giving ample time to view the many interesting places in this section. No city in the world offers more attractions than this city, which are varied, historical and beautiful. During three nights will be furnished at the famous Hotel Rosslyn.

One day will be spent on a circle tour of surpassing beauty, paralleling the mountains from Los Angeles to the sea, then 28 miles along the ocean shore, visiting ten beaches and eight cities, with free admissions to many attractions at these places. We have selected this trip, together with the Catalina Island sail, which is taken from this city, as two of our most delightful side trips that we give the members of our parties.

CATALINA ISLAND, one of the famous resorts of the world, will be included as part of our tour, and will be a trip of surpassing interest. One entire day will be spent on this island, and will carry you into a land of perfect enchantment. Here is located the famous submarine gardens of the Pacific ocean, which may be viewed from glass bottom boats.

SAN DIEGO—Two days will be spent here at the "Exposition Unique." This exposition has been building for six years; every building will be covered with a wealth of flowers, vines and tropical plants. Huge palms, weighing 70 tons will decorate the grounds. Nearly three million specimens of trees, shrubs, vines and flowers will be displayed in harmonious variegated colors, buildings and beauty. San Diego is one of the oldest cities in California, and many traces of its Spanish origin still remain in missions and ruins. The party will be given lodging at the world renowned San Diego hotel. The trip to Mexico will be made from here.

MEXICO will naturally be a point of great interest to our tourists, and we have arranged to compliment our patrons with a special trip to Juana, Mexico, where many points of interest will be seen, including Boundary Monument, Fort, scene of recent battles, curio stores, customs office.

SALT LAKE CITY—One day will be spent in Salt Lake City, stopping at the Kenyon Hotel. Here, beside a dead sea, is a great city of many attractions. In Temple Square, which is surrounded by a great stone wall, is the great Mormon Temple, ranking among the finest buildings in the world. In the temple is the greatest pipe organ ever built. Free recitals are arranged for visitors.

Saltair Beach is one of the most famous resorts in the world, as nowhere else are conditions similar to those found here. Bathers find it easier to float than to sink in the waters of Great Salt Lake. Our party will be given a free trip to this famous beach.

ROCKY MOUNTAINS—One day will be spent on our special train in the very heart of the Rocky mountains, viewing the wonders of nature in this region. The Royal Gorge is the narrowest portion of the passage through the Rocky mountains. Granite walls tower 2,327 feet above the roadbed, making the sky appear as a mere thread of light with the stars shining at midday.

COLORADO SPRINGS—Two days will be spent in Colorado Springs, where opportunity will be given to visit the many wonderful attractions in this section. Here is located the wondrous formation called the "Garden of the Gods." Pike's Peak, snow-capped in summer, pierces blue clouds at the magnificent altitude of nearly three miles.

From Colorado Springs a side trip of forty miles, through marvelous scenery, may be taken to the celebrated mining camp of Cripple Creek and Victor; also Crystal Park, Seven Falls and Manitou.

Our party will have entertainment arranged at the Plaza hotel, one of the famous hotels of the west. We also compliment our party with a side trip to Manitou Springs and the "Garden of the Gods."

DENVER—One day will be spent in Denver, the "Queen City of the Plains," where one may see snow-capped mountains in every direction for a hundred miles, or more. Our party will be welcomed and entertained at the famous Albany hotel, which is the city. The chamber of commerce will arrange a special form of entertainment for our tourists. We give our party a special sight-seeing trip of Denver.

THE PLAINS will be viewed with interest on our daylight run from Denver to St. Louis, through Kansas and Missouri, then to Atlanta, the end of the journey, as well as the starting point.

Schedule and Special Information

Beginning on May 16th, from Atlanta, they will operate a special train on their Northwest Tour every fifteen days throughout the period of the Exposition.

These special Exposition trains will be the most complete and palatial Pullmans ever operated in connection with a newspaper, being composed of Standard, Compartment, Drawing Room, Observation, Library, Dining and Baggage Cars, affording every luxury of modern railway travel.

These special trains will be in charge of experienced Personal Conductors, who will look after the pleasure and comfort of our tourists at all times.

The Constitution Tour No. 3 will include transportation, Pullman, every meal for the entire tour, except in San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego, where, for obvious reasons, it is not practicable to include meals and have the party come to one certain place. Staterooms and meals on steamers, high-class modern hotels in all cities visited, side trips in all cities visited, where specified.

Tour No. 3 is based on three persons to each Pullman section, or compartment, and four to each drawing room. Exclusive use of a lower berth in Standard cars will be $27.50 extra for the entire tour. Exclusive use of a compartment for two persons will cost each extra $20 extra. Drawing room for three will cost each $25 extra. For two $45 each extra.

Not Included

YELLOWSTONE PARK TOURS—SPECIAL TOURS may be made as a side trip on any of our tours. For a five-day tour of the park, which will include all necessary expenses from Salt Lake City, add $55 to the cost of any of our tours; or 1,800 extra points.

PIKE'S PEAK AND CRYSTAL PARK—Two famous side trips at Colorado Springs are Pike's Peak and Crystal Park. The Pike's Peak trip is made by cog railway at a cost of $5 for the round trip, or 200 points extra.

The Crystal Park trip is via automobile at an altitude of a mile and a half, giving a 30-mile ride into the Rockies, like a glimpse of Switzerland, for only $3; or 150 points extra.

FREE NOMINATION BLANK

Constitution Exposition Tour Campaign
GOOD FOR 100 POINTS

Toward Securing Points for Free Tour to Panama-Pacific International Exposition, in 1915.

Name

Address

NOTICE—Only one entry blank will be allowed and credited to each candidate.

All are desirable trips, but space will not permit description of each tour. Anyone interested can obtain the desired information by calling on or writing to the Circulation Department of The Atlanta Constitution.

The greater part of all the expenses of all the trips offered by The Constitution are paid with the exception of No. 1. This is a great opportunity for you to secure almost wholly an expense-paid trip to San Francisco and return. It is an opportunity that you should not neglect, and it is one that may never be presented to you again under like circumstances.

We want to have it understood that our guests who take the Northern trip may have an opportunity to visit Yellow Stone Park on their return trip, yet, it is not included in our offer. This side trip will cost $55.00 extra, or 1,800 additional points, as fully explained in the description of trip No. 3. Pike's Peak will cost $5.00 extra, or 200 extra points, and Crystal Park will cost $3.00 extra or 150 extra points. Candidates are to understand that this is not a contest and the winning of a trip by one candidate in no way involves the winning of another candidate. There are enough trips for all, and any person who obtains enough points, as outlined above, will receive a trip regardless of the work accomplished by other candidates. Any candidate who secures one-half of the required number of points to earn one of these trips and who is unable to continue the work, will be given credit pro rata for his or her points registered, and can, by paying the difference in cash, receive the trip offered; or any candidate who fails to win a trip will be paid a cash commission of 10 per cent if the amount of new business is under $100.00, and 20 per cent if the amount of new business exceeds $100.00 of his or her total collections on new subscriptions. The Constitution does not expect something for nothing, nor does it desire to involve the good people of this vicinity in any plan resulting in remuneration for some and loss for others. By this plan the candidate is at least sure of the commissions, although one of these trips is easily within his or her reach. This subscription proposition is based purely on new subscriptions. Points will not be given on old subscriptions. Any combination of circumstances by which The Constitution does not gain a new subscription will be classed as old. Any candidate who deliberately tries to have old subscribers discontinue the paper and the paper sent to a different member of the family or a different person entirely, not connected with the family, yet at the same time taking the place of the old subscriber in order that the candidate may be given points, will be cautioned for the first offense and barred from being a participant for the second offense. The Constitution is making this most liberal offer for new subscriptions, and new subscriptions only. Send in your nomination, at once and request a Panama Trip Receipt Book. Make this opportunity, your opportunity to see San Francisco, the two expositions and the many other points of interest as outlined above.

ADDRESS ALL COMMUNICATIONS TO THE DAILY CONSTITUTION, ATLANTA, GA.

AUGUSTA'S SOCIAL SIDE

Augusta, Ga., January 23.—(Special Correspondence.)—Mrs. P. J. A. Berkman, Jr., entertained in compliment to Mrs. Marquis, Miss Marquis and Miss Stoddard, of Chicago, on Friday afternoon, with a tea at her home on the Washington road, which was a very delightful affair. The home was charmingly decorated with many blooming plants and cut flowers and ferns, and many callers enjoyed the delightful hospitality of the Berkman home.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Moritz entertained Monday evening at their home on Green street in honor of their daughter, Genevieve, and her guests, Mrs. Lena Thomas, of Mobile, and Miss Myrtle Mitchell, of Montgomery.

At the same time, the usual afternoon social was enjoyed. Miss Pettit and her partner, Mr. Dorsey, danced the Pavane and the waltz, one of the favorite dances of the day, which is especially charming for an exhibition dance.

Miss Meta Schley and Miss Dorothy Morris are visiting Mrs. Tom Middlebrooks in Athens.

Mr. John Bussey has returned from a visit to New York.

Miss Martha Coleman is visiting friends in Savannah.

Miss Ellen Thomas has returned from a visit to Savannah and Miss Emily Thomas has returned to her school at Dobbs Ferry, on the Hudson.

Mrs. John C. Catherwood, who has been visiting in the city, Mrs. G. H. Harter, has returned to her home in Charleston.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gehrkens have gone to Atlanta to attend the wedding of Miss Virginia Parks, Mrs. Gehrkens's sister, and Mr. George L. Simpson.

The Lark Club gave one of their pleasant dances Tuesday evening, with about twenty-five couples in attendance. The following were present: Miss Lula Simmons, of Atlanta; Miss Myrtle Mitchell, of Montgomery; and Miss Lena Thomas, of Mobile.

The Men's club of St. Paul's church held one of their delightful dinner parties at the parish house, which is a monthly feature of the club. The dinner Monday evening differed from the others, in that among the guests were representatives from every Episcopal church in the city. Mr. John D. Triggs, in the presiding officer of the occasion, and there were most interesting little talks from Bishop Bode, Mr. Charles Pressley, Mr. K. Miller, Rev. Mr. Pressley, of the church, and Dr. C. B. Wilmer, of St. Luke's, Atlanta. The long table at which the sixty guests were seated was beautifully decorated and adorned with crimson roses. The elaborate dinner was served by the Bishop Elliott society.

Mrs. Dana Osgood, of Hope Dale, Mass., is the guest of her mother, Mrs. T. P. Branch.

Mr. Henry Hammond, Jr., who has been in New Mexico, has just sailed from San Francisco for the Philippines.

Miss Pauline Verdery is the guest of Mrs. Craig Cranston in Savannah.

Miss Isabel Clark is visiting Mrs. Frank H. Rockman, of Rockmart.

Mr. Pendleton King left Saturday for New York.

Miss Christine Riley, of St. Matthews, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Turner, in North Augusta.

The usual Saturday afternoon dance and afternoon tea at the Country club was well attended. Quite a number took supper though there was no formal supper, party given, and a number enjoyed the dancing after supper.

One of the pleasant affairs of the past week was the "at home" given by Miss Ellen Hickman, who entertained a series of the series of this winter. Miss Hickman presided at the table herself. Assisting Miss Hickman were Misses Sarah B. B. Battle, Miss Nannette Willis and Miss Catherine Heard.

Mrs. Spencer Borden, of Fall River, Mass., are at the Bon Air.

Mrs. Earl Kaminar has returned to her home in New York.

Mrs. Harris H. D'Antignac is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Harper Lumsden, in New York.

Miss Dorothy Morris goes next week to visit Miss Middlebrooks in Athens.

Mr. L. S. Baker is visiting in the city with his mother from Central America.

Mr. and Mrs. James Patterson, after a visit to Mrs. A. L. Cunningham, have returned to their home in Allendale.

EAST POINT BABY

college are elected by the members of the societies. To be elected a candidate for this occasion is regarded as one of the highest honors of college life. The election will be held on February 1, and already interest is growing between several contestants.

Much to the regret of the entire college, Miss Wilda Hardman, who has been president of the student body for nearly a year, has been forced to resign because of heavy work. She has made a most admirable president and it was with great regret that her resignation was accepted.

EATONTON, GA.

The most elaborate social affair of the season was the reception given by Mr. and Mrs. George S. Dennis, at their home, "Hillcrest," in honor of their nieces, Misses Margaret and Annie Louise Barlow, of Dalton, Ga. Their colonial home was beautifully decorated for the occasion. Mr. and Mrs. Greene were assisted in receiving by their attractive hostess, Mrs. M. O. Greene, Misses Barkaloo and Miss Carolyn Haynes, of Macon. The reception was held at the home of Mrs. Dennis. There were a large number of invitations, and they were generously accepted. A superb dinner was served during the hours of entertaining.

Misses Martha and Lucy Turner entertained the club on Friday evening at their home, "Sleepy Hollow." Music and games were enjoyed during the evening, and a delightful refreshment table was served.

Miss Helen Dennis entertained a number of her young friends on Wednesday afternoon in celebration of her sixteenth birthday, at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Mary Lizzie Reid. After the usual refreshments, Mrs. Reid and her guests at the Adelle, where special pictures were for the afternoon. Those present were: Mrs. Reid, Mrs. Collins, Mandy Hodges, Susie Walker, Mrs. Paul, Lina Hearn, Frances Dennis, Martha Spivey, Lucy Turner, Lelia May Jenkins and Rosa May Greene.

Miss Flora Brown, of Tavares, Fla., is the guest for the month of January at the home of Mrs. S. C. Dennis.

Mrs. Sallie Miller, of Baltimore, Md., is the guest of Mrs. Osborne Brevard.

One of the most delightful affairs of the week past was that given by Mrs. Lillian Anderson at her home in honor of the D. A. R. After a most delightful program including a most interesting paper by Mrs. John T. Dennis, a course luncheon was served.

BESSIE TIFT NOTES.

The Kappa Delta society on Saturday evening presented a play of decided merit written by one of its members, Miss Sadie Tiller, of Atlanta. It was entitled "A New Year's Resolution." The following took part in it: Miss Dora Hendricks, who personated Mrs. Warthen, a lovely, cultured woman of refinement and means; Miss Vera Malone, Grace, the sister of Mrs. Warthen, who had become an outcast by her own deeds; Misses Kathleen Mulloy and Lucile Jackson, the very attractive children of Mrs. Warthen, and Miss Margaret Galphin, the negro servant, who was not only the maid, but the trusty one in whose care the children were often left. The plot was well worked out and taught a good lesson. Miss Galphin showed decided talent in personating the negro servant, and Miss Lucile Jackson, the very attractive spoiled child in the home of wealth.

The Chionian society very appropriately presented a Robert F. Lee program on Saturday evening. Miss Leota McCutchen read two of Father Ryan's touching poems, "The Sword of Lee" and "The Congregationalist." Miss Olive Mattox read "Fought With Grant and Lee," and "The Blue and Gold." Miss Winnie Davis gave several beautiful tributes to Lee from men famous in our history. Between these numbers were recitations composed by Miss McCutchen, Mabel Patrick, Annie Claire Kane and Allison Gooding, sang some old southern songs, "Tenting Tonight," "Dixie," etc.

Mrs. D. H. Flynn, of Virginia, who has been visiting her father, Mr. Flynn, spent last Tuesday at the college. Miss Frances Evans, at the college.

Miss Winnie Davis spent the weekend with Miss Bessie Heard.

Misses Lucile Jackson and Florie Branch were the guests of Mrs. M. J. Pharr at a very pleasant dinner party on Sunday at the home of Mrs. R. H. Fletcher.

Miss Julia Wilson and Miss Julia Green were also beautifully entertained as the guests of Miss Mary Fletcher at her home on Sunday.

Mrs. E. J. Forrester, of Macon, visited friends at the college last Tuesday and Wednesday.

NORMAL SCHOOL NOTES.

Mrs. Nellie Peters Black, of Atlanta, addressed the students of the school in the auditorium on Saturday, 16. Mrs. Black has been attending the school at the agricultural college and came to speak to the young teachers at the normal along the same line that she addressed the cultural conference. Mrs. Black delivered a very helpful talk, and one that was closely listened to by the audience.

Governor N. E. Harris spoke to the students at chapel on Friday, the 22d. His enthusiastic address was a most impressive one. This is the first time that Mr. Harris has had an opportunity of visiting the school, and the school officials welcomed him. He promised to give the school every aid in his power to bring it to the front of the young students came forward to meet him, and a delightful informal reception was tendered the coming governor.

Mr. C. N. James, one of the corn demonstrators of the state, who has been attending the conference of the Agricultural school, gave a delightful entertainment in the dining room the night last week. Mr. James is a very able entertainer, playing numerous instrumental pieces and giving a most enjoyable evening. He was assisted by Rev. S. J. Cartledge, of the Central Presbyterian church, led the vesper services on Sunday night. Dr. Cartledge is always a most welcome visitor to our vesper exercises, for he brings to us messages of truth. The students will be ready on Sunday to conduct the exercises again later in the year.

On Saturday, the 15th, Misses Voltz and Booker, two of the teachers connected with the Atlanta system of schools, visited the Normal and spent the day inspecting the various departments. Through a misunderstanding of the invitation extended to the teachers of that city, others who had planned to come were unable to be present.

Mr. Milledgeville, but now teaching in the Presbyterian school in Attamunaw, visited Miss Tounson, of the Department of Education, last week. Miss Crawford is a very noted teacher in the Normal department. Miss Tounson's pupils have done excellent work this year, and she has attracted the attention of many outside teachers.

The Schuman quintet rendered a delightful program in the auditorium last Thursday night. There was a large audience present that enjoyed every minute of the program. This entertainment was given during this year, Lyceum circuit, of the Alkathest, under the direction of Miss Tounson, a highly educational, and was enjoyed by a large audience.

The head of the Masons' Orphan's home, visited his daughter, Miss Lorna Collier, this week.

Miss Annie Seay is back at the Normal again, after a long absence caused from sickness.

MONROE, GA.

The Athenaeum club met on Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Ernest Campbell, in the dining room. The room was decorated in bowls of Roman hyacinths. Roll call was answered with current events. The history lesson on "Religious Life in Germany," was led by Miss Lula Selman. The magazine study dealt with the life of Martin Luther, and was read by Mrs. Charles M. Walker. At the conclusion of the program, several interesting guests called, and refreshments were served during the social.

Mrs. A. J. Bass entertained the Sewing club on Tuesday afternoon. The guests arrived early and enjoyed the afternoon making fancy stitches. Delicious refreshments were served late in the afternoon.

Mrs. S. A. Hester was hostess at two lovely parties on Wednesday and Thursday afternoons of this week. The guests called early in the afternoon and enjoyed the game of five hundred. After the game came late and delightful refreshments were served.

Mrs. E. M. Wayne entertained informally at five hundred on Wednesday afternoon, complimentary to Mrs. Neva Starr Wayne, of Savannah.

The Y. W. A. study class met with Mrs. Charles A. Walker on Thursday afternoon. Quite a large number attended, and the class promises to be quite interesting for the coming year.

SOUTHERN BAPT. COLLEGE

LaGrange, Ga., January 23.—(Special.) Misses Monica and Lucille Pennington have returned from their visit home.

Miss Mary Paul Smith will leave for her home in Auburn in a few days. She is coming to give up her teaching time on account of trouble with her eyes.

Miss Eleanor Orr has returned from a pleasant visit to Chipley.

Miss Bertie Hall will return to her work at Colquhoun as soon as permitted by the condition of her father, who is very ill.

The Y. W. A. held their usual meeting Sunday afternoon in the Delphic hall. The two literary societies met Saturday afternoon.

How To Make the Quickest, Simplest Cough Remedy

Much Better than the Ready-Made Kind. Fully Guaranteed.

This home-made cough syrup is now used in more homes than any other cough remedy. Its promptness, ease and certainty in conquering coughs, chest and throat colds, is really remarkable. You can actually feel it take hold. A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough—relieves even whooping cough quickly. Splendid, too, for bronchitis, spasmodic cough, bronchial asthma and winter coughs.

Get from any druggist 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (30 cents worth), pour it in a bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. This gives you—at a cost of only 50 cents—a full pint of better cough syrup than you can buy for $2.00. Takes but a few minutes to prepare. Full directions with Pinex. Tastes good and never spoils.

You will be pleasantly surprised how quickly it loosens dry, hoarse or tight coughs, and heals the inflamed membranes in a painful cough. It also stops the formation of phlegm in the throat and bronchial tubes, thus ending the persistent loose cough.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in quinine, which is so sealing to the membranes.

To avoid disappointment, be sure and ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces Pinex," and don't accept an absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

SHORTER COLLEGE NOTES.

Miss Mildred Irvin, of Washington, Ga., entered college on Tuesday last. We are glad to have her with us.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Hoose spent last Saturday and Sunday at Gainesville, Ga., their old home.

The regular faculty meeting on Wednesday evening after the usual business routine had been finished. The delightful refreshments were served by committees from the Y. W. A.

The mid-winter examinations were finished on Thursday last and all of our girls, no matter what mark they made, are rejoicing that mark they made. At the faculty meeting on Wednesday night, nearly all of the teachers stated that the papers, as they had been read, were of an unusually high order.

The most interesting event of the college year was the recital given by Miss Florida Parrish, who has recently returned from the Paris department of the voice department. Miss Parrish was assisted by Mr. Angelo Davidson, violinist. This was the first appearance of Miss Parrish before a Rome audience. Her magnificent dramatic soprano voice delighted her audience. Her program was an unusually brilliant one and proved that the college has secured a magnificent singer and teacher.

Under the direction of Miss McDougall, the department of faculty biology is growing in interest and has added to the museum of plants and the cases are being rapidly filled with interesting life forms. Miss Helen Hamilton upon her return from her visit to her home in Florida, brought many and valuable specimens and presented them to the museum.

Possibly the most exciting and interesting occasion of the year at Shorter was the annual debate between the Eponian and Polymnian societies. For this debate the best debaters in the

To Renew Complexion Without Cosmetics

If the excessive user of cosmetics only knew the impression her use really makes upon others, she would quickly seek means of gaining a natural complexion. Let her acquire the mercolized wax habit, discarding make-ups entirely, and she will soon have the kind of complexion that women envy and men admire. It is so easy to get an ounce of mercolized wax at any drug store, use nights like cold cream and wash it off mornings. And the results are so remarkable. Gradually the useless cuticle peels off, in almost invisible flaky particles. In a week or so there is a new complexion, clear, velvety-soft, or girlish color and texture. The treatment is so simple, harmless and marvellously effective, the wonder is that every woman whose skin is withered, discolored, rough, chapped, freckled or pimpled, has not already tried it.

Let wrinkled women quit pastes and massage creams which mar the skin still more, and try this mercolized wax. Dissolve 1 oz. powdered sagottle in 1/2 pint witch hazel, use a face brush. Every line will quickly disappear.—(adv.)

Mr. Stanley's Recital.

The second of a series of organ recitals to be given during the winter under the auspices of the Georgia Chapter of the American Guild of Organists by local members of the chapter, took place last Tuesday evening at the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church, Mr. Walter Peck Stanley, an associate member of the guild, presiding at the organ.

The members of the chapter and their friends were received and beautifully entertained at supper by the ladies of the church, the recital following the supper at 8:15 o'clock.

Mr. Stanley's program was chosen with a view of demonstrating the historical development of organ composition and proved highly instructive and interesting. His opening number was a Pasacaglia by Frescobaldi, one of the earliest composers of note, belonging to the Italian school and the first composer of fugues for the organ, the favorite and highest representative form of composition used by masters at that time. It exemplified perfectly the smooth, graceful and eminently vocal style, which characterizes the Italian school, in fine contrast to the sterner, more severely contrapuntal style of the German school and its greatest exponent, John Sebastian Bach, whose feeling for melody, was made ever subordinate to perfect scheme and form.

The organ concerto No. 2, by Handel, served admirably as a connecting link between the two schools, containing a peculiarly characteristic of Handel's style, the melodious element of the Italian school with the rugged strength of the North.

Very delicate and pleasing were the Romance by Scarlatti and the famous Gavotte by Lully, which also characterizes the French school, a late composer of the French school, the two groups setting forth the modern use of the organ in expression of detail and delicate coloring. Most interesting in the modern numbers was Wagner's "Liebestod" from Tristan u Isolde, which was splendidly rendered. It demonstrated notably the fact that the organ is capable of producing emotional and orchestral coloring, and Mr. Stanley's masterful treatment of it and rich, tonal effects made it one of the most enjoyable and effective numbers by Greg and Caprice de Concert by Archa, an English composer of note, were brilliant and interesting numbers.

East Point Woman's Club.

Mrs. J. C. McKenzie presided over the meeting of the East Point Woman's club Wednesday afternoon, which was held in the clubroom on Main street. After the preliminaries, the following officers were elected to serve for the coming year: Mrs. M. J. Thompson, first vice president, Miss League, second vice president, Mrs. A. E. Brown, treasurer, Mrs. D. Center, secretary, Mrs. M. J. Allen, corresponding secretary, Miss Louise Taylor. The club will close its annual year's work and the new officers will appoint their different committees at the next regular business meeting.

Psychological Society.

The Atlanta Psychological society will meet in the convention hall in the Mayfair hotel, Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. The program is a good one, and Rev. Rowlett will speak on the subconscious mind. Miss Rose N. Adams, vice president, will speak of the new psychology. The attendance at this society has grown so rapidly the last few months that it became necessary to seek larger quarters. The meetings are interesting and instructive, and all interested in psychology and kindred subjects are cordially invited to attend.

Informal Dance.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Blackman will entertain at an informal dancing party Tuesday evening at home in compliment to Miss Estelle Slaton, a good pianist and Miss Tierney, of Kentucky, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Woolford. Invited to meet with the usual company of the young unmarried set.

Silver Tea.

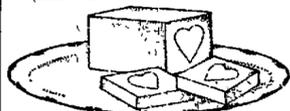

Chapter No. 9, of All Saints' church, will give a silver tea at the home of the chairman, Mrs. Estelle Slaton, 115 West Peachtree street, on Wednesday, January 27. The hours will be from 4 to 6 o'clock. Home-made candy and preserves will be on sale. All friends are cordially invited.

Dime Social.

The Diphany guild will hold a dime social at the home of Mrs. C. T. Holdrich, 95 Waverly way, Tuesday afternoon, January 26, to which all ladies of the parish are cordially invited to bring their sewing and enjoy a social afternoon.

An Attractive Bride

Atlanta Society to Dance For Cause of Education

Arrangements have been perfected for the dance which the education committee of the Atlanta woman's club of which Mrs. Spencer Atkinson is chairman, will give at the Capital City club on Thursday evening, January 28, at 9 o'clock. The entertainment is being given for the benefit of the mountain schools of the state, which the club helps support. It will take place in the ballroom, at 9 o'clock, and it will be of a thoroughly informal nature, like the Tuesday evening affairs given at the club each week, and the dance will be the best. The guests will be received by Mr. and Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, chairman, Governor and Mrs. John M. Slaton, Judge and Mrs. Spencer Atkinson, Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Connolly, Mr. and Mrs. Linton Hopkins, Mr. and Mrs. Victor H. Krieshaber, Mrs. E. J. McGovern, Miss Nellie Peters Black, Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick and Mr. and Mrs. William Claer Spiker.

A floor committee, with Mr. Arthur Clark as chairman, will look after the comfort of the guests, and is composed of the following: Messrs. Henry Newman, Tom Daniels, Dr. John A. Gentry, Eugene Haynes, Fred McGonigal, Charles Nunnally, Ralph Ragan, John Hardisty and Eugene Kelly. An interesting feature of the entertainment will be the special dances, which are being arranged by a committee composed of Mrs. E. C. Dineen, chairman, Mrs. Thaddeus Horton and Mrs. John Marshall Slaton. Miss Helen Stewart will dance two charming solos, including Chambliss' "Spring Song." Miss Allene Fielder and Mr. Eugene Haynes will give several numbers, and Miss Ethel Moulton and Mr. Robert Bell, of the Georgian Terrace, will be on the program. Dancing will begin at 9 o'clock, and will continue until 12, and a most delightful evening is assured.

Doctor Guthrie to Lecture On Religion and the Drama

The Drama league is looking forward with keen interest to the approaching lectures of Dr. William Norman Guthrie, of New York, which are to begin next Tuesday at the Georgian Terrace at 8 o'clock. This opening lecture will be followed by others on Wednesday and Thursday, one of which will probably be arranged for an evening. Dr. Guthrie will speak Tuesday on "The Inevitable Relation Between Religion and Drama." He is one of the more magnetic and stimulating speakers ever heard in the city, and his three lectures will undoubtedly prove a great event for the thoughtful element of Atlanta. These lectures are all to be free to Drama league members, non-members paying a fee of 50 cents at the door. As the Drama league has already several hundred members and as the seating facilities of the Terrace are limited, it is strongly urged that all who have not secured new membership cards do so at once from the treasurer, Mr. Lindsey Hopkins, 228 Peachtree street, in order that, if it proves necessary, larger quarters may be secured for the lectures.

Dinner-Dance At Piedmont Driving Club

The weekly dinner-dance at the Piedmont Driving club last night was a delightful occasion, and the decorations were a pretty expression in pink and white. Carnations and narcissus were the flowers, and their colors were repeated in attractive detail.

The largest party was given by Mr. and Mrs. John S. Cohen in compliment to Miss Ioline Campbell. Mr. and Mrs. Cohen's guests were: Miss Campbell, Miss Rosalie Davis, Miss Mai DeGize Florine, Miss Lucile Kuhn, Miss Isabel Robinson, Miss Alice May Freeman, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Inman Gray, Mr. Lamar Hill, Mr. Joseph Brown Connally, Mr. Wimberly Peters, Dr. Jere Osborne, Mr. Lynn Werner, Mr. William Manry, Mr. John A. Brice and Mr. Charles I. Ryan.

Miss Hazen, of New Jersey, who is visiting Miss Mignon McCarty, was the guest of honor in Mr. Lauren Foreman's party.

Mrs. Bispham, of New York and Paris, the guest of Mrs. Lee Lewman, was entertained by Colonel Robert J. Lowry.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fisher entertained a small party for Mrs. Callaway, of Washington, Ga.

Others entertaining were Mr. and Mrs. Gus Dodd, Mr. Eugene Kelly, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Nunnally, Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Spalding, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Meador.

Mrs. John A. Perdue Elected President Jubilee Union of Mission Workers

The quarterly meeting of the Jubilee Union of Mission Workers was held Friday afternoon at the First Baptist church, Mrs. H. N. Hurt, president, presiding.

It was at this church three years ago that the Atlanta branch of the Jubilee Union of Mission Workers was formed, Mrs. Sam D. Jones being the first president.

Devotional exercises were led by Dr. C. W. Daniel, with prayer and appropriate verses.

Dr. Atkinson, dean of St. Philip's cathedral, was the principal speaker of the afternoon, and handled his topic, "Mission Work," in a most able and masterly manner.

Mrs. Archibald Davis addressed the ladies in behalf of the Chapman-Alexander meeting, which will begin on February 14. All the churches in the city are going to take part.

Miss Rosa Woodberry, chairman of the Mission Study class, announced that classes would be held to train for mission study leaders. The mission book on social service can be obtained from Miss Woodberry.

Resolutions were passed thanking Mrs. H. N. Hurt, our retiring president.

Burroughs Nature Club.

All members of the Burroughs' Nature club and city and county school teachers are invited to attend a demonstration given by Mr. DeLoach, of the Georgia experiment station, of the making of bird houses. A prize will be offered in later for the best bird house made by one of the school children. It is hoped that all passive members of the club will renew their interest by paying their dues and becoming active participants in the year's work.

Mr. DeLoach will give his demonstration on Saturday morning, January 30. Place of meeting will be announced later.

U. D. C. Meeting.

The regular meeting of the United Daughters of the Confederacy will be held Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Woman's club.

The executive board meeting will be at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. Williams McCarthy, president, will preside.

A beautiful program has been arranged by Mrs. W. S. Yeates.

Ten Club.

The Ten club will hold its regular meeting and enjoy the best bird house Thursday at Druid Hills Golf club.

Present a Smart Host of the New Ready-to-Wear for the Spring

The strictly new thing to be worn in January blossoms like a rose in the desert. Out of midwinter clearance sales, where bare shelves and unburdened racks forecast a new season, rise up in ever-surprising splendor the fresh colors of spring, the newly invented mode, the suddenly discovered adaptation.

Presto—Here we are offering new coat suits, new street frocks, new evening and afternoon dance frocks, new tailored blouses, new straw hats; and though, as you say, 'tis only January, they are welcomed as you would stretch out your hand for the first blown spray of peach, as it daringly lifts a pink face in the very wake of a late snow flurry.

The Tailored Suit for Spring

Is a Skirt With Distinctive Flare and a "Dear Little, Queer Little" Coat

Call it cafe au lait, sand color or putty shade, and you are safe—the varying versions of brown produced by diluting is the spring scheme: Black and blue are, of course, as staunch as ever, and as much sought after as always. Empire effects are produced by high waistlines and full falling peplums, belted or not, and buttoned with military precision to the neck. May we call your attention to the particularly distinctive suits shown here in an abundant variety of fabrics and generous range of styles, at the following modest prices—

$19.75, $25 and $35

More Elaborate Tailored Suits and White Serge Suits Very Ultra $40 to $65

The "Braided, Pocketed, Buttoned and Collared"—a La Militaire Street Dress of Serge and Satin and Serge

Adding suspenders, a belt here—a sash there—tunic, pointed back and front, with corded edges, short braided tunics, or none at all—the skirt that flares being sufficient unto itself—you have a full history of points of interest of the spring street dress—

$6.95 to $25

The Danse Frock—Afternoon and Evening

Peach-bloom-pink, with the shimmer of dew on it—crest-of-the-wave-blue, as looking through the foam to the blue mist like—frosty pink, like a freshly cut watermelon—these are evening shades one might correctly call delicious. Tulip tunics—one falling over the other, scalloped or bound, full flare skirts, banded with velvet or full frilled from toes up—

$30 and $35

IN THE SOCIAL WHIRL

By Isma Dooly.

"Efficiency is the keynote to real progress," say the wise ones who are looking about to see what philosophy they can apply to advance everybody in the onward direction. This efficiency must begin in the infant class of everything, inclusive of the infant class in dancing.

The most interesting class in Atlanta's social playground, when after business hours are over, good citizens apply the philosophy of a "little nonsense now and then," etc., is Miss Ethel Moulton's infant class in terpsichorean art. Among the members are Dr. W. S. Eikin, John K. Otley, Nancy M. Atkinson, Albert Howell, Hollins R. Randolph, J. W. Conway, William H. Kiser, John E. Murphy, J. D. Robinson and several others who, unlike those named, have not yet demonstrated in public.

Of the class, H. M. Atkinson so far has won the prize for faithful work with a practice making rapidly for perfection. Though there are stipulated hours for classes, Miss Moulton finds herself busy with her interested pupils on all occasions when dance music is played. They are very ambitious, and, although they are so far taking the simpler conservative ballroom or family dances, they are ambitious enough to wish in time to essay the Pavlova Gavotte. They like the music and the lithe grace required in that artistic dance, which the Russian danseuse created.

REGULAR DINNER-DANCES.

Though there have not been as many entertainments this week making the holiday season, the regular club dances, those at the Capital City, the Driving Club and the Druid Hills club, have been most happy occasions, the married and unmarried contingents joining forces at the afternoon dancing parties.

Added to the list of visitors this week is Miss Madge Bannigan of Providence, R. I., whose engagement to Mr. Philip L'Engle will bring her here in time as a resident. She is a bright and attractive young woman, whose father, the late William Bannigan, had many friends in Atlanta.

The arrival of Mrs. Bispham, of New York and Paris, to visit Mrs. Lee Lewman, will be the occasion of a series of happy gatherings in which Mrs. Bispham will be the central figure. She and Mrs. Lewman met in Paris, and a number of Atlanta tourists have met Mrs. Bispham in the French capital, and had been entertained by her. Though a native of New York state, she has resided in Paris for twenty years. She is in this country at present, having come to visit her brother, Robert C. Lowry, in New York.

Her kinsman, Colonel Robert J. Lowry, invited a party of twelve to meet her at the Driving Club last night. Mrs. Bispham wore an elegant toilet of black tulle, trimmed in satin jet, and white roses. Mrs. Bispham will return to New York in early February.

MISS ROGERS WEDS A PRINCE.

An international marriage which will be of interest to many Atlanta people is that of Miss Elizabeth Reed Rogers, of Kentucky, and Prince Christian, of Philipsthal-Barchfeld-Hesse, which took place in Berlin last Wednesday. Miss Rogers visited Atlanta two years ago as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Jackson, Mr. Jackson her kinsman. The St. Louis Globe-Democrat carries a story about the marriage as follows:

"The marriage in Berlin Thursday of Miss Elizabeth Reed Rogers and Prince Christian, of Philipsthal-Barchfeld-Hesse has an added interest to St. Louisans in the fact that the bride is a cousin of Mrs. Forrest Ferguson, of this city, being related through her mother, who was Miss Eunice Tomlin, of Tennessee.

"The bride is a Kentucky beauty, and has resided in New York at the Plaza, with her parents, but made her debut into society in Washington, D. C. Her father held the post of consul to Panama under President Taft. She is of a perfect blonde type, with curling golden hair and cornflower blue eyes. Her father is a Kentuckian, and lived and worked from his mother and is himself recognized one of the shrewdest lawyers in the United States. The family has resided much abroad.

The bride will not be permitted to bear the title of Princess Christian of Hesse, as also her husband will be no longer known by his princely title, but the title by which they will be known will be decided upon personally by the emperor and will be published by royal decree."

COMING SOCIAL EVENTS.

The Valentine ball at the Driving Club will conclude the social season, and will be a gala occasion, the club to include on the program of the ball many unique features.

During the Lenten season there will be many reading exercises planned, and the announcement of interpretative lectures on the operas by the Sunday Night club and by the Atlanta Woman's club, indicates the interest in music grand opera is inspiring.

There will be three brilliant weddings in April, two of the engagements leading to them not yet announced except among the intimate friends of the contracting parties.

The coming of Dr. William Norman Guthrie to lecture under the auspices of the Drama League, and Mr. Eugene Brieux, under the auspices of the Alliance Francaise, records Atlanta's size as enthusiastically as grand opera does.

Dr. Guthrie is one of the most scholarly men in America, and has international fame for his attainment in the literature and art of the drama. His first lecture here inspired the first steps in the establishment of a drama league, and a quickened interest in dramatic study. Atlanta now has one of the largest branches in the national drama movement, and Dr. Guthrie's second coming marks his recognition of Atlanta's worthiness to become a center for the study of fine arts.

His selection of a theme, "The Relation of the Drama and Religion," will give him the opportunity to describe his successful institutional work in connection with St. Mark's church in New York, where he has established a theater for the pleasure and instruction of his church in Europe.

The lecture of M. Brieux will be in French. He comes under the auspices of the Alliance Francaise, and indicates the large circle of people in the city who are students and lovers of the French language. M. Brieux goes to very few places in the south, but has had many engagements in the east and north-west. In Massachusetts, at Madam Brieux visited Dr. and Mrs. Homer Gage. Mrs. Gage has been decorated by the department of education of France for her advancement of the study of the French language in her country. She visited Atlanta last fall as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Otley.

PRETTY WOMEN IN PRETTY GOWNS.

As pretty as those read of, in the old days of the French salon, and with such a variety of styles, the women who were assembled at the dinner-dance at the Georgian Terrace Friday evening.

Mrs. Charles McGehee was one of the most attractive women wearing an apricot satin gown with tunic draperies of white chiffon and trimmings of crystal. Dr. McMurry at Taft Hall.

At 8 o'clock, on the evening of February 6, Frank M. McMurry, Ph. D., of Columbia university, will give a lecture at Taft hall, under the auspices of the Atlanta Public School Teachers' association. The subject of his lecture will be "The Psychology of the School." Dr. McMurry is an educator of national reputation. He is the author of several pedagogical works and text-books. He is professor of theory and practice of teaching in the teachers' college at Columbia university.

Invited to hear him are all the teachers of the city, the members of the board of education, the mayor and council and all interested in educational matters.

Medals Won.

The gold medals offered by Miss Mabel D. McIver in her mid-term contest for recitation in music were won by little Misses Harriet Marcus and Lorraine Sale.

Dinner Party.

Dr. and Mrs. Spencer R. Stone entertained at dinner last night at their home in Ansley Park in compliment to Dr. Charles M. Colderwood, of Manchester, Mass.

ERNEST JORDAN.

Social Circle, Ga., January 23.—(Special)—The marriage of Miss Lollie Belle Ernest and Mr. Leland K. Jordan of Monticello, Va., by Rev. Calvin A. solemnized Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock at the Methodist church in Social Circle. The church was artistically decorated in smilax; the altar was completely banked in ferns and stately palms. A beautiful musical program was rendered before the entrance of the bride and groom. The bride, who entered the church, led by the ushers, Mr. E. L. Almond and Mr. William Roper, of Monticello, and the groomsmen, Mr. Glover Jordan, of Monticello, and Mr. Fred Barnes, of Covington.

Among the bridesmaids, Miss Mildred Finney, of Haddock, and Miss Nell Hurst. They wore alpine dresses of lace and pink trimmings and black hats trimmed in tiny pink roses.

The bride wore a gown of Miss Killarney roses. The bride, who entered with her maid of honor, Miss Anderson of Covington, wore a gown of oak, was met at the altar by the groom and best man, Mr. Henry Jordan, of Atlanta. Miss Henderson was beautifully gowned in white lace and pink, with hat to match, and carried a shower bouquet of pink roses.

The bride looked lovely in her traveling suit of midnight blue, trimmed in fur, with hat and accessories to match. Her only ornament was a diamond lavallier, the gift of the groom. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies.

The ceremony was impressively performed by Rev. Augustus Ernest, pastor of the bride. Immediately afterwards Mr. and Mrs. Jordan left for a wedding trip to Florida, after which they will be at home to their friends in Monticello.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Jordan and Miss Nell Hurst, of Atlanta; Mr. and Mrs. William Roper and Mr. Glover Jordan, of Monticello; Miss Minnie Brown Henderson, of Haddock; Miss Ruth Beane, of Montgomery, Ala.; Mrs. Ona Athan Jarman, Brown, of Covington; Mr. Henry Jordan, of Atlanta, and Mr. Fred Barnes, of Covington.

JAMES-DOWD.

Tifton, Ga., January 23.—(Special)—An interesting social event of the section was the marriage Thursday night of Mrs. Forest Hill James, of Atlanta, and Professor Oliver Dowd, principal of the Poulton schools, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. S. S. Poulton, in Tifton, Ga., by Rev. S. Poulton, performed the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Dyar entertained a number of the younger married set in a most delightful manner one evening at their home.

Master A. W. Dodd, Jr., was at home to his young friends on Saturday afternoon to celebrate his seventh birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Brogdon were host and hostess at a rook party on Friday evening.

The Symphony club are preparing to give a musical act at an early date.

G. N. & I. COLLEGE NOTES.

A voice and piano recital was held in the auditorium on Saturday afternoon of last week. The following students took part: Marie E. Bowles, Lillian Hendon, Louise Cook, Marian Miller, Frances Livingston, Allen Parker, Ruth E. Finkle, Annie Laurie Trawick. The numbers were unusually well rendered, the exercises and recital work being a great help to these young musicians.

hall to begin, the girls enjoy this pleasant diversion. Stereopticon views from all over the world have from time to time been included.

The students are looking forward to the coming of Miss Dunaway some time soon in her adaptation of "Daddy Long Legs." They were delighted with her giving of "The Lady of the Decoration" last year, and will give her a warm welcome.

The time for the semi-annual tests is drawing near and except for a little natural excitement most of the students can look for them with the greatest complacency. They no longer bring that feeling of helplessness that the old-time examinations used to bring, for they know that the teacher will not use his or her power to give catch questions, but wishes merely to have some idea of what the pupil has absorbed during the term.

IN THE MARRIAGE WITH MARIE LOUISE IN THE PATH OF NAPOLEON

100 Years After His Downfall

By JAMES MORGAN

The mating of the eagle with a daughter of the Caesars, the alliance of the Corsican with the Hapsburgs, forms another amazing chapter in the story of Napoleon.

Mr. Morgan sketches today Napoleon as swift and surprising in courtship as in battle, his marriage by proxy with the 18-year old daughter of the Emperor of Austria within the city walls that he had laid in ruins only four months before, his dash to meet the bride, his conquest of the girl's life-long prejudices against him, their honeymoon retreat, and Josephine's conduct.

THE SECOND MARRIAGE

- DATES AND EVENTS—AGE 40. November 22, 1809—Napoleon asked for hand of Grand Duchess Anna of Russia... December 15, 1809—Divorced Josephine... December 16, 1809—Austria formally suggested marriage with Archduchess Marie Louise...

The world stood astounded when the betrothal of Napoleon and the Archduchess Marie Louise was announced in the middle of February, 1810. The public had assumed that the czar's sister was to be the new wife of the divorced emperor.

In another week Napoleon, who had personally held aloof from the secret discussions which had been going on between the emperor and his advisers, lost his patience with the czar and refused longer to let Alexander tangle with his woeing, Anna's mother, the dowager empress, had reluctantly yielded her consent.

Turning in disgust from the chattering Russians, the emperor suddenly summoned the Austrian ambassador, Prince Schwarzenberg, to the Tuileries, and announced that he would marry Marie Louise if the prince would sign the contract at once.

At least one of Napoleon's own advisers foretold the consequences. Cambaceres, who insisted that the emperor would have to fight whichever power was disappointed in the marriage, favored the choice of a Russian wife because Napoleon was "familiar with the road to Vienna but might not find the road to St. Petersburg."

None of Napoleon's great military campaigns had spread more consternation than the report of his capture of the 15-year-old Austrian archduchess, his always shortsighted foes viewed as the consummation of their ruin.

NAPOLEON SURPRISING HIS BRIDE ON THE ROAD

MARIE LOUISE By Gerard

Looking Backward From St. Helena

The Austrian marriage was an abyss covered with flowers.

Marie Louise lying before the vanguard of her chosen bridegroom, across the river from the capital the charred and battered ruins of Aspern, Essling and Wagram continued to bear grim witness to the deadly enmity between him and the Hapsburgs.

MARIE LOUISE

When at last Metternich pretended to consult Marie Louise herself about the marriage, she only asked, "What are my father's wishes?" She had been brought up to entertain no plans of her own and to know no law except her father's will.

None of Napoleon's great military campaigns had spread more consternation than the report of his capture of the 15-year-old Austrian archduchess, his always shortsighted foes viewed as the consummation of their ruin.

WOMEN OF RUSSIA

By SASHA KROPOTKIN

MME. IDA RUBENSTEIN THE FAMOUS RUSSIAN ACTRESS.
© UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD

RUSSIAN PEASANT WOMAN.
© UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD

THIS YOUNG RUSSIAN WOMAN WAS BORN IN ONE OF THE POOREST PROVINCES OF THE TSAR'S DOMAIN. SHE CAME TO AMERICA IN STEERAGE, AT THE AGE OF TWO YEARS, ALTHOUGH ONLY 24 YEARS OLD SHE HAS COMPLETED A HIGH SCHOOL COURSE, WORKED AS A STENOGRAPHER, STUDIED LAW AND HAS BEEN ADMITTED TO THE BAR. SHE IS NOW ASSOCIATE EDITOR OF A LEADING AMERICAN MAGAZINE.

At an early age the Russian girl is acknowledged as an individual. No one in the family circle dares to suggest that her personality and its claims are of less importance than that of her brother. Her parents often cry on the side of exaggerated respect of her freedom. But seldom this freedom is very rarely abused. Perhaps she is too serious and too taken up with mapping out her "career" to be injured by it.

Nearly every Russian girl "does" something after her education is finished, and the something almost always means serious work and not amusement or sport.

Two of the most charming women of my acquaintance were allowed the most unlimited freedom in their earliest years. Their parents allowed these two girls, fifteen and sixteen years old, to take a villa in the Crimea and to spend the summer there, while they themselves went to Kissingen. The girls had a "chaperon"—a cousin, aged eighteen. These young women spent their days bathing and boating and making jam. But they also put in some hard work, the two younger ones passing a stiff examination on their return to Petrograd in the autumn.

These privileges of freedom seem to date from a very distant period, for we find a young princess in the twelfth century defying her parents and refusing all her tutors—and this at the mature age of twelve. This princess—Evdosinia of Polotsk—then retired to a convent and, desiring to found a library, she began to buy and to copy various books. Then she founded a convent of her own, where she taught the nuns to read and to write. Later she also founded a monastery, and for forty years she ruled both institutions with great success.

The spirit of independence and the pursuit of a personal ideal which drove the young Princess Evdosinia to leave her home still lives in Russia. To-day one can find scores of young girls, often of rich families, leaving distant homes, even against the wishes of their parents, and coming to the university towns to study. They live mostly alone or two or three together, very modestly, sharing what they have with other students. They will pawn or sell their last bit of jewelry to pay for some poorer friend's fees—or perhaps dinners.

women students and various women who form a committee.

One of the first steps taken by the public in Russia after the declaration of the war was the announcement that in such restaurants free meals would be served to the entire families of those students who had gone to serve their country.

The Russian woman has perhaps greater opportunities than any other woman of showing her powers of organization. Every country suffers periodically from some national disaster, but Russia has almost continual disasters in the form of famines and cholera—the latter scourge being practically annual.

The women play a most important part in the actual work of relief in both cases. The work during a famine is heartrending but comparatively simple, though there is often disease to be fought at the same time. But to work in a cholera stricken district is more than heartrending. It is dangerous in the extreme. The lack of proper hospitals, the insanitary conditions in the villages, the inadequate and uncomfortable housing of the doctors and nurses combine to make the work ghastly. It requires real heroism to volunteer for such work. Yet you will find women of all classes flocking to the stricken district, nursing the sick and caring for the children, themselves worn out, hollow eyed and often hungry, working till they drop.

The Red Cross organization is always to the fore both during famines and epidemics.

Between 1897 and 1900, when there were a series of terrible famines, this society spent more than 7,000,000 roubles (about £70,000) for relief, and another 7,000,000 in medical aid, and yet their capital not only remained untouched but was increased, so numerous were the donations received.

The Russian Red Cross was, by the way, founded by two women, Mme. Sabina and Baroness Frotzky, the latter also a Russian, though bearing a German name.

There are innumerable young women who are already veterans in this kind of relief work, and who with such training are likely to be of the greatest service when they undertake real Red Cross work.

There are numbers of other societies also founded by women, and working more or less on the same lines as the Red Cross. They all have permanent hospitals and staffs, and attached to them are convalescent homes, almshouses and often schools.

The best known of these societies is the one founded by Princess Shubovskiy. Four sisters of this society, with the founder herself, went through the war in Serbia in 1876. During the Russo-Turkish war there were already 118 of them caring for the wounded. And since then in every war in which Russia has taken part and in most of the big epidemics there have been sisters of this society. Many of them have received medals for their "valuable help and acted when all or most of the men are withdrawn from it. In Russia women fill so many posts which in other countries are the privilege of men that they are still there to carry on the work when the men are gone—and in any case they are willing to take up a variety of occupations from which they are barred at ordinary times. It is true that they are welcomed and are given all kinds of jobs. Women act as clerks in banks and they occupy every kind of position in the municipal organization, even in times of peace. In certain villages they are occasionally elected as "dessiatki"—that is, a kind of policeman—among whose duties is that of collecting the young men whose time has come to serve in the army.

During the Napoleonic wars there was even a woman "starosta" (elder of a village). Nastasia—that was her name—led her villagers, armed with scythes and pitchforks, against the French invaders and took a great number of prisoners.

The Cossack women for many years fought side by side with their men, going into battle armed with anything they could lay hands on. This tradition—for it became a tradition that the women should take an active part in any battle—seems to have originated in 1774, when the Cossack town of Naur was being besieged by the Tartars. The Cossack women helped by pouring not only boiling water and tar on the besiegers, but also the soup which they were cooking. Finally they became so bellicose that they sallied forth from the town dressed in their best red sarafans, armed and angry, and attacked the Tartars with great success.

And the Russian peasant women of to-day seem capable of living up to these traditions. Only a few days ago, when a German aeroplane fell in a village near the frontier, the women who were bringing in the harvest rushed to the spot and smashed the machine, belaboring the two aviators with their fists and hay forks. They overcame them, although the Germans endeavored to defend themselves with revolvers, and held them until some soldiers arrived and rescued the prisoners.

The women are ready, however, to show their energy in more peaceful ways as well, and we hear they are conducting almost the entire tram and postal service in both the capitals.

The idea of having a "flower" day to benefit such institutions is a very familiar one in Russia. There, as here, the idea originated with a woman. Every possible flower has its day. Marguerites are sold for funds for consumptives; lilies of the valley for children's crèches and homes; the wheat ear for the famine funds and so on. Recently a flag day was inaugurated and $20,000 was raised. This sum is destined for the first member of the Russian army who enters Berlin.

During a war more than at any other time the general efficiency of the women plays an important part in the success of their country. This is especially so where there is conscription, for it is inevitable that life should become dis-

SYNOPSIS—Doors open upon strange things. How many locked doors are there in this world? How many people are there trying to find "The Master Key"? Thomas Gallon found gold. He thought of two things: his daughter Ruth and gold for her. Gallon died because his partner, Wilkerson, whom he thought he had killed in the desert, came back and demanded a share of his find. Wilkerson is seeking gold for the sake of a woman. John Dorr, the mining engineer in whose charge Ruth was left, is also fighting to find the secret which Thomas Gallon apparently took with him to his grave.

The morning brought John Dorr, Ruth Gallon and Thomas Kane together to discuss the problems before them. The papers so necessary for the consummation of the deal that Everett had proposed were again lost; where they were gone, whether they had indeed fallen into Wilkerson's hands, none could tell. But more immediate yet was the need of extricating John. Two plainclothesmen already sat near by, ready to take him to prison on a charge of killing Henry Pell.

"It's really only a formality," said the manager of the hotel. "The man was a robber and Mr. Dorr tried to capture him, as he had every right to do, and the man was killed."

This failed to comfort Ruth. To her mind the presence of the burly officers, the fact that John was under arrest in a strange city, made her feel that her burdens were too great to bear. She sat holding the old cook's hand till Everett should come. He had already telephoned and she tried to be brave till he should come.

Everett arrived and the moment she saw him she heaved a sigh of relief. He was so capable looking, so cool, so genuinely cordial to John that even Tom Kane softened his grim visage a little.

"I'm under arrest," John told him. "The officers were good enough to let me stay here till you came. Now I must be off. Let me introduce you all around."

This done, John Dorr went on, "They can tell you all about things, and when you've learned the worst come down and get me out, if you can."

Everett agreed and Dorr rose, and with a smile, said good-by to his companions. As he left the hotel with an officer on either side of him, Ruth broke down and cried. Tom Kane comforted her as best he could till Everett suggested that they had best go to some more private place and discuss matters.

In Ruth's room she and the cook explained affairs briefly. Everett following their narrative carefully up to the incidents of the night before. When Ruth had finished and the cook was silent, Everett thought a moment, then he laughed.

"I don't mean to make fun of all this," he apologized, "but I've known John Dorr for years and this is precisely the kind of trouble he reveals in."

"But he's in jail!" Ruth protested tearfully. "True enough," was the reply. "That is the first thing I must do, get him out. I'll be off now and see the district attorney and bail him out."

"Please hurry!" Ruth pleaded. "Don't worry," was the cheerful response. A moment later he was gone, promising to bring John back with him.

"What do you think of Mr. Everett?" Ruth demanded of Tom Kane. The old man lit his pipe and scrutinized the ceiling. "Well," he said judicially, "considering the looks of them on Wilkerson's side and them on John's side, I should think that this Everett was on the right side."

With this judgment she had to be content. But she insisted that he tell her all about the conditions at the Master Key mine. "I know you haven't told me all the truth," she said.

"Well," he answered her, "there's not much to tell one way and a heap in another. The mine's practically shut down. You know, first you went away, then John and then Wilkerson. Pretty much all was left was me and Bill Tubbs. Bill, he kind of represented Wilkerson and I stuck up for John. The result was that things went to the bad and the boys they come to me and want to know how long they've got to lay off."

"I suppose you mean how long before a pay day," I says to 'em. 'So far as I know nobody has laid you off."

"They agreed with me, but said they couldn't feed their folks without money, and if they got no money for it, why work?"

"They haven't been paid, then?"

"No. And Wilkerson cut off all credit at the store. I guess I got in bad with Tubbs when I divided up a lot of flour and spuds that was in the cook shanty among the worst-off ones. There was some ugly talk, and before I could kind of settle the boys' minds they treated Bill pretty roughly. So I just told myself that I would come to San Francisco and explain things—how Wilkerson had deserted the camp and the mine was closed down and your people were starving."

"Oh!" mourned Ruth, aghast at the blunt story. "And I seem to have been unfortunate all around, but I know that John will fix things."

Tom Kane fixed his honest old eyes on the girl and shook his head. "I don't want to discourage you, Ruthie," he said, quietly, "but until that man Wilkerson is out of the mine for good, you can't do more than patch matters up temporarily."

The Fresh Plot.

Meanwhile, Wilkerson and Jean Darnell were anxiously awaiting news from Henry Pell.

When Drake arrived with the morning papers and said nothing articulate and only pointed to the headlines on the first page, both Wilkerson and Mrs. Darnell knew that something had happened again to spoil their plans. It was Wilkerson who snatched up the paper and read the news:

HOTEL THIEF HURLED TO DEATH

Guests of the Manx Hotel Have Fierce Struggle With Hotel Robber.

Shortly before midnight last night, Miss Ruth Gallon, a guest at the Hotel Manx, entered her room to find a masked man looting her desk. Her cry for help frightened the thief and he made for the fire escape, followed by Mr. John Dorr, another guest, who heard Miss Gallon's call. Mr. Dorr pursued the man to the roof and in the ensuing struggle, the desperado was either flung or fell to the street below. He was instantly killed.

Shortly afterward the body was identified by the police as that of Samuel Price, alias Henry Pell, an ex-convict and drug fiend.

Wilkerson read no further. He turned his ghastly face, on Mrs. Darnell and said huskily, "He's dead!"

"Well, he won't tell any tales," was the cold response. "The question is, did he get the papers?" To this question there was no satisfactory answer until Wilkerson read down further and learned that nothing of value had been found on Pell's body.

"So he didn't get the deeds and Ruth still has them," Mrs. Darnell said bitterly. "That is the way all your plans succeed."

Wilkerson flushed. "There is one comfort," he said in an ugly tone. "Dorr is to be held for killing him."

"For how long?" sneered Jean. "Until his friends get him out! And meanwhile you do nothing!"

Wilkerson was thinking quickly. Suddenly he interrupted Jean to ask for pen and ink. She got them and he sat down at the table to write. Drake and Mrs. Darnell kept up a desultory conversation until he had finished.

There was a queer look in Jean's eyes as she

They rode for some time and as neither of them was acquainted with the city it did not occur to them that they were being rapidly conveyed into a part of town only partly built up and now veiled in dense clouds of swirling fog.

"It's a long ways," Ruth remarked several times, but Kane merely grunted. He was busily pondering some method of extricating John Dorr.

Suddenly the car swerved around a corner, dived down a steep hill and came to a stop before a big gray building—the boarded up residence of an absentee. Reaching back Drake opened the door and Ruth sprang out. A figure darted across the sidewalk and she felt herself clutched by the arm. She looked into the gleaming cruel eyes of Wilkerson.

"I've got you now!" he said triumphantly. "Oh!" moaned Ruth, shrinking back in terror. "Yes, indeed," Wilkerson taunted her.

But at that moment he heard another voice, stern, commanding and familiar. He looked around into the muzzle of Tom Kane's revolver.

For the moment they faced each other, while Ruth shrank back still farther. The old man's eyes gleamed and his trigger finger seemed to rest on the trigger with a precise and delicate touch.

"You here!" said Wilkerson with an oath.

Suddenly the old man's temper flared up. The other saw death in his eyes, turned on his heel

The Papers.

Wilkerson's last failure had driven him furious. He did not know what to do, and he especially dreaded returning to Jean Darnell with the news. He walked the streets for a long time, lunched in a cheap house and then doggedly started downtown. On the way he bought an evening paper and read of Drake's arrest.

As he expected, she flew into a towering rage; but her keen mind saw that Drake must be pacified, and she managed to control herself at last. She read the account carefully and then looked through the rest of the paper for some item about John Dorr. Her eye lit upon an advertisement, which she read twice before speaking, then she pointed it out to Wilkerson. He, too, read it:

"FOUND—Deeds to certain mining property. On proof of ownership same will be returned. Reward expected. S. J. C., 201 Hill street."

"They must be the papers," he acknowledged. "Fell probably threw them away for fear of their being used as evidence against him, and someone picked them up."

"This time I shall see to the matter," Jean said sharply. "Whether they are the papers or not we must be sure."

"Other people will see that ad," he suggested.

"All the more reason for hurry," she snapped. Then she called her maid.

ashman and his wife think they were in possession of papers of extraordinary value. She pulled out her purse and held out five dollars. The man was taking it. His wife intervened.

"Twenty dolla," she said cunningly. Estelle bargained for some moments, and then said in a tone that was decisive, "If you show me the papers and they are the ones I want I'll give you fifteen dollars and no more."

The deeds were produced and a glance told her that they belonged to Ruth. She paid the money and hurried away.

Too Late!

Everett and Dorr had gone over the situation thoroughly together and the broker agreed that he would help out in the putting the Master Key mine on its feet again.

"I think I can do it tomorrow," he said. "Just let me have all the papers and I'll go over them tonight."

"Ruth has them," John replied. "We'd best go up and get them now."

Ruth received them cheerfully and promptly went to her trunk for the deeds. Her first search was not rewarded and she lifted a puzzled face to John. Then she once more went through all her belongings. It was fruitless. She then remembered the desk and searched it with the same result.

"They're gone!" she stammered. "Impossible!" said Dorr. "They must be somewhere here."

"No," she mourned. "I've looked everywhere."

Everett was the first to suggest that no time should be lost in locating the missing property. He sent for the evening papers and delved into the "Lost and Found" columns, with the result that he very soon handed a paper to Dorr and pointed out the advertisement which had attracted Wilkerson's attention.

Half an hour later John Dorr turned away from the ashman's door and said to Everett, "I'll bet that was one of Wilkerson's crowd. We must notify the police before he can get away."

They had soon told their difficulties to the sympathetic ear at headquarters and started back for the hotel. John was in the dumps.

"It seems as if everything goes wrong when I try to do something for that little woman," he growled.

"I begin to think myself that you are playing in hard luck," was the reply. "But I always did like a good fight, and this promises to be one. I'll stick, John."

They found Ruth and Tom Kane anxiously awaiting them. John simply stated the case and then turned to comfort Ruth. He was startled to see how white she was.

"Ruth! Ruth!" he cried in alarm, "what is the matter?"

There was no answer. She had fainted away. All else was forgotten for the time being. A maid and a doctor were quickly summoned and presently Ruth revived. Old Tom Kane was seated beside her patting her hand.

"The papers!" she moaned.

"Don't you worry about the papers," he said promptly. "We'll look after them."

"But the folks at the mine—who will look after them," she pleaded.

The old cook swore that he would do so himself with John's help. At this point the doctor interfered with orders that she was to be perfectly quiet.

In the other room they held a consultation. The physician listened to their explanation of what the girl had been through and then said gravely, "She must have an absolute change of scene for a time. Get her away from here instantly."

"But where?" Dorr demanded.

"Why not take her to the southern part of the state for a little while?" he suggested. "But whatever you do, do it quickly. Her nerves won't stand much more."

"I know just the place," Everett said. "Take her to Los Angeles and then out to the hills to some quiet hotel. You can catch the night train."

"Nonsense!" Everett said quickly. "All of you go with her. I'll look after matters here for a week. If need be, I'll go down to the mine myself."

The Escape.

With the papers safely in her possession at last, Jean Darnell became once more the guiding spirit, and told Wilkerson that there was only one thing for them to do: get out of town immediately.

"Drake is in jail and we'll have to bail him out through some third party. We aren't trust ourselves in the hands of the police. You can trust Dorr to be looking for those papers right this minute."

"I promised Drake by a messenger that we would have him out before night," he responded.

"We must save ourselves first," she said angrily. "And we must be disguised."

After some argument, Wilkerson agreed, and they decided to go south.

"It will give us time to plan things out and you can work things out at your leisure," Jean told him.

"But how shall I disguise myself?" he demanded.

Mrs. Darnell's eyes gleamed maliciously. "You must go as an old man," she told him. "My father, you see."

He rebelled, but finally acquiesced, and within a short time Jean and the maid had transformed him into a very presentable old man.

"Now go and buy our tickets," she ordered. "Estelle and I will pack up while you are gone."

"Tickets to where?"

"Tickets to Los Angeles," she snapped.

So he departed, to return in an hour with the tickets and an expressman.

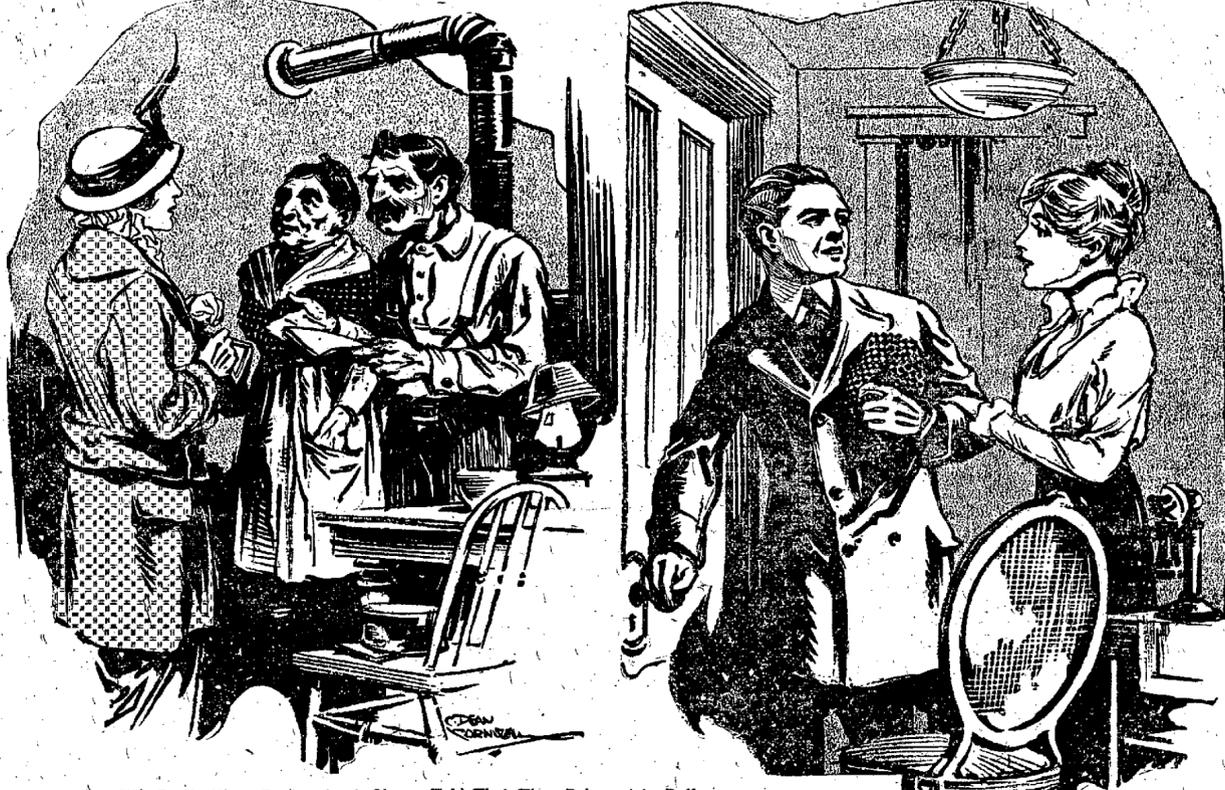

When the trunks were gone, Mrs. Darnell sat down with Wilkerson and they went over the situation again, with the result that she took his advice and disguised herself and made Estelle also do the same.

After a hasty supper they then called a taxi and went to the station. Mrs. Darnell and her maid immediately entered the drawing room reserved for them and Wilkerson fed the porter to make up his berth in the body of the car immediately.

"Safe!" he muttered to himself, as the wheels began to turn and he saw the faces of several plainclothesmen on the platform.

Neither he nor Mrs. Darnell were aware that in another car Ruth and her maid and John Dorr and Tom Kane were also heading for the south.

took the sheet he handed her and glanced at the writing. "I see you still can do it," she murmured. "Read it," he growled.

Mrs. Darnell read it through silently and then aloud:

"Dear Ruth: I hate to ask you to come down and see me in the jail, but I have something very important to tell you. Bring the papers, too. JOHN DORR."

"Are you sure he is in jail?" demanded the woman when she had finished, "and what is the idea of getting the papers into his hands?"

"He'll just turn them over to Everett," muttered Drake.

Wilkerson smiled slyly. "The idea is that Drake here will disguise himself as a chauffeur, take this note to the hotel, see that it reaches Ruth and then drive her supposedly to the jail, but really to where I'll meet him."

They discussed the plan and at last agreed that it was feasible.

It was an hour later that Drake drove his rented car up before the hotel and delivered his note. It found Ruth still deep in conversation with Tom Kane and yet anxious for the return of Dorr and Everett. On the presentation of the note, which Wilkerson had forged, she instantly took alarm.

"John must be in trouble and Mr. Everett can't get him out," she said. "He's written for me to come down to the jail and see him and bring the papers."

"Humph!" said Kane. "That sounds funny to me."

Ruth nodded, looking at the note. Then she said, more cheerfully, "I'll dress anyway. Maybe he needs me. Now, you old dear, leave me awhile."

Kane departed and Ruth quickly changed into street dress. While she was doing this the bellboy returned to say that a machine was waiting for her.

"The one that brought the note," he said. "He says he was told to wait."

"Oh!" she exclaimed. "Tell him I'll be right down."

When the boy had gone she called Tom Kane on the telephone and told him that she was going. "John sent a car for me," she added.

"All right," came back the answer. "I'll just travel along. Maybe I might help John myself."

So it was agreed and they met in the lobby, where Ruth showed the note to the clerk in her impulsive way. Something in that official's expression made the old cook unobtrusively take out his revolver and see that it was in good condition. He followed Ruth to the street and into the waiting machine.

This move disconcerted Drake. He had not intended to have two passengers; but he saw no help for it and merely nodded when Ruth ordered him to take her to the city prison. He started his engine and they sped off up the hill.

and ran as fast as he could up the street. Without a second's hesitation Kane swung his weapon round till it covered Drake, cowering at his wheel.

"Now you drive us back to the hotel," he thundered. "And if you make a false move I'll drill you as sure as God gave me good shooting eyes."

Drake saw that he was helpless and sulkily waited till they were in and then turned his car back toward the center of the city.

Tom Kane sat grimly just behind him with his gun ready. And his mind was piecing things together. Suddenly he saw a policeman on his beat and realized that luck was playing his cards for him. He ordered Drake to halt and hailed the officer. To that somewhat astonished individual the cook explained briefly that he had just foiled an abduction plot and that the chauffeur was in it. Though Drake strenuously denied the charge the policeman decided that it was a case for the captain.

"I'll just ride in front here and we'll go to headquarters," he remarked. "You can put up that gun, old fellow, for I'll see that young fellow doesn't cut up any monkeyshines."

In the meantime Everett had successfully managed Dorr's business and he had been released on nominal bail for a hearing. "And I guess you won't find us very anxious to make it hard for you," said the prosecuting attorney.

Free again, John insisted on taking the quickest route back to the hotel. Everett, sympathetic in this, agreed and in a few moments they were at the hotel inquiring for Ruth.

"Why, she left only a little while ago to see you in the prison," said the clerk. "She had a note from you."

"I wrote no note," said John. "Here it is," was the response. "She left it on the desk in her hurry."

Eagerly John snatched the sheet of paper, but the instant his eyes lit on it he turned a furious face to Everett.

"It's a forgery—a trick," he said. "I never wrote it!"

Together they went outside and from the starter learned that a car had driven up, that the chauffeur had delivered a note and that later Ruth Gallon had come down and been driven off. "There was an old gentleman with her, Mr. Kane, I believe," the starter added.

John heaved a sigh of relief. "At any rate, Tom will see that she doesn't come to harm," he said.

After a few more questions, which showed them the futility of trying to find Ruth, they re-entered the hotel and settled down to a discussion of business. They were interrupted by the return of Ruth and the cook, who recounted their adventures.

"I'll get Wilkerson," John Dorr said quietly, when they had finished. "Meanwhile we must get ahead with our fixing up of the affairs of the Master Key mine."

"I'll Be Off Now and Bail Him Out," Was Everett's Cheerful Response.

"Estelle," she said, "I want you to dress for the street and go on an errand for me. It is very important and you must hurry."

"Yes, madame."

"And if you show good judgment you shan't be sorry. You know how Miss Gallon dresses and acts. I want you to impersonate her for a little while."

"But, madame—"

"There is no danger at all," Mrs. Darnell went on. "All you have to do is to go to this address and get those papers."

The maid looked at the advertisement and finally consented to go to the Hill street address and see if they were really Ruth's deeds, and if so, recover them. In a few moments she had departed on her errand, and Wilkerson and Jean once more resigned themselves to waiting.

Estelle tripped along the street to a car line and took the first car that came along, which, the conductor informed her, crossed the street she sought.

Arriving at her street she got off and found herself in a neighborhood inhabited by very poor people. She looked with disgust at the tumble-down shanties and dirty shacks that littered the rubbish heaped yards. Two blocks up from the car line she found her number, a house slightly better kept than most. But she noticed in the yard an uptight ashman's cart. In the rear was a rickety stable. She entered the gate and rang the bell.

A very large, ill-dressed Italian woman opened the door, letting out a tremendous odor of garlic and cheese. She surveyed her caller with suspicion and then beamed.

"Oh, you come looka de papes?" she demanded. Estelle merely showed a copy of the advertisement.

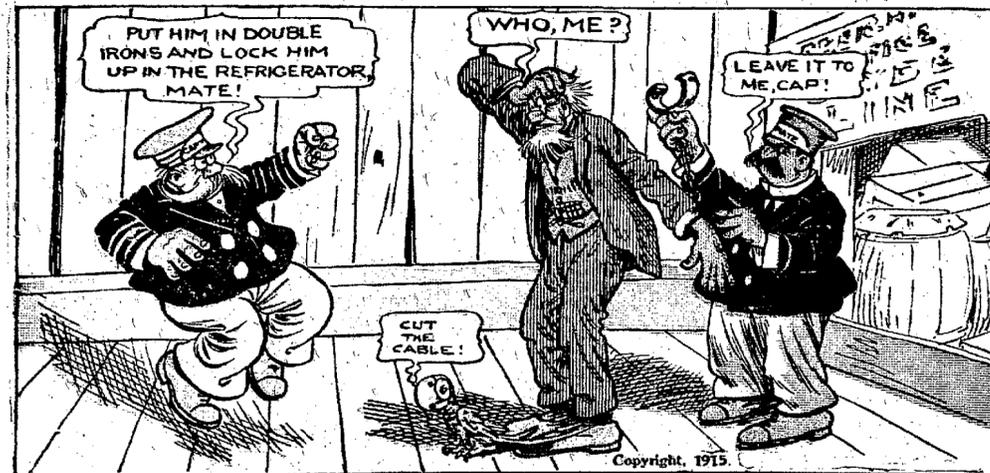

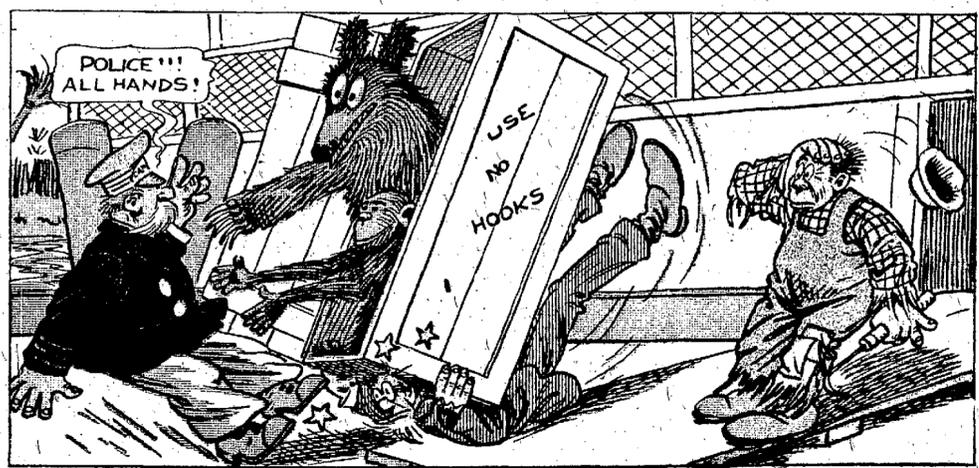

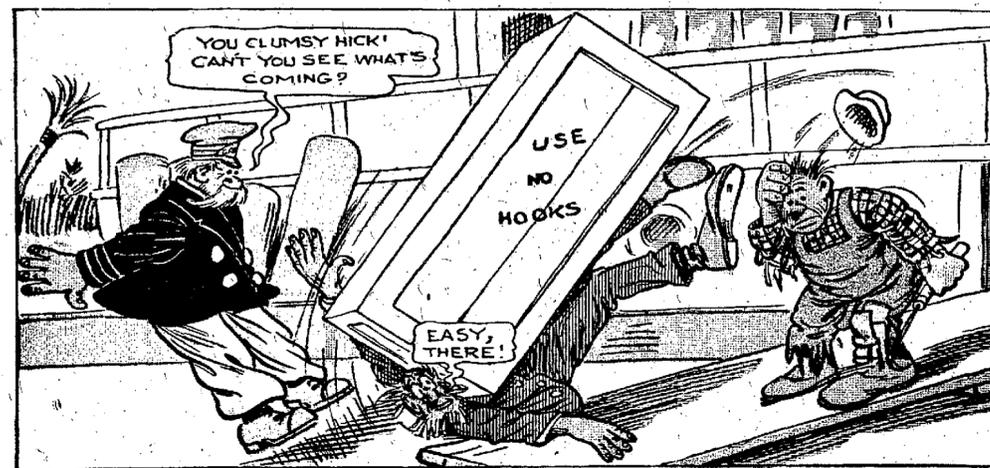

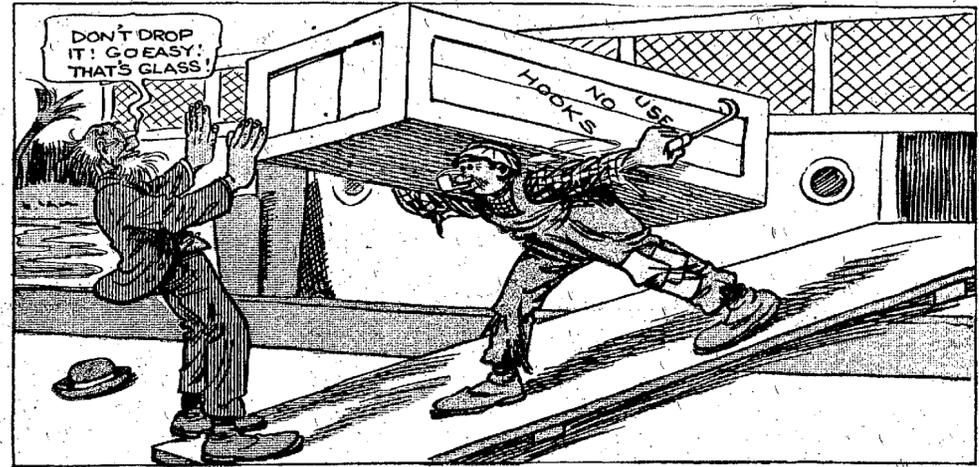

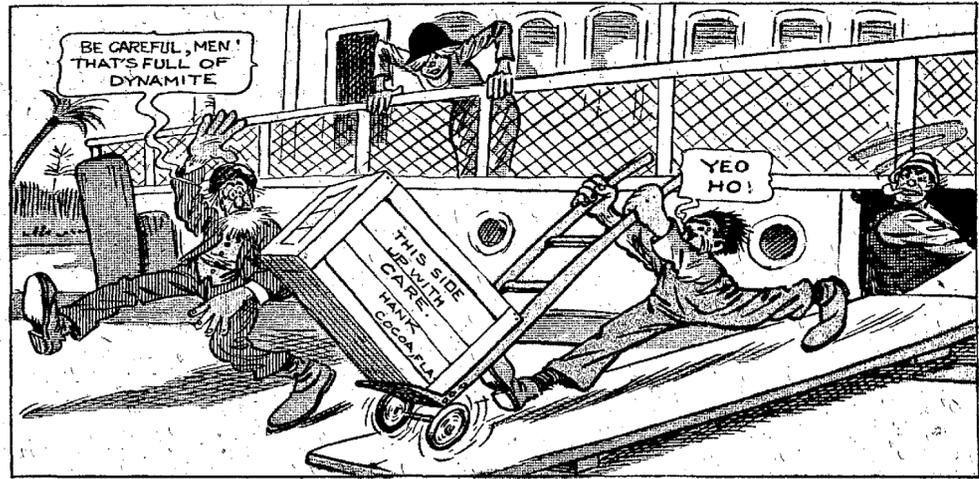

"Yes, my husband, he put that in de pape," the woman said, losing her smile.

For some moments Estelle tried to get a glimpse of the documents. The Italian herself came on the scene and demanded a full description. When Estelle said that they had been lost from the Manx hotel he nodded and explained that he had been removing the ashes therefrom, when his eye had been caught by the folded papers, but he still insisted on an accurate description, which the maid could not give. At last she said quietly, "The papers are of no value to you, and I am authorized to pay a good reward for them."

At the word reward there was a change, and the woman demanded to know how much it would be. Estelle thought rapidly. It had been impressed on her that haste was necessary. She decided on offering a goodly sum, yet not enough to make the

SURRENDERS

By RICHARD G. CONOVER

SURRENDER OF BURGOYNE TO GATES OCT. 17th 1777. FROM "THE STORY OF THE REVOLUTION," BY HENRY CABOT LODGE, COPYRIGHT BY CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS.

FATE has set a date on the calendar of the new year for the surrender of one or more of the big armies of Europe now in death grapple. It may not be the entire force of either the Allies or the Germans that will lay down arms. Perhaps it will be a wing or a division of soldiers assigned to war work in a particular department, district or city. But the surrender will take place just as sure as spring and summer and autumn and winter of 1915 will come and go. Past wars forecast it.

There has never been an epoch of armed conflict of the first magnitude without its surrenders, large and small, between the boom of the first gun and the scratch of the pens on the treaty of peace. The fighting tension becomes more taut in one place than another during long campaigns and snaps to a climax at some particular spot. It is impossible to go on with a war plan in entirety so that the troops of a nation all share the same fortune of conflict. Surrender must have a certain percentage of happening the same as the battle, the retreat and the pursuit must have theirs.

The length of fighting line and the immense area not only traversed but occupied by armed men in this greatest war in the history of the world make the likely vicissitudes much more varied than ever before. Three million men on a side cannot keep constantly fighting and not run into situations and conditions that force a surrender. Sections of them are bound to be caught in the "jam" and "pinched" Germans or Allies, the occurrence is imminent.

While the charge of the pitched battle and the assault of the siege bring the victor a greater glory, nevertheless the forcing of a surrender is a feat of arms not despised by the most famous of the fighting captains of history. The great Napoleon deemed the Austrian surrender at Ulm without the firing of a single gun or the loss of a life one of his most brilliant performances. War annals do not reveal an exact duplicate of this event, although surrenders approximating it in results, with inconsequential loss, have always gratified the victor general as much as a field triumph and added as certainly to his fame.

At times have been surrendered following a pitched battle, or following a siege, or following an assault on a fortress too briefly occupied to be deemed a siege, or following a hemming in by a larger army, so that there is no chance of escape. The Ulm surrender was of the latter kind. Measured by big things the surrender of the French to the Germans at Sedan, September 2, 1870, is the greatest field event of the kind in history. The surrender of Metz and other fortresses that were its complement, during the same war, were the most noted fortress events in history. Sedan is still a fruitful source of study to military students.

The battle of Sedan that forced the French surrender was fought September 1, 1870. Bad generalship placed the defeated army in a position where finally the Germans were able to encircle it with a complete ring of belching cannon. Instead of being able to combine with the other French army, already bottled up in Metz, the troops of Napoleon III. were completely surrounded. Their force of 90,000 was opposed by 154,000 of the German allies, who had 710 guns to 468 put in service by the French. Eight thousand killed and wounded was the German loss; seventeen thousand the French. Twenty thousand prisoners were taken by the victors—among them Emperor Napoleon III. This was the status of affairs at the close of the day.

Marshal MacMahon, the French commander, was badly wounded by a bursting shell early in the day. The command devolved on General Ducrot, the only one of the French leaders who sensed what the Germans were doing and who advised a way of escape that was disdained. He at once set his army in motion toward the only route traversable to the west. At this critical time General de Wimpffen produced a commission from the Regency left by Napoleon in Paris directing him to take over the command in case MacMahon was killed or wounded. He at once reversed the marching order of Ducrot and led his army nicely and tightly within the last opening of the circle left by the Germans. Then, with more than seven hundred guns hurling death from the heights, north, east, south and west, the Emperor ordered the white flag raised.

During the morning of September 2 Napoleon sent to King William of Prussia the following historic note:—"Mon frere—N'ayant pu marcher à la tête de mes troupes, je dépose mon épée au pied votre majesté. NAPOLEON."

Acknowledging that Napoleon had tried to die at the head of his troops, as his note stated, King William very courteously prevented the Emperor laying his sword at the conqueror's feet, and treated him as a royal brother in misfortune. The two met that afternoon at two o'clock for a brief interview, and the castle of Wilhelmshöhe, near Cassel, was assigned Napoleon as a residence. The capitulation of Sedan and the entire French army was signed by General de Wimpffen for the vanquished and General von Moltke for the victors.

The extent of the surrender was:—83,000 men, 50 generals and 5,000 officers of subordinate rank; 400 field pieces, 150 fortress guns, 70 mitrailleuses and 14,000 wounded lying in the adjacent battle area. A great quantity of stores and small arms was included in the summary. In a letter dated May 12, 1872, the deposed Emperor took upon himself the whole responsibility for the surrender at Sedan. Bad generalship and see-sawing with an underhanded brand of politics between battlefield and the Regency chamber in Paris are stated by historians to have been the causes of the disaster. Unpreparedness is probably the best sum-and-total word to express the reason of this greatest of field surrenders in military annals.

vicinity of Fort Lee, New Jersey, all the way to Virginia to accomplish it—400 miles—in twenty-eight days. For boldness of conception, promptness of decision and in celerity of execution Napoleon did nothing better in his Ulm campaign, famous as it became with military analysis. The American commander crossed the Hudson August 21, and Yorktown fell just fifty-nine days later. After the battle of Jamestown, July 6, 1781, in which Cornwallis had defeated Lafayette, the British forces were led to Gloucester and Yorktown, the better to support a British fleet that was to be sent to Hampton Roads. Lines of field fortifications were laid out.

Washington on his arrival at Williamsburg was joined by Lafayette's troops from Virginia, and a French force from Hayti, so that he assembled 16,000 men. Cornwallis' army numbered 8,316. Yorktown was immediately surrounded. Siege guns were brought ashore from the French fleet. The line closed in. Night attacks were made, and finally, after a storm prevented the transportation of the British troops across the York River to Gloucester, Cornwallis opened negotiations for a surrender. The prisoners numbered 7,157 soldiers, 840 seamen, 80 camp followers, or 8,077 in all. In addition there were 144 cannon, 6,658 muskets, great quantities of ammunition, supplies and clothing belonging to the army and four frigates, 30 transports, 15 galleys and several smaller vessels. During the siege, which began September 28 and lasted twenty-one days, the British lost 156 killed and 325 wounded; the allies 75 killed and 199 wounded. A naval battle between the British and French was fought in the Chesapeake while the siege was beginning, the British vessels retiring to New York. The French vessels, remaining in adjacent waters, aided immeasurably in the successful prosecution of operations. So this great field surrender went down into history.

Another surrender outside a fortress that marked a decided military epoch in the War of the Revolution was that of General Burgoyne to General Gates at Saratoga October 17, 1777. At Bemis Heights on October 7 Burgoyne had been defeated, with a loss of 600 men. He retreated to Saratoga and began the construction of defences. Gates followed and surrounded him. The British and Hessians marched out of their camp after their arms to the number of 341 officers, 586 non-commissioned officers, 4,836 privates—a total of 5,763 men. Gates failed to say the men should be prisoners of war. They were used against the Americans later in consequence of this omission. The principal cause of the British surrender was the foolish attempt to operate an army in a hostile country when separated 180 miles of wilderness from its base of supplies. Of course, the American army outnumbered the British nearly two to one in order to surround it so effectually.

The surrender of Ulm October 20, 1805, was the climax of a series of rapid manoeuvres of Napoleon against the Austrian, General Mack. On September 7 Mack, with an army of 80,000 men, crossed the Inn and moved on Munich. Bonaparte crossed the Rhine, and by a ever arrayed, would have been justified in surrendering months before. They were half starved, in rags, barefooted and bareheaded. But they did not give up because of this. They were content to fight on with all of these handicaps so long as there was a use in fighting. It was not even starvation that beat them. It was the overwhelming force of a foe outnumbering them five to one. To continue would have not been battle, but mere massacre. So they were surrendered. There were 2,862 officers and 25,494 enlisted men, a total of 28,356, in the heroic band of fighters. Fewer than 8,000 had rifles.

The mention of Fort Ticonderoga will always bring to the American memory the brilliant capture of this place at the beginning of May, 1775, by Colonel Ethan Allen and two hundred "Green Mountain Boys." Benedict Arnold, a captain at the time, had been authorized to raise four hundred men for the purpose, but when he reached the vicinity of Lake Champlain and found Allen already under way, he joined the expedition. They arrived before the fort while it was still within an hour of dawn and gained admittance through the sally-port by a ruse. Allen called upon the commander, Captain Delaplace to show himself and make a surrender. Out came the British officer, breeches not yet slipped on, and inquired by what authority he was asked to yield the place.

"In the name of the Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress," history says Allen answered.

bold and rapid movement gained Mack's rear, cutting off his communication with Vienna. In a series of engagements fought for the recovery of the Vienna roads Mack was repulsed and retired within the walls of Ulm. Two weeks later, without any intervening casualties, Mack surrendered his army of 30,000 men and sixty pieces of cannon. The remainder of his force, which had been jointly commanded by the Archduke Charles, had either been made prisoners previously or retreated to join two other Austrian armies that had been sent against the power of Napoleon. Thus in the short space of three weeks Napoleon's masterly movements had completely overwhelmed his enemy without a real battle.

The surrender of Robert E. Lee to U. S. Grant, at Appomattox, April 9, 1865, was perhaps one of the saddest sights in the history of warfare. The Confederate troops, measured by the endurance of all soldiery since the first armed force was

The city of Paris has had severe experiences in the way of surrenders to invading armies. On March 31, 1814, the allied armies that had hemmed in Napoleon entered the French capital and occupied it with a force of 230,000 troops. After Napoleon's escape from Elba and his defeat at Waterloo the armies of the allies again entered Paris, July 7, 1815. Thus the great city had to surrender to its enemies twice within sixteen months. Fifty-five years later—January 28, 1873, the city surrendered again, this time to the victors in the Franco-German war, after a brisk bombardment. The death rate had grown to 5,000 a week and the food supply was exhausted before capitulation was made. Another city surrender of the campaign was that of Orleans, December 4, 1870. This municipality endured two occupations before the war ended.

The surrender of the city of Peking by a traitor Chinaman October 6, 1860, was a memorable occasion in the pioneer attempts made by European and American Powers to break into the privacy of the Celestial Kingdom. The city was taken as the final act in the operations conducted by France and England during 1857 to obtain reparation for attacks made on their shipping. Canton was taken. Russia and the United States joined in the attempt to force treaties recognizing Western Powers. China finally agreed to the reception of residential Ministers of all four countries in Peking. But all sorts of impediments were placed in the way of the Ministers entering the city. The war was renewed. Following the surrender of one of the gates the allies rushed into the city. The imperial government was forced to yield and the treaties were ratified.

The battle may be the sauce of conflict, but the surrender is certainly the plum of war. A capitulation is the pining on of the medal—the proof of the soldier's fighting. The assault and the volley are the motions of the work performed; the surrender is the pay. A battle may be drawn or may mean but a meagre victory. There is no uncertainty about the value of a surrender.

The glory of fighting is the food of the spirit, but the capture of a city is the sustenance of substance. Napoleon's crack corps said:—"The Old Guard dies but never surrenders!" This evidences the possession of exalted martial purpose in the field, coupled with a wise determination never to let the possible victor obtain the material rewards of war. It is the ideal shibboleth of battle.
