Lawvers Appear Very Interested In Raincoat Lent to Leo M. Frank The Atlanta Constitution (1881-2001); Aug 15, 1913; ProOuest Historical Newspapers Atlanta Constitution (1868 - 1945)

Lawyers Appear Very Interested In Raincoat Lent to Leo M. Frank

Charles F. Ursenbach, husband of Mrs. Leo Frank's sister, was put on the stand, following Miss Eula May Flowers. He was used by the defense to show what Lee Frank had broken the baseball engagemnet early on Saturday morning. He also testified to Frank's demeanor after the crime and was asked a number of questions about lending Frank his raincoat Sunday afternoon. What the importance of the raincoat was, neither side would say, but each asked a large number of auestions about it.

"Dld you see Frank on Sunday?" asked Mr. Arnold.

"r ald." "Did you telephone Frank Friday afternoon about going to the Saturday ball game?"

"Lata."

"What did he say?"

"He said he would let me know later."

"Did ho?"

"Yes, when I got home at lunch Saturday I found a message from him. saying he could not go."

"Did you see any scratches on his face Sunday?"

"No, none at all," "What was his manner?"

"He appeared a little disturbed." Mr. Hooper took up the cross-examinstion. "Isn't it a fact that the baseball ongagement was broken on Friday afternoon?"

"No. I 'phoned him and made it Friday afternoon and he 'phoned to my home Saturday before noon and left word saying he could not go?"

"Didn't Frank wear your raincoat about that time?"

"He borrowed it about 4:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, the day the body was found, and then he returned it about two hours later."

"Hadn't he borrowed it before that and dind't be have it at the factory on Saturday?"

"No."

He was then excused.

Reproduced with permission of the copyright owner. Further reproduction prohibited without permission.