FIRST WEEK OF FRANK TRIAL ENDS WITH BOTH SIDES SURE OF VICTORY

Solicitor Dorsey Indicates That Real Sensation Will Be Developed for State in Closing Days of Famous Mary Phagan Mystery Case.

PROSECUTOR, ANGRY SAYS HIS WITNESSES BETRAY HIM

Routing of Detective Black and Surprise in the Testimony of Pinkerton Agent Gives the Defense Principal Points Scored—Newt Lee Hunts

A weakening of the State's case against Lee Frank, who charged with killing Mary Phagan, April 28, was evident from the close of the first week of the tedious trial Saturday.

However, the Solicitor Saturday said that he was satisfied with the progress made, and was sure of success for the State.

The charges were made against Harry Scott, a Pinkerton detective, and E. F. Holloway, foreman of the National Road Patrol, in which the foreman went back on an affidavit which he made in the preliminary stage of the investigation.

So far the main efforts of the State have been directed toward proving the murder was committed on the second floor of the factory, where, it is contended, Frank was in the room at the time of the killing.

Frank's attorney, Duhrst, backed on Reuben Arnold, Jr., counsel for the defense, fully persuaded that the State and the grand jury are the friends of the defendant in this case.

NEWT LEE HOLDS GROUND. One witness, however, and a witness damaging to the defendant who was unperjured by a pillbox cross-examination was Newt Lee, the negro night watchman of the National Road Patrol.

FIRST WEEK OF FRANK TRIAL ENDS WITH BOTH SIDES SURE OF VICTORY

Solicitor Dorsey Indicates That Real Sention Will Be Developed for State in Closing Days of Famous Mary Phagan Mystery Case. PROSECUTOR, ANGRY, SAYS HIS WITNESSES BETRAY HIM

Routing of Detective Black and Surprise in the Testimony of Pinkerton Agent Gives the Defense Principal Points Scored—Newt Lee Hunts

A weakening of the State's case against Lee Frank, who is charged with killing Mary Phagan, Aug. 28, was evident in the closing days of the tedious trial Saturday. Angry charges made in court by Solicitor General Dorsey, that certain witnesses had betrayed him, seemed to reveal his chagrin.

However, the Solicitor Saturday said that he was satisfied with the progress made, and was sure of success for the State. The charges were made against Harry Scott, a Pinkerton detective, and E. P. Holloway, foreman of the National Guard, in which the foreman went back on an affidavit which he made in the preliminary stage of the investigation...

Frank's attorneys, Arthur Rosser and Herbert Arnold, have been from the first wonderfully powerful factors in the trial, and are the agents who know the friends of the defense better than all their hopes. Time and again this hope has been justified. Under their skillful administration by Rosser, witnesses have quailed and testified their bodies and their statements as if they were material in fact of a man's life to which they were subjected.

Detective John Black was one of these. Time and again he contradicted himself as to details, and several times he confessed that he did not remember Black flew out of the jury's presence, was among the most zealous in obtaining evidence against Frank. Solicitor Dorsey had stated that he expected to show by Black's testimony that the detectives had gone to Lee Frank only after Frank had informed him that the girl had been kidnapped by the watchman's clock and that Frank had been in the room at the time the bloody shirt found in Lee's house was a "phony" shirt made by him.

One witness, however, and a witness damaging to the defense who was unperjured by a pitiless cross-examination was Newt Lee, the negro night watchman of the National Penitentiary. The negro steadfastly maintained his original story that Frank was nervous the afternoon of Aug. 28, that he had been in the room at the time the bloody shirt found in Lee's house was a "phony" shirt made by him. Much of the prosecution's plan in the regard was fruitless, however, because of Black's confusion under cross-examination.

Routing of Detective Black and Surprise in the Testimony of Pinkerton Agent Gives the Defense Principal Points Scored—Newt Lee Hurts

A weakening of the State's case against Leo Frank, who is charged with killing Mary Phagan April 26, was evident with the close of the first week of the tedious trial Saturday.

Frank's Attorney, Luther Rosser and Robert Arnold, have been from the first wonderfully successful in their strategy...

Detective John Black was one of these. Time and again he contradicted himself as to details, and several times he confessed that he did not remember Black.

Solicitor Dorsey had stated that he expected to show by Black's testimony that the detectives had gone to the phone booth after Frank had informed him that several punches were missing from the watchman's clock.

One witness, however, and a witness damaging to the defense was impeded by a pitiless cross-examination by Newt Lee, the negro night watchman of the National Pencil Factory.

An evident attempt was made by the defense to prove that the man on Newt Lee's stand, in which Luther Rosser questioned James J. Dobbs, the police sergeant who found the body of the dead girl, seemed frankly that much of the negro's behavior was suspicious.

Dobbs declared that Lee had read the hardly legible note that was found at the side of the dead girl, and had read it to him. This point the defense argued. Frank's lawyer also argued that the note was not the one which had been found in the factory.

CANTRELL GO TO GALLOWES. MRS. HAWKINS GIVEN LIFE

Judge Sentences Brothers Found Guilty of Slaying Woman's Husband to Die, but She Is Given Mercy Recommended by Jury.

Appeal Is Announced After Final Judgment in Conspiracy Case That Has Stirred Hall County. Love Notes Road to Trial Jury.

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 2.—In the past there have been several murder trials in Hall County, but probably none created greater interest than the three this week of Mrs. Silva Hawkins and Bartow and James Cantrell, jointly indicted for the murder of Arthur Hawkins, the woman's husband, May 29. The woman to-day received a life sentence and the Cantrell brothers were sentenced to hang September 24.

With the aid of Sheriff Spencer and other county officers Collier General McMillan succeeded in obtaining the evidence on which to convict the murderers.

Prior to moving to Bolton in March, Hawkins and his wife lived in Gainesville. They decided to make a trip this year, and with their four children moved near the Cantrell home. Jim Cantrell, a widower with two children, was living with his mother and sisters. Bartow Cantrell, his 18-year-old brother, was living near by. Soon after the Hawkins family moved in that neighborhood Jim Cantrell was taken sick with mumps. Mrs. Hawkins went to the house and saw him.

Indiscreet Develops Fact. An intimacy developed. Within two weeks after they met, Mrs. Hawkins had kissed, according to the evidence, the Cantrells on other very nearly every day, and numerous letters were exchanged. The letters in which she called him "sweet boy," in which she told him how she had no pleasure except in his company, and in which she told him how she loved him better than any other man in the world, that she had never loved any other man since she was five years old.

She told him that she would like to see him every day, and she would get a lot of money. She told him that she would like to see him every day, and she would get a lot of money. She told him that she would like to see him every day, and she would get a lot of money.

ON account of the vast number of votes which poured in upon the Contest Editor on the closing day and night, it has been absolutely impossible to make the announcement of the prize winners in the great Georgian and Sunday American Pony Contest in to-day's issue.

An extra force of clerks has been put to work counting votes and subscriptions received, and the announcement of the winners will be made in Monday's Atlanta Georgian.

STATE FORGES CHAIN TO TAX ALL THE INGENUITY OF DEFENSE'S LEGAL ARRAY

First Week of Battle Has Fixed the Time Almost Exactly According to Theory of the Solicitor-Doctors' Testimony Has Important Bearing.

BY AN OLD POLICE REFORMER. Mary Phagan met her tragic death in the National Plant Factory on Saturday, April 26.

Either she was murdered by Leo Frank, as charged in the indictment, or she was murdered by James Conley, the negro sweeper, employed in the factory.

If there is another theory, it has not been advanced. The theory that Frank killed the girl is the one set up by the State; the theory that Conley killed her is the one to be set up by the defense.

Which, if either, is the true theory? That is the all-absorbing puzzle engaging the attention of Atlanta and Georgia today.

Many POINTS OBLAQUED. The trial of Frank has progressed nearly to its end, but it has gone far enough for many points to have been obliterated. The State has sought to show that Mary Phagan left home at 11:45 and arrived at the factory at or about 12 o'clock.

She went to Leo Frank's office to draw her pay, a check delivery to another person had been declined the afternoon before, and therefore she must have been in the office not later than 12:05, if not a trifle earlier.

It is a singular circumstance that for the first time in the trial, being held weekly, Mary Phagan's body was found in the factory on Saturday, April 26.

As a result of the testimony of Dr. Roy Harris, the girl was dead when found in the factory, and she had been there for some time. The body was found in the factory on Saturday, April 26.

her neck pure in her hand, and that he then and there killed her for her money, threw her body into the open and nearby elevator shaft, down which he went later to conceal her body in the rear, and to make his guilty escape by way of the broken-down back door.

The defense will insist upon one theory only with respect to the motive killing—only it will be robbery pure and simple.

The defense, however, to clear Leo Frank, will have to rebut the facts of the case. It is in the hands of the State to prove its case in public opinion and in law.

In addition to this, Conley's general reputation for shrewdness and astuteness will be set up and shown by police records, and that by way of contrast with Frank's unblemished character and business career.

COURTROOM STUDIES OF LEO FRANK

Three typical poses of the defendant in the famous Phagan case are shown, while in the upper left of the picture is a study of Luther Rosser, his leading counsel. Here is what a study of Frank's face reveals: His face is immovable, except, perhaps, for the eyes. But fixity of countenance does not always go with unconcern. In this case it is a part of the man's nature. Im-mobility is the essential part of his physiognomy. It is the immobility of the business man given to calculation, of the gambler, of the person given to repression.

Finally are these: The witness, between 12 o'clock and the time he left the pencil factory, saw the man who was the plaintiff of wages, lure or follow her to the back of the building, where he assaulted her and killed her. He did then secure the services of Conley, for some 10 to 15 minutes after she was killed, to conceal the body in the basement. He did not bring the girl, like a beast, outside and kill her, or did he because she resisted his lust and anger in endeavoring to force his will, kill her, or kill her to keep her from telling? Why did he do this?

Wanted Money For Whisky.

Dr. Hart, on the other hand, looking in the dark hallway below, seeing little Mary Phagan coming down the stairs with her money bag in her hand, brooding over her lack of funds, was waiting for an opportunity to get more whisky, find the money, and then kill her. The violent killing of the girl following? The State is contending the only thing—the defense will contend the other.

Both theories will be exhaustively used, and upon the detection of the great surprise the jury will find the Leo Frank defense.

The two extreme goals have been set up.

That Conley, ever, and always, about Conley, will resolve until it is too late.

Leo Frank's Eyes Show Intense Interest in Every Phase of Case

Face Is Immobile, but Gaze Tells Story of Deep Feeling of Man on Trial--A Study of Prisoner at Close Range.

By TARBLETT O'LEARY.

Everybody says in his heart that he knows human nature, that he can read guilt or innocence, sensuality or asceticism, pain or perturbation in the face of another. Everybody, too, has a certain amount of sympathy for the man who is charged with the murder of a little girl, the most brutal and conscienceless of murders.

The young man who is this the center of all eyes at a apparently unconscious of the multiple gaze that is upon him, is Leo Frank. He is a man to watch him declare a variety of opinions—that he is called or that he is a conscientious man, that he is the outcome of the trial whatever it may be or that he is a man in his innocence.

There were general admiring looks, however, that he is generally considered in the eyes of the man.

CANTRELLS GO TO GALLOWAYS; MRS. HAWKINS GIVE LIFE

Judge Sentences Brothers Found Guilty of Slaying Woman's Husband to Die, but She Is Given Mercy Recommended by Jury.

Appeal Is Announced After Final Judgment, in Conspiracy Case That Has Stirred Hall County. Love Notes Read to Trial Jury.

GAINESVILLE, Aug. 2.—In the past there has been several murder trials in Hall County, but probably none created greater interest than the three this week of Mrs. Silva Hawkins and her two sons, James Cantrell, jointly indicted for the murder of Arthur Hawkins, the woman's husband, May 28. The woman to-day received a life sentence and the Cantrell brothers were sentenced to hang September 18.

With the aid of Sheriff Spencer and other county officers Solicitor General McMillan succeeded in obtaining the evidence on which to convict the murderers.

Prior to moving to Dalton in March, Hawkins and his wife lived in Gainesville. They decided to make a trip the night of, and with their four children moved near the Cantrell home. Jim Cantrell, a widower with two children, was living with his mother and sisters, Harriet Cantrell, his 15-year-old brother, was living near by. Soon after the Hawkins family moved to that neighborhood Jim Cantrell was taken sick with the mumps. Mrs. Hawkins went to the house to care for him.

Intimacy Develops Fast. An intimacy developed. Within two weeks after the Cantrells and Mrs. Hawkins had kissed, according to the evidence, they were together very nearly every day, and numerous letters were written. One of the letters in which she called him "sweet boy" is in which she told him how much she thought of him; that she had no other man in the world; that she would rather die than be parted from him. These letters she told him that she wanted him to kill her husband, "Arthur," in one of her letters she could kill "Arthur" and put the blame on the Cantrells, and she would get a lot of money.

One of the letters she told her to go with him and they would follow "Arthur" and do some thing and he would and that nobody would ever know it. She told him that she would take care of his children.

Mrs. Hawkins according to the testimony, bought shells from a hardware store in Dalton and with the shells unloaded the shot, loaded them into a slug and loaded the slug with which Hawkins was killed.

With Mrs. Hawkins and Cantrell on the evidence obtained, asked Cantrell, the lawyer told her to kill Hawkins. With shotgun and pistol she killed himself behind the door.

When Hawkins came by a shot was fired by Harvey Cantrell, the one that produced death.

Wife to Buy Stray Child. The evidence further showed that Jim Cantrell at the instance of Mrs. Hawkins had tried to buy a stray child to give to her. The child would not let him have it. On his return without it, Mrs. Hawkins said so it was settled, that it was well he had not got it, for she was going to give it to "Arthur" in the morning.

STEAMER SIGHTS WRECK THOUGHT TO BE TITANIC'S

Captain of Vessel Reports Discovery of Derelict to United States Hydrographic Office.

INVESTIGATION IS ORDERED. Remnant of Ship Believed To Be Resting on Ledger of Rock Off Grand Banks.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 2.—Much of the mystery surrounding the sinking of the White Star steamer Titanic with 1,600 of her passengers on April 14, 1912, may be dispelled by the discovery of a wreck, believed to be part of the bulk of the ill-fated vessel, standing on end in the Atlantic Ocean off the Grand Banks of Newfoundland, virtually opposite where the disaster occurred.

Captain Remnant, of the British steamship Lucania, which arrived at Philadelphia from Bordeaux several days ago, reported sighting the derelict, and the United States Hydrographic Office has begun an investigation to learn more about the wreck. Much importance attached.

Lieutenant Commander Lenninger, United States Hydrographic station in this city, attached much importance to the report. Should the vessel sighted by the Lucania prove to be the remnant of the Titanic, the story of the memorable wreck would be rewritten. The fact that, after more than a year, the bulk stands vertically in the water, protruding eight feet or more above the surface, would indicate that a submerged ledge of rock had prevented the wreck from going to the bottom of the sea.

If such a ledge exists, and the evidence of one was reported as long ago as 1923—then it is probable that the sinking of the Titanic was caused by the hidden obstruction tipping over her hull as much as by her collision with the iceberg.

Would Absolve Captain. Should these theories prove to be facts, Captain Smith, who was in command of the Titanic when his vessel went down, would be absolved of the charge of lack of vigilance and damage inflicted upon the International Mercantile Marine line on the disaster would fall, not upon the captain, but upon the protection of the vessel.

Captain Remnant, of the Lucania, believes that what he saw was the wreck of the Titanic or a part of it. He has a sketch of the vessel.

Bacon Blocks Bryan-Nicaraguan Treaty. Georgia Senator Tells Secretary of State That Agreement Can Not Be Ratified.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—Secretary Bryan's Nicaraguan protractor policy, which has been the subject of a long and bitter controversy, extending to that republic the terms of the Platt amendment, which regulates relations between the United States and Cuba, has stopped so much antagonism that Senator A. C. Bacon, of Georgia, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, has informed Mr. Bryan that such a treaty can not be ratified.

He has advised Mr. Bryan that the Nicaraguan policy must be confined to the pending treaty, under which the United States will pay $2,000,000 for exclusive rights in the Nicaraguan canal zone, and that the United States will not be bound to the Platt amendment on the Pacific Ocean, and on Cuba Island, off the Atlantic Coast.

B. C. Forbes Sails To Seek Safeguards For U. S. Investors

Business Envoy of the Hearst Methods planned to investigate financial conditions of Europe.

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—B. C. Forbes, business envoy of the Hearst newspapers, sailed today for Europe, where he will investigate the financial conditions of the various countries governing the return of money to the United States.

American legislation on these important matters, it is now recognized, is utterly inadequate to prevent fraud and imposition against the public several hundreds of millions of dollars annually in the country. The urgency of providing adequate safeguards against such fraud and imposition, directors and officials become more and more pronounced.

The New York American and other Hearst publications, which have consistently championed the fullest possible corporate publicity, will take up the subject vigorously next month.

STATE FORGES CHAIN TO TAX ALL THE INGENUITY OF DEFENSE'S LEGAL ARRAY

First Week of Battle Has Fixed the Time Almost Exactly According to Theory of the Solicitor-Doctors' Testimony Has Important Bearing.

BY AN OLD POLICE REPORTER. MARY PHAGAN met her tragic death in the National Bell-Hellor are two tenable theories of the manner in which the factory on Saturday, April 26.

Either she was murdered by Leo Frank, as charged in the indictment, or she was murdered by James Conley, the negro witness, or employed in the factory.

If there is another theory, it has not been advanced. The theory that Frank killed her is the one set up by the State. The theory that Conley killed her is the one set up by the defense.

Which, if either, is the true theory? That is the all-absorbing puzzle engaging the attention of Atlanta and Georgia today.

Many Points Cleared Up. The trial of Frank has progressed steadily to detail, but it has gone far enough for many points to have been cleared up. The State has sought to show that Mary Phagan left home at 11:45 and arrived at the factory at about 12 o'clock.

She went to Leo Frank's office to draw her pay after the delivery to another person had been declined the afternoon before and, therefore, she must have been in his office not later than 12:05, if not a little earlier.

Here she appears in life on the last night of a busy day, being well as usual.

According to the expert testimony of Dr. Roy Harris, the girl was dead within thirty minutes to three quarters of an hour after she ate lunch of cabbage and bread and departed for an analysis of the contents of her stomach, and therefore must have been killed between 1:45, when she concluded her lunch and 2:30.

Monten Stover claims that Frank was not in the factory from 12:05 to 12:10. After Mary Phagan arrived there, and called upon him within the period of time in which the murder, according to Dr. Harris, was being killed.

Mrs. White testifies that she left the factory about 12:05, at which time she saw a negro loitering about the premises leading up to Frank's office. Presumably this negro was Conley.

In addition to the foregoing, the State has advanced evidence to show that Mary Phagan's pay envelope was found for the crime near her machine in the factory, but a strand of her hair was found on a dressing machine near where the body was supposed to have fallen, and that blood spots were found near a dressing machine in the factory.

It was the big, dramatic, sensational story of the State process to base Conley's story of having seen a negro loitering about the premises, that Mrs. Phagan's story had not been believed, and that she had been helped to conceal the body of the assassin.

MUCH DEPENDS ON CONLEY. Conley's story, on the stand and under cross examination will make these circumstances either highly important and tending to Frank, or of relatively small account.

The defense will contend that it is by no means conclusive that the girl died within the narrow time of the stand-up by Dr. Harris, even though it might have been attacked in that manner and it was, that Conley's claim which has been denied, after and not Frank.

It seems certain that Mary Phagan was killed early in the afternoon of April 26, or, finally, disabled then, if killed there, she never was seen to enter from the factory after the afternoon about noon.

Investigation Is Ordered Remnant of Ship Believed To Be Resting on Ledge of Rock Off Grand Banks.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 2.—News of the mystery surrounding the sinking of the White Star steamer Titanic with 1,600 of her passengers on April 14, 1912, may be dispelled by the discovery of a wreck, believed to be part of the bulk of the ill-starred vessel, floating in and near the Atlantic Ocean off the Grand Banks of Newfoundland, virtually on the spot where the disaster occurred.

STATE FORGES CHAIN TO TAX ALL THE INGENUITY OF DEFENSE'S LEGAL ARRAY

First Week of Battle Has Fixed the Time Almost Exactly According to Theory of the Solicitor--Doctors' Testimony Has Important Bearing.

BY AN OLD POLICE REPORTER.

Mary Phagan and her tragic death in the National Periodic, there are two tenable theories of the manner in which little Frank was murdered.

Either she was murdered by Leo Frank as charged in the indictment, or she was murdered by James Conley, the negro convict, employed in the factory.

It is there another theory, it has not been advanced. The theory that Frank killed the girl is the one set up by the State; the theory that Conley killed her is the one to be set up by the defense.

Which, if either, is the true theory? That is the all-absorbing puzzle engaging the attention of Atlanta and Georgia today.

Montgomery writes that Frank was not in his office from 12:05 to 12:10 after Mary Phagan arrived there and still within the period of time in which she must, according to the Harris Phagan verdict.

It is a fact that she left the factory at 12:05, at which time the saw, a negro looking after the mill leading up to Frank's office. Presumably the negro was Conley.

Conley's story on the stand and under oath examination will make these circumstances either highly important and damaging to Frank, or of relatively small account.

It is a fact that Conley, although not known to have been in the factory at all when Frank was murdered, in fact, was found to have been there at 12:05, at which time the saw, a negro looking after the mill leading up to Frank's office. Presumably the negro was Conley.

Ancient Amazons in Battle with the Greeks.
The Women Equal the Men in Size.

WHEN WOMAN GOES TO WAR

All over Europe women are preparing to do military service for their country.

The latest country to take part in this movement is France. There the women are making more serious and formidable military preparations than anywhere else, which is perhaps what we might expect in the countrywomen of Joan of Arc.

Madame Jane Dieulafoy, one of the most distinguished women in France, a great explorer, who wears trousers with perfect dignity, has planned to raise a whole brigade of women soldiers.

She intends to supply 2,672 officers, 5,000 non-commissioned officers and 20,000 female privates. She has already gathered 800 officers, and there is no doubt that the numbers she asks will be furnished many times over.

The primary object of this force is to do duty in the administrative service, and thus release a certain number of men for active fighting. There are, however, a great many women who are eager for combat service, and it is generally believed that the new plan will end in gratifying this desire.

The French Amazons will furnish a number of daring military aviators. There are scores of French women, like Helene Dutrieu, who are as reckless of their lives as any men who navigate the air.

In the past French soldiers on campaign have enjoyed the company of women called "canteeniers," who supplied them with drinks and attended to their wants in other ways. Today Frenchwomen demand an employment more worthy of the modern position of their sex.

It is noted that France's new Amazons shall wear military uniform, carry arms and be drilled like men.

Madame Dieulafoy as a scholar and historian knows well that women under certain circumstances can become fiercer fighters than men. She herself is noted as the excavator of ancient Persennelle, the capital of King Darius, burnt by Alexander the Great at the suggestion of the beautiful but scandalous Thais. In her scientific labors she has shown strength of endurance beyond that of the average man. The French Government has authorized her to wear men's clothes. She is the only woman at present enjoying that privilege in France.

It is, however, the emotional qualities of woman that will make her terrible in war, rather than the possession of such unusual physical qualities as Madame Dieulafoy's. What makes woman so terrible is that she fights with her emotions rather than with her head.

From the dawn of history women have given evidence of their fighting ability, and there is no reason to believe that they have lost it today. The Amazons were a nation of women in Asia who gave great trouble to the Greeks in early times. They made visits to a neighboring country once a year in order to keep up the race, and afterwards killed all male children.

Lechites, the great Greek hero, killed Penthesilea, the beautiful Queen of the Amazons, in battle, and was thought to have performed a praiseworthy feat.

France has had fully as many Amazons as any other country. There was the immortal Joan of Arc, who drove the English out of France when all the men in the country could not do it. In addition to her France had Jeanne Hachette, who fought at Beaurvais; Margaret of Anjou and many others.

Whenever women take a hand in war it becomes more cruel and savage. In the French Revolution the women led the uprising that set the King at Versailles. From that moment the Revolution assumed its sanguinary character. Again in the Commune of 1871 Parisian women were the great instigators of violence.

America has not been without her martial women, although we seem disposed to minimize their deeds. Moll Pitcher rendered great service to the American revolutionary cause at the battle of Monmouth and on other occasions.

Moll Pitcher was married to a cannoner in the Continental army. Her military career began early in the Revolutionary War. She was beside her husband, who was serving a gun in Fort Mifflin, when the British took that place by storm in 1777. As the British came on in overwhelming numbers her husband, using his head no doubt like a man, thought it best to leave his gun. His wife took his place and discharged the piece right into the midst of the onrushing enemy. Hers was the last shot fired in the light. It did terrible execution.

It was in the following year that she performed her ardent feat at the battle of Monmouth. This battle was fought on a terribly hot day in June. At the opening of the engagement Captain Moll was busy carrying water to her husband and his assistants at the gun. At a critical moment in the fight her husband was shot dead. She took his place and handled his cannon very effectively until the Americans won the fight.

Washington made her a sergeant on the battlefield, and she was afterwards placed on the list of half-pay officers for life, with the rank of captain.

There were doubtless many other women who fought well for America in the Revolution.

stable order upon a force uniformed in this attractive manner.

Recently Englishwomen organized a force of uniformed women to assist the regular army in time of war. They are drilled like a regular military force. In authorizing this organization the British Government hoped that some of the ferocity of the suffragettes might some day be turned against a foreign enemy.

During the recent savage war in southeastern Europe many women greatly distinguished themselves on the side of the Balkan allies. Prominent among them was the Serbian woman Sophie Kovalevich, who fought with desperate bravery and turned the tide of victory for her side at Kirk Killiseh.

The Dahomeyan Amazons offer about the most conclusive proof of the warlike ability of women. They flourished within the memory of many persons now living, who give unquestionable evidence concerning their ferocity. Frederick Martyn, an Englishman, who fought with the French Foreign Legion against the King of Dahomey, says in a recent book: "These young women were far and away the best men" in the Dahomeyan army, and women to man were quite a match for any of us."

but we have scanty records concerning them.

America is likely to have a hand in organizing the new French force of women warriors, for Madame Dieulafoy and her comrades are considering the wisdom of adopting the uniform designed by Miss Grace Washburn, the pretty American dancer, now in London. Miss Washburn is partly of Indian descent, and has good fighting blood in her veins.

The uniform designed by her is dashing, warlike and inspiring, yet also seductive and entirely worthy of feminine taste. It is supposed that such a uniform would produce a very crushing effect on the enemy. Some doubt is expressed, however, whether the enemy would flee or rush with irre-
