

Fate of Burns' Agents Now in Hands of Jury; No Verdict Until Today

After Jurymen Had Been Out for One Hour, Judge Ben Hill Orders Them Locked in Kimball House for the Night.

PARTICULAR CARE URGED AS TO MATTER OF DOUBT IN CASE AGAINST LEHON

Jurymen Instructed to Consider Law and Evidence and Have No Thought of Any Other Crime Mentioned During Hearing.

A GREAT SPEECH Perhaps as great a compliment as Solicitor Dorsey ever had paid him was given to him last night by C. C. Tedder. The case had gone to the jury. A group of men were talking to Solicitor Dorsey while waiting to hear from the jury. Mr. Tedder came into the group. "Mr. Dorsey," he said, "your speech tonight was one of the best I have ever heard you make."

The case of Dan Lehon, southern manager for the Burns detective agency, C. C. Tedder, a former Burns operative, and Arthur Thurman, the attorney, charged with subornation of perjury in the R. L. Barber and Rev. C. B. Ragsdale affidavits, incident of the Frank case, went to the jury last night at 10 o'clock. When the jury had been out an hour without reaching a verdict, the court announced, at 11 o'clock, that no verdict would be deliverable until 9 o'clock Sunday morning.

The jury was escorted to the Kimball house, where they spent the night. The evening session of the trial, which began at 7 o'clock and consisted of the argument for the defense by Judge Arthur Powell and the argument for the prosecution by Solicitor General Hugh M. Dorsey, was attended by a courtroom practically full of spectators, there being a number of ladies in the crowd. Nearly all of the spectators waited the full hour until the announcement that there would be no verdict before dispersing.

URGES CARE. Judge Hill, in his circumstantial evidence charge, instructed the jury to satisfy themselves very particularly as to the possibility of doubt in the evidence against Lehon before returning a verdict of guilty.

The judge instructed the jury that, while all three of the defendants are indicted jointly, if the jury deems any one or more of the defendants guilty and the other one or two innocent, it may so render a verdict. A verdict of guilty against one of the defendants would be construed to apply to all three defendants. Judge Hill instructed the jury that, in considering the case they are to hear but two voices. The law and the evidence. "You are to have no thought of any other crime mentioned," he said, "in his closing speech Solicitor Dorsey had referred a number of times to the Frank case."

Judge Hill instructed the jury explicitly and in detail in the law governing evidence. The two points to be decided by the jury he said, in order to bring in a verdict of guilty, are: First, that the Ragsdale affidavit is false. Second, that the witness was procured by the defendants by persuasion, promise of money or payment of money. Judge Hill stated that the jury may convict in the latter point on the testimony of Ragsdale, if the jury believes that he has told the truth.

In considering the Ragsdale affidavit Judge Hill instructed the jury to confine itself to that portion of the affidavit explicitly set forth in the indictment.

SPEAKS FOR DEFENSE. The evening session opened with the argument of the defense by the defendants. His speech was without pyrotechnics. He declared that the defendants in this case, contrary to the course expected to be pursued by guilty men had made no attempt whatever to conceal anything, but that they had done everything in their power to bring all evidence bearing upon the case to light. Judge Powell's most startling statement was that if the jury is going to convict upon suspicion, which was Judge Powell's characterization of the evidence presented against the defendants, the evidence is as strong against the solicitor general's office, as against the defendants. That Tedder might have been the solicitor's "plant" in the Burns campaign, instead of vice versa, as the prosecution

WILL LEO FRANK BE TRIED AGAIN?

Lawyers Discuss Next Move in Case, Provided Prisoner Should Win in the United States Supreme Court.

In the event Leo M. Frank is given his freedom by the United States supreme court, will he be prosecuted in the Fulton superior courts on another charge? This question is taking on wide significance now because of the rumor current in court circles that, in event Frank is liberated on the habeas corpus appeal, Solicitor Dorsey and his associates will make a strong effort to have him indicted before the grand jury on one of two charges—rape or perversion. The report has reached such a point that there is widespread speculation upon it wherever attorneys gather. It is generally acknowledged that the prisoner can be legally arraigned a second time if either of the rumored charges are brought against him.

It is not care, however, to anticipate what may be done by the state should Frank be liberated eventually in the proceedings now before the United States supreme court. As to what can be done, so far as I know, there is no law which would prevent action being taken against him on either the charge of rape or perversion. He would neither deny nor affirm the report, however, that the prosecution had already determined to take such steps against the convicted man if the United States courts interposed.

The retention of Pat Campbell and John Starnes, the police headquarters detective who were named in the indictment as prosecutor of Frank for Mary Phagan's murder, leads many to attach credence to the report. When asked if they had contemplated further prosecution of Frank if he should be freed, they declined to express themselves either one way or the other.

Can Be Tried Again. That Frank can be brought before the courts on either of the two above named charges was made known by attorney Reuben Arnold, associate counsel for Frank's defense and one of the principals in the famous trial. Like Mr. Dorsey, he declared that there was no way of preventing action on these grounds. The plea of former jeopardy, he said, would be to no avail. A new charge, in such circumstances, would have to be similar to the one on which he was convicted before in the bill of former jeopardy could be instituted. Mr. Arnold added, however: "I hardly see where any unprejudiced jury, though, would convict Frank, or any other man, under such conditions. Prosecution would cease at such a point and become sheer perversion."

POPE BENEDICT PRAYS FOR THE END OF WAR

Bordeaux, January 30.—(Via Paris)—In reply to a letter from Cardinal Paul Pierre Andrieu, archbishop of Bordeaux, Pope Benedict has written the following: "When we see each day the most flourishing provinces covered with blood and bereavement, we cannot help being filled with anguish and looking forward to the future with the deepest anxiety. Consequently nothing seems to us more desirable than the cessation of the long, cruel war. To the rapid attainment of that end we have directed, as you know, all our plans and efforts. May God turn toward thoughts of peace the hearts of those who hold in their hands the destinies of the peoples."

Georgia's Best Catgut Artists Gathering Here Seeking Scalp of Fiddlin' Carson, Champion

Left, William M. Threlkeld, of Walton county, the only real Shriner fiddler in the convention at the Auditorium this week. Mr. Threlkeld is 68 years old, a noble of Yaarab temple, and a fiddler of repute. Right, Prof. Alex Smart, of The Cove, Georgia, who arrived Saturday with his portable melodeon to play at the fiddlers' convention. The fiddlers are gathering, from the Blue Ridge to the swamps, and by Tuesday there will be forty or fifty of the best catgut artists Georgia can boast scraping fiddle-strings at the Auditorium in preparation for the opening of the official convention of the Old-Time Fiddlers' association, the musical classic of the backwoodsman's year. They are out for the scalp of Fiddlin' John Carson, present holder of the championship, and the fat money prize which goes with the medal. The fame of the annual Atlanta convention has spread until fiddlers from hamlets away off the railroads have heard of it and sent word that they are coming. The veterans who have taken prizes at previous meetings will all be here again, and several new ones are entered on the list. Judge Russell, of the state court of appeals, who introduced the fiddlers in a memorable address last spring, has been invited to officiate, again, and Judge Andy Calhoun will again be one of the judges—and he knows good fiddlin' when he hears it. The convention will be held at the Auditorium on Tuesday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday nights. Thursday afternoon and night being yielded by the management to permit Creator's band to occupy the Auditorium. The old fiddlers, by the way, will be guests of honor at the band concert and enjoy their first taste of Italian music. Alex Smart, who hails from Cove Ga., "Just behind Woodbury" as he says, will be present with his melodeon, of which he is past master. William W. Threlkeld, of Atlanta, aged 68 years and the only fiddling Shriner in the city, has entered the lists. Zeke Wardwell, the Bald Mountain Caruso, whose singing of old-time ballads made such a hit last season, is coming back. Ross Bagley and his son Jim, from Oxyrhynchus county, Ben Day, of Eatonton; Leonon Ludlow, of Cobb; Shorty Harper, of Monroe, and Moonshiner Bob Young, of Walton, have signed up for the contest. Some of the Entries. Among the others on the list of entries to date are: Joseph Ellis, of Pike; J. R. Whaley, of Lumpkin; W. C. Whaley, of DeKalb; J. M. Blake, of Cobb; Fiddling Joe Brown, of Dallas; Bud Shelton, of

SEVEN OPERAS SELECTED FOR THE ATLANTA SEASON; ALL-STAR CASTS COMING

Les Huguenots, Tales of Hoffman, Carmen, Rigoletto, L'Amore dei Tre Re, The Magic Flute and Madame Sans Gene Will Be Offered. Final details of the signed contract between the Metropolitan Opera company and the Atlanta Music festival directors, for the 1915 spring season of grand opera in Atlanta, were settled, after correspondence by wire, at a meeting of the association directors in the office of President W. L. Peel yesterday. The contract calls for a full week of grand opera, and includes, in short, a reproduction in full detail of the gorgeous and complete Metropolitan opera performances of past years in Atlanta.

WARFIELD PREDICTS GREAT OPERA SEASON

Offers $2,500 for Guarantee List in Letter to Colonel Wm. L. Peel. S. Davies Warfield, chairman of the board of directors of the Seaboard Air Line railroad, characterizes Atlanta's operatic season as the most "wonderful work for the south" in a personal letter to Colonel William Lawson Peel. Mr. Warfield lives in Baltimore, but the tremendous power of his influence has been felt in Atlanta as well as other points in the south whenever big things have been projected. New Mr. Warfield has joined the ranks of men who are behind Atlanta's operatic season. In his letter to Colonel Peel Mr. Warfield asks to become one of the guarantors for the sixth operatic season of Metropolitan grand opera to the extent of from $1,000 to $2,500, whichever amount he may be asked to contribute. Here is Mr. Warfield's letter to Colonel Peel: "My Dear Colonel Peel: Will you permit me to become one of the guarantors for the sixth operatic season, Metropolitan Grand Opera company, to the extent of $1,000 to $2,500, whichever amount you can conveniently use? I am a southern man, I wish to cooperate in the truly wonderful work you and your association have done for the south in a manner impossible of being surpassed anywhere. I have already requested a box for the coming season, and can say that having attended the opera the past two seasons, I am looking forward with the greatest pleasure to being with you in April. Believe me, very sincerely, S. DAVIES WARFIELD."

"MURDER" MYSTERY PROVED TO BE JOKE PLAYED ON PASTOR

A practical joke played in a minister's home for the six-day night brought Assistant Chief Jett and a company of police from the station in a hurry in the patrol wagon, anticipating a "big murder." The chief and his men were summoned to No. 48 Larkin street, the home of Rev. F. B. Ricketts, pastor of the McDonough Baptist church, at about 10 o'clock. The call says that a dummy made of Rev. Mr. Ricketts' clothes and stuffed with sofa pillows to give the minister a weird little surprise party when he arrived home. His wife and daughters had made the dummy. But Roy Wade, a boarder, came in first, and when he beheld the figure on the reception room floor he rushed out of the house and to a telephone.

GRANT PARK IS SCENE OF A DARING ROBBERY

Masked Highwayman Holds Up Three Men Late at Night and Secures Nearly $90. A masked highwayman held up three men at the point of a pistol in Grant park about 12 o'clock last night, and obtained nearly $90. Although Call Officers Milan and Evans arrived soon afterward, he had effected an escape without being recognized. Joseph Ellis, in company with his son, E. Ellis, and the delivery boy, Bill Cody, was going from his store at 347 Grant street to his home, 115 Confederate avenue, when the robbery occurred. As they reached the junction of Ormewood and Boulevard, an unknown man, pistol in hand, and with a handkerchief tied about his face, ordered them to hand over what money they might have. Mr. Ellis had in his pocket $75, the proceeds of Saturday night's sales, and he quickly placed this sum in the thief's extended hat. E. Ellis contributed $7 from his pockets. Bill Cody followed the example of his employers and gave to the highwayman the larger portion of his work's earnings. When satisfied that his victims' pockets were emptied, the masked man coolly ordered them to "step lively." He then disappeared in the darkness. No clue to the perpetrator of the theft has been discovered.

FIVE PERSONS INJURED IN COAST LINE WRECK

Jacksonville, Fla., January 30.—Five persons were injured, none seriously, in a wreck on the Atlantic Coast Line railroad 3 miles from Callahan, at 12:45 o'clock this afternoon. The four rear Pullmans and the rear end of the diner left the track. The train was known as No. 85, New York and West Point, and was en route from New York to Jacksonville. The passengers were brought to Jacksonville by a relief train, and the wounds of the injured were dressed in a local hospital.

COMPROMISE IN ALABAMA ON CHILD LABOR BILL

Montgomery, Ala., January 30.—The senate committee this evening decided to favorably report the child labor bill to the legislature Monday at noon, with vital amendments. The age limit is raised from 12 to 14 years for children prevented from working in factories, and the hours of labor of those who may work is raised from fifty hours per week to sixty hours. This bill looks upon any compromise between both sides of the agitation. Other amendments are minor ones.

RUDDOLPH HERRING DOUBLE-CROSSED CITY, SAYS MAYOR

Woodward Moves to Bring Suit to Recover Fees and Expense Money Advanced Expert for His Services.

CREMATORY TESTIMONY CAUSE OF HIS ACTION

Says Herring's Admissions in Hearing of Suit Against City Show He Is Not Entitled to Money Paid Him.

Mayor James G. Woodward said Saturday that he is going to instruct City Attorney James L. Mayson to bring suit immediately to recover from Dr. Rudolph Herring, of New York, fees, and expense money advanced to him by the city for his services in the negotiations with the New York Destructor company on the contract for the crematory. According to the mayor, the city employed Dr. Herring as its representative in the crematory negotiations, and he was paid $50 a day, railroad and incidental expenses, and in addition a fee of $500 for his services as "mechanical, construction and combustion" engineer. "Dr. Herring either misrepresented himself to the city and collected money to which he was not entitled, or else he has double-crossed the city in this deal," said the mayor. "When the city was dickering with the Destructor company on the contract, Dr. Herring was employed by the city as consulting engineer, mechanical engineer and combustion engineer, and it was chiefly through his representations as to the mechanical efficiency of the plant that the city entered into the contract. "Now, Dr. Herring says that he is not a mechanical engineer. He admitted in his testimony in the federal court that he was neither a mechanical nor a combustion engineer. He told the court that he is a sanitary engineer. But the city of Atlanta paid him a fee and expenses on the assumption that he would give the construction department and the board of health the benefit of his knowledge on mechanical and combustion engineering. "We have his admission in the record in the federal court before Special Judge Callaway to the effect that he could not give any mechanical or combustion problems in connection with the plant. Therefore he is not entitled to the money the city paid him as a sanitary engineer. He is not entitled to any of the expense money the city paid him to come to Atlanta. "Witness Against City. "Dr. Herring is in Atlanta, as a witness for the New York Destructor company and against the city of Atlanta, and he is not the city's representative. This makes it appear that Dr. Herring has double-crossed the city, and if he has any expert knowledge of the plant he will admit this to be true. "But I am told that Dr. Herring has only seen the plant in Atlanta twice. One visit was made months ago, and the last time he saw the plant was a few days ago. Mayor Woodward and Assistant City Attorney Ellis have conferred frequently since the appearance of Dr. Herring on the witness stand, and on Saturday the mayor admitted that he has instructed that a statement of fees and expenses paid to Dr. Herring as engineer in the crematory dispute be prepared for him. The mayor says that this statement is being prepared for the purpose of bringing suit. Representative of City. "Dr. Herring has represented the city in a number of construction projects, while he was consulting engineer for the city while the city was planning the city's water supply, and it is said that through his influence with the owners of the plant, he secured the city's right to use the type of tank without paying the patents' royalties. This fact, he also consulted with the city engineers in the matter of plans for sewers erected with bond money years ago. Dr. Herring occupied the witness stand before Special Master Callaway on Friday in the suit of the Destructor company against the city of Atlanta, to pay the company the remaining $25,000 on the plant. Saturday Dr. Herring left Atlanta, it is understood.

MANNING FOR REPEAL OF ANTI-COTTON BILL

Columbia, S. C., January 30.—Governor Manning said today that he would approve the bill, which has passed both houses of the general assembly repealing the cotton acreage reduction act passed at the extraordinary session which began October 6. The reduction act prohibited under penalty the planting in cotton by any farmer of more than one-third of his area under cultivation to all crops. Governor Manning, explaining his action, said that the reduction law was an injustice to the small planter, inasmuch as there was no provision for its enforcement, and South Carolina was the only state which had adopted such a law. He went on to say that the repeal of the act would result automatically from the losses on last year's crop.

From Tilsit, in East Prussia, to Tabriz, in Persia, the Czar's Troops Are Battling With the Germans, Austrians and Turks, and Are Holding Their Own.

RUSSIAN FLANK MOVE IN NORTH EAST PRUSSIA GAINING IN MOMENTUM

In the Snowy Passes of the Carpathians the Russians Are Battling Austro-Germans, Who Are Trying to Save Hungary From Invasion—On the Western Front, the Germans Are Reported to Have Lost Heavily in Local Battles. London, January 30.—The end of the sixth month of Europe's great war finds the belligerent armies completing preparations for an action hardy anticipated when the declarations of hostilities were made. In Flanders, France and Central Prussia a deadlock still exists, but largely because of Russia's tremendous resources and Turkey's action the sphere of operations has been widely extended. Russia alone is engaged in fighting hostile armies from Tilsit, far in the north of East Prussia, to Tabriz, in Persia, a distance of over 1,500 miles. Only that portion of her territory bordering Rumania is free from menaces, but her reports declare all of her immense armies are successful. One effect of this struggle has been to bring the Austro-German troops so near the Rumanian frontier as to fan the war flame in that country, which may have an important bearing on deciding when Rumania will enter the conflict. RUSSIANS ADVANCE IN EAST PRUSSIA. The Russian outflanking movement in northern East Prussia is said to be gaining momentum. The armies on either side of Tilsit have cut the German railway between that city and Memel, on the Baltic. On the southern front, in East Prussia, another army is advancing toward the German fortress of Thorn, while still another is holding a line of entrenchments which protects Warsaw, and which General von Hindenburg has been trying to batter through for three months. Other armies are again preparing to meet a big Austro-German force attempting to regain Galicia and Bukovina. To the eastward, where Muscovite troops are battling against the Turks, another defeat apparently has been inflicted on the sultan's forces. The Russian official report says the Turkish retreats to Tabriz, where urban official dispatches declare the Russians have recaptured that city. What is regarded as the most important campaign, however, is that developing in the Carpathians, brought about by the Austro-German offensive to drive the Russians from Galicia and Bukovina. The Austro-German armies are said to have concentrated 28 army corps for this venture. So far as can be gathered from contradictory official reports, the Russians have won preliminary skirmishes in the western passes from Dulcia to Wyszokow, while to the east they have been forced to retire before superior forces. These battles, which are being fought in the snow, are just commencing, however, and many days must pass before a definite decision is reached.

BATTLES IN WEST LARGELY LOCAL.

Battles in the west still consist of local engagements, although the Germans apparently preparing for an extensive offensive before the allies get their full strength into the field, occasionally deliver rather more serious attacks. These are scattered all along the front from the sea to the Swiss frontier.

Guiney, which the British now hold after driving back the Germans who captured it on Monday, was attacked again yesterday, according to a British report, the Germans were repulsed, leaving 200 dead in front of the trenches they sought to capture.

The Argonne has been the scene of another attack, in this case the German forces claim to have taken over 700 prisoners and counted between 400 and 500 dead.

In giving a review of these "local affairs" between January 16 and 27, a French eye-witness declares all but one of them resulted in favor of the allies.

There has been more, outpost fighting in the vicinity of the Suez canal, but latest reports say the Turks are withdrawing their advance positions.

They have definitely committed themselves to the march they must make across the desert to invade Egypt.

GERMANS REPULSED BY THE BRITISH.

London, January 30.—The following statement was made tonight by the official press bureau:

An attack was made in some force yesterday near Guiney (northern France), but the enemy was easily repulsed.

Over two hundred German dead were counted in front of the trenches occupied by the British, among whom the casualties were small.

Paris, January 30.—(10:40 p. m.)—The following official statement was issued by the war office tonight:

"It is confirmed that the enemy has left a great number of dead on the field of battle to the north of Lambrez, at the foot of the Great Dunc, and also before the English lines near La Bassée.

"There has been a bombardment of some intensity of Arras, and a counter-attack on the night of January 29 the Germans exploded a mine without attaining any results.

"In the Argonne a slight withdrawal of our troops is reported, and their concentration in the new lines about 200 meters to the rear of those which they had occupied, has been actively disputed by the German batteries, the latter being very high, ours were serious."

The statement given out this afternoon follows:

"Generally speaking, the day of January 29 passed quietly. In Belgium we were active in engagements in front of Guiney, near La Bassée, the British army drove back an attack led by the German battalions, the Germans in this case suffered heavy losses.

"In the north of Arras, near Neuville-St. Vaast, our heavy artillery brought a German battery and two companies of the garrison of the enemy to explode.

"In the operations of Albert, Roye, Soissons, Craonne, Rheims and Perthes there were yesterday artillery engagements of intense character. Our batteries acquitted themselves efficiently.

"In the Woëvre district near Vitry, the German batteries directed the object of which was to blow up our trenches. As a matter of fact, all they did was to destroy themselves."

"There is nothing to report from the remainder of the front."

SUCCESS CLAIMED BY THE GERMANS.

Berlin, January 30.—(By wireless to London.)—German troops captured 745 French soldiers and twenty machine guns in the western part of the Argonne forest yesterday, according to official announcements. One of the German war offices today. Of these men, twelve were officers, the statement says. The German captured ten small guns. The enemy's losses were heavy, from 400 to 500 dead men having been left on the field of battle. The French infantry regiment No. 155 seems to have been annihilated. The German losses were comparatively slight.

The text of the communication follows:

"The French losses in the fighting to the north of Nieuport January 28 were heavy. Over 300 Moroccans and Algerians were found dead in the sand and the German artillery shells hampered the enemy in his efforts to make his way by sapping operations in the trenches. The French lost to the east of the light house. To the south of La Bassée canal, last night the German troops captured from the French at this point two more trenches which are connected with the positions occupied by us on January 28. In this operation we made sixty prisoners.

"In the Argonne forest of the Argonne forest a German attack delivered yesterday resulted in a considerable advance of our positions. The French soldiers were taken prisoners. We captured 12 machine guns and 10 smaller arms. The losses of the French were heavy, from 400 to 500 dead having been left on the field of battle. The French infantry regiment No. 155 seems to have been annihilated. The German losses were comparatively slight.

"French night attacks to the south of Nieuport resulted in heavy losses to the enemy. To the northeast of Badonviller the French troops captured from the French at this point two more trenches which are connected with the positions occupied by us on January 28. In this operation we made sixty prisoners.

"In East Prussia a Russian attack against the German positions in the district of the east of Dardelmen was without result. Some of our fortifications were shelled by the enemy. A Russian attack to the southeast of us in the Argonne forest, near the German fire, and a Russian night attack near Horlmow, east of Lowicz, was repulsed with very heavy losses to the enemy."

DISORDERS IN ITALY OVER PRICE OF BREAD.

Calanissetta, Sicily, January 30.—Disorders in consequence of the rise in the price of bread continued today. In some communities the owners of wheat stipulated to distribute them at the normal price.

Milan, Italy, January 30.—The municipality has asked sufficient wheat for the population. The grain will be ground at municipal mills and the flour will be made into bread by co-operative societies. The price of wheat is maintained at almost the normal level.

KAISER BACK TO BERLIN AFTER TRIP TO FRONT.

Berlin, January 30.—(Via London.)—Emperor Wilhelm returned to the capital today for a short stay, after his tour of inspection along the western battle front.

BREAD LIMITATIONS FIXED BY GERMANY.

Berlin, January 30.—(Via London, January 31, 4:30 a. m.)—In view of the fact that after February 1, the authorities will receive only three-quarters as much flour as formerly, the authorities of Berlin, Chemnitz, Lichtenberg and Teltow, have ordered the following limitations:

Daily per capita consumption of all kinds of bread flours combined may not exceed 1,000 grams.

Only uniform bread may be baked—wheat bread in loaves of 600 grams, rye bread in each other shape, and biscuit, to be sold only by weight.

Pastries may contain no more than 10 per cent of wheat flour.

Restaurants and other places of refreshment may receive only three-fourths of the amount formerly received by them.

WILHELMINA'S CARGO WANTED FOR BELGIANS.

London, January 30.—The commission for relief in Belgium tonight announced it had made an offer for the cargo of the American steamer Wilhelmina, which is being chartered to Hamburg January 32 with food supplies for Germany.

Accidents to its vessels has so interfered with the commission's shipping arrangements that a friend of the commission has offered to buy the Wilhelmina's cargo. The offer made by the commission provides for the return of the Wilhelmina's owners and charterers.

The commission has an arrangement with the Belgian government which enables it to take charge of any ship at any stage of its voyage and to give it such general orders as may be necessary.

Members of the commission hope the offer will be accepted, as the Wilhelmina's cargo is a most valuable one.

The Wilhelmina carries 2,000 tons of grain, flour and general food products, valued by the owners at $200,000, and is being chartered to the Southern Products Trading company, a commission company, of St. Louis, and the cargo is destined to the Belgian government, it is understood, was not consulted with regard to the voyage of the vessel, which is being chartered by British warships before she reaches Germany.

ITALY TAKES STEPS TO PROVIDE WHEAT.

Rome, January 30.—Measures to insure a supply of wheat at moderate prices for the population of Italy have been agreed upon by the government.

The government will be given for purchase of grain, funds supplied by three national banks, which will be reimbursed gradually as the wheat is sold.

The situation becomes serious, the government, it is reported, may decide to requisition the entire wheat supply, to be resold at a reasonable price.

SHIP CARRIES FOOD FOR HUNGRY BELGIANS.

Athens, January 31.—(Via London.)—Prince George, Serbia, arrived here yesterday and left in the evening for Italy, where he will remain for several days, having received in battle. During his stay here, King Constantine conferred with him on the Grand Cordo, or Order of the Savior.

The cruiser Helie, recently sent to the Adriatic, has been ordered to leave there, as its presence no longer is required.

ROBBERS GET $15,000 BY RAIDING PAWNSHOP.

New York, January 30.—About $15,000 worth of diamonds were stolen today from the pawnshop of Adolph Stern on the upper East Side by three men who drove up in an automobile, held up the three clerks and their owners, bound and gagged them, threw the jewels into suitcases and escaped in the waiting car.

The first of the three men entered the store ahead of his companions and began making to the door. The other two bandits entered and snatched the spring lock on the door and held it open while the third man all three drew revolvers, covered the clerks, marched them to the rear of the store, bound and gagged them.

In addition to the jewels the highwaymen took $170 in cash, but overlooked other cash in the store.

About a quarter of an hour elapsed before one of the clerks freed himself, released the others and gave the alarm. The estimate made of the loss covered the amount for which the jewels were pawned. The proprietor said, and did not cover full value of the gems. That, he thought, was much higher.

HOUSEWIVES ARE ASKED TO USE CHEAPER FLOUR.

Chicago, January 30.—Housewives of Chicago will be asked to bake their bread from a cheaper grade of flour, or from potatoes, if necessary, to combat the threatened advance in bread prices. Mrs. H. V. Yost, chairman of the market committee of the Clean Food club, announced today.

"White bread is a habit," she said, "women should declare an embargo against it if prices advance. Use rye, corn, potato and brown bread instead."

FOUR MEN WOUNDED IN SHOOTING AFFRAY.

Aberdeen, Miss., January 30.—George Nichols, an insurance agent, was killed and three other men were wounded here late tonight in a shooting affray, an outgrowth, it is said, of a minor quarrel which occurred between a relative of Nichols and a brewer, one of the men wounded. The shooting occurred in a saloon owned by Nichols and Elley Honey on one of the streets here. Nichols and three of his relatives were wounded, none fatally. Fifteen shots were exchanged.

BY AIRCRAFT TROOPS TOWARD PAN-SLAVISM.

Russia's Ruler Declares War Must Be Carried on to Destroy Enemies of All Slavs.

Petrograd, January 30.—(Via London.)—In a telegram to Alexander Samarin, marshal of the nobility of Moscow, Emperor Nicholas today expressed his attitude toward the war for the first time since his declaration of the winter palace at its outbreak. Then the emperor asserted there could be no peace until every hostile soldier had been driven from Russian territory.

The telegram to M. Samarin was in part as follows:

"I sincerely thank the Moscow government for its attitude toward me, which to me is a source of deep gratification. Let all sincere sons of the fatherland be united, as were our glorious ancestors, wholly believing that the Almighty will bless the efforts of our heroic warriors and the sufferings of all true sons of Russia, and give to the powerful fatherland and to the peoples protected by us a brilliant future, destroying at one blow all the enemies of our related Slavs."

M. Samarin's telegram to the emperor follows:

"We, your majesty's determination to carry on the war to a full victory until your majesty's mighty will shall have defined the conditions which for Russia, in her position as a great world power, shall secure peace, which will guarantee her economic independence. The outcome of the war should revive Slavdom and keep for Russia her place in history as the liberator of downtrodden peoples."

Emperor Nicholas has never expressed definitely his feeling toward Pan-Slavism, and his telegram to M. Samarin, who is a son of the founder of the Pan-Slavist doctrine, is regarded here as of special significance.

Teutonic influences at court are quite naturally opposed to Pan-Slavism, and content the idea that this doctrine should be made to any extent one of the future peace negotiations. Many Russian liberals heretofore have believed that Pan-Slavism diminished the influence of Russia in western Europe.

It is believed that the emperor should not be permitted to influence foreign policy. Of late those liberals have abandoned this view to some extent, making common cause with the Pan-Slavists in holding that the war should be continued to the end.

HUNDREDS OF GERMANS DEAD.

British infantry and French artillery reported a violent attack at La Bassée. Hundreds of dead still lie on the field. The attack was renewed and was again repulsed, the German losses being at least two battalions (2,000 men).

Many of the other soldiers who have been continuous artillery engagements, the most violent at Blancy, which was followed by an infantry charge in which the British and French were supported by three companies, which held their ground in spite of a formidable ammunition by three-inch, four-inch, six-inch and eight-inch guns, bombs and grenades.

The British and French were successful in repulsing the attack, and many of the wounded and fell into the enemy's hands.

Three companies from the second line of defense delivered several counter attacks with fire and bayonet until the lost ground was regained.

The action was particularly violent at La Boisselle, being nearly continuous for three days. The British and French prisoner taken January 18, said Emperor William had ordered occupation of this place in honor of the anniversary of the battle of Waterloo. Members of the commission hope the offer will be accepted, as the Wilhelmina's cargo is a most valuable one.

The Wilhelmina carries 2,000 tons of grain, flour and general food products, valued by the owners at $200,000, and is being chartered to the Southern Products Trading company, a commission company, of St. Louis, and the cargo is destined to the Belgian government, it is understood, was not consulted with regard to the voyage of the vessel, which is being chartered by British warships before she reaches Germany.

The situation becomes serious, the government, it is reported, may decide to requisition the entire wheat supply, to be resold at a reasonable price.

STORM WRECKS HOUSES; SEVERAL PERSONS HURT.

Tulsa, Okla., January 30.—Several houses were demolished and others blown from their foundations, one person, Mrs. Ira Mangum, was probably fatally injured and her husband badly bruised in a tornado which swept the east side of Tulsa late tonight. Three other persons were slightly injured.

Two oil tanks, each of a capacity of 50,000 barrels, were set afire by the force of the wind. The other tank is located in the Cushing field.

Heavy rain and had followed the windstorm.

Avant, Okla., January 30.—The four men who yesterday robbed the State Bank of Avant of $2,000 have been located in a farmhouse near Avant, according to information received by officers here tonight. A short time ago the robbers were arrested and are to be held until they can be supplied with arms and ammunition.

French Gained 500 Yards.

On the 18th we gained 500 yards of the enemy's trenches, on the 19th we gained 100 yards, on the 20th we gained 100 yards beyond these trenches. We picked up a number of letters from the enemy which indicated that the enemy's losses in these engagements were more than a battalion.

"Since the 19th the Germans have continually attacked this point desperately, but we have repulsed only a third of the ground lost."

"In the Vosges, Hartman-Wellerkopf was held by the Germans in a trench, made a heroic stand, but this force was obliged to succumb to the small guard at the summit which was heavily shelled by important forces of the enemy. The German force was killed and unable to see more than ten yards ahead of them, this small detachment, knowing that the ground was being attacked by the enemy, was killed by the enemy's machine guns, set out on January 18, over the rocky declivity, which was obtained by the enemy's machine guns."

Two companies tried to reach the enemy's line, but were repulsed. The other two companies were strongly organized and advanced in the direction of the enemy's line, and falling back on accessory defenses, fought for several hours. The enemy's machine guns were heard firing, and in the evening their trumpets sounded a retreat. The enemy's machine guns were heard firing, and in the evening their trumpets sounded a retreat. ITALIANS ARE PLEASED BY WILSON'S VETO.

Rome, January 30.—President Wilson's veto of the immigration bill because of the literacy test has been received with satisfaction in Italy, and the countries which would be chiefly affected by the measure became law. It is said, however, that the Italian government does not object to the test in principle, as its application would be gradual because it believed it would tend to decrease illiteracy in this country.

Eye-witness Says Gains Are Slight But Regular—German Losses Very Heavy in the Recent Engagements.

Paris, January 30.—The following official eye-witness account of operations in the front between January 25 and 26 was made public today by the war office:

"Our advance has been slight, but regular. Under cover of night, troops, protected by portable bucklers, slip along the dunes, and rapidly improvise new defenses with sacks, baskets and cases filled with earth; for deep trenches are impossible in the sand ground. The artillery supporting these operations has made many German trenches in the dunes untenable."

The only infantry action around Ypres occurred at dawn January 25, when a German infantry company (600) moved 150 yards from our lines and engaged a double quick. Three companies of our infantry, supported by a brigade, supported by an entire brigade. This attack was instantly checked by the violent fire of our infantry, supported by the heavy artillery.

"The officer commanding the leading company was the first to fall, and in a few minutes the ground was covered with more than 300 German dead, and many of the other soldiers who have been continuous artillery engagements, the most violent at Blancy, which was followed by an infantry charge in which the British and French were supported by three companies, which held their ground in spite of a formidable ammunition by three-inch, four-inch, six-inch and eight-inch guns, bombs and grenades."

Submarine Sinks Two British Ships.

German Boat Operates on English West Coast Near Liverpool—English Ocean Trade Is Alarmed.

Fleetwood, January 30.—(Via London.)—The German submarine 21 today torpedoed the North Shields steamer Ben Cruachan, off this port. The other crew, numbering twenty, was landed here.

The captain of the steamer says he was overtaken by the submarine this morning and ordered to leave his ship within ten minutes. Hardly had the crew got into the boats when a torpedo was fired and the steamer went down. The Ben Cruachan, 1,875 tons register, belonged to the Morrison Shipping company. She sets sail from the Orkney islands to Liverpool, with a general cargo.

Fleetwood is one of the principal fishing and shipping ports and watering places on the west coast.

Another Steamer Sent to Bottom.

London, January 31.—(1:45 a. m.)—At least one vessel besides the Ben Cruachan was sunk by the German submarine 21. This fact became known tonight when a trawler brought in the crew of eleven of the steamer Linda Blanche, sent to the bottom by the submarine.

The Linda Blanche was on its way from Manchester to Belfast when the submarine appeared alongside. Officers came aboard and ordered the crew to leave. As soon as the men of the Linda Blanche were in their boats the Germans attached a mine to the bridge and another to the forecabin. The mines were then exploded, destroying the vessel.

The Germans directed the British sailors where they should find a trawler, and the crew was picked up when the trawler was reached.

The trawler's skipper said that at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon he sighted another ship on which an explosion evidently had occurred. He was steering in the direction of this vessel when he picked up the Linda Blanche's boats. When he reached the point where he had seen the other vessel, he found the trace of wreckage and believes it went down after he sighted it.

Available shipping records contain no mention of the Linda Blanche. She probably is a small coasting steamer.

Work of Submarine Causes Sensation.

London, January 30.—Appearance of the German submarine 21 at Fleetwood on the west coast of England, not far north of Liverpool, has created a profound sensation in shipping circles here. The appearance of the steamer off the French and Belgian coasts by similar craft.

These raids on commerce are regarded here as demonstrating that Germany is attempting to carry out the policy of unrestricted submarine warfare, which she has announced in her ultimatum to the United States.

According to latest naval lists, it is one of the largest German submarines, but it was not thought its cruising radius was sufficient to enable it to reach a point so far from its base.

Details Are Kept Secret. Shooting Occurred in Villa's Car in Railway Yards at Aguas Calientes.

El Paso, Tex., January 30.—General Francisco Villa was slightly wounded several days ago at Aguas Calientes in a shooting affair, details of which have been kept secret, according to a report brought here today, directly from Villa's headquarters.

It had been rumored here that Villa had been seriously wounded by Colonel Rodolfo Fierro, his personal body-guard. Those who came from Aguas Calientes said they had been unable to learn who shot Villa. The shooting occurred at his car in the railroad yards at about the same time American Consul Silliman at Mexico City telegraphed Washington officials that he had received a report of Villa having been seriously injured. For two days no definite word has been received of conditions in the interior south of Aguas Calientes, nor of any important military movements.

A sheriff's posse with bloodhounds has gone to the scene.

VICTIMS OF EARTHQUAKE CONCENTRATED IN ROME

Rome, January 30.—More than 20,000 injured refugees from the districts devastated by the earthquake January 18 have been concentrated in the capital alone, and nearly 15,000 have been accounted for at five other cities. Naples is sheltering 10,000; Aquila, 1,200; Chieti, 750; Teramo, 235; and Ancona, 470.

Help the Stomach Digest Your Food

When the stomach fails to digest and distribute the nutrients in food, the bowels become clogged with a mass of waste and refuse that ferments and generates poisons which are gradually forced into the blood, causing distress and often serious illness.

Most people naturally object to the drastic cathartic and purgative agents that shock the system. A mild, gentle laxative is the most effective and that which will quickly relieve constipation is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, sold by druggists at 50 cents and one dollar a bottle. It does not gripe or cramp, but acts easily and pleasantly and is therefore the most satisfactory remedy for children, women and elderly persons. For a free trial bottle write to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 452 Washington St., Monticello, Ills.

SLEEPY SENATORS CONSENT TO DRAW IN SHIPPING FIGHT

Recess Agreed to at Midnight After the Senate Had Been in Continuous Session From 11 a. m. Friday.

FOR OVER ELEVEN HOURS SMOOT HELD THE FLOOR

And When He Quit, Other Republicans Took Up the Fight — Democratic Leaders Are Determined to Press Ship Purchase Measure to Vote.

Washington, January 30.—An armistice in the battle over the administration shipping bill began tonight at 11:19 o'clock, when the senate ended nearly thirty-seven hours of continuous debate by recessing until 10 o'clock Monday.

Senator William Alden Smith, who had been speaking since afternoon, confessed at 11 o'clock that he was nearly exhausted, and by unanimous consent the senate went into executive session to dispose of some nominations.

Hands of Clock Put Forward.

Later it was decided not to wait until midnight actually arrived to put into effect the truce agreed upon earlier in the evening, the hands of the senate clock were turned to mark 11, and the senate declared in recess.

Senator Smith will resume his speech Monday, when the democrats will begin another effort to hold the senate in continuous session until the shipping bill is passed.

From 11 a. m. Friday, all through last night, and again today and tonight the contest proceeded with a spirit of determination little short of desperation on both sides.

The great stake, a final vote on the bill, which would break the senate deadlock and release the blockade of legislation, was just ahead, for the presiding officer had ordered that the eyes and ears would be taken as soon as debate should end. No further parliamentary device was available, and physical endurance alone remained to hold back the taking of the vote.

Democrats to Press Measure.

Although the democrats agreed to a recess at midnight at the end of thirty-seven hours of continuous debate, administration leaders insisted that such action meant no let-up in their determination to press the bill.

"We agreed to the recess because of Sunday," said Senator Simmons, "just as we did in the filibuster against the rivers and harbors appropriation bill last fall. But beginning Monday at 10 o'clock it is our purpose to press the bill with all the force that is in our power."

Like today Senator William Alden Smith rallied his republican colleagues who had been holding the floor since early morning. He turned his attention to a bitter arraignment of the administration's policy, and painted a gloomy word-picture of the business condition of the country under the democratic tariff. An "era of record-breaking business mortality" had followed enactment of that tariff, he said, and he characterized the shipping bill as the "fifth administration folly."

"I don't think we have ever had a president who was so hopeful with so little cause as the present incumbent of the white house," he said. "From the day he signed the tariff bill he has not let a week go by without proclaiming that prosperity was here."

Senator Smith read many figures which he declared showed the condition of the country, and repeatedly challenged the democrats to answer his statement. Majority members refused to be drawn in a tariff debate, however, accepting the challenges with weary, apathetic silence.

Senators Slept in Seats.

Throughout the long day session the situation was tense. Many senators slept in their seats, after the night watches through last night; others stretched on the sofas circling the senate chamber, others formed team relays, and some, in a fit of pique, took the measure to a vote, or to hold it back.

There was little sharp parliamentary fencing. In the main, it was steady speaking, with here and there a flash of wit or bitterness to show the intense undercurrents of the debate. Senator Lodge again gave warning that the buying of interned ships would precipitate grave international complications with Great Britain, France and Russia, and would "cut this nation on the highway of war."

During the day it was the expectation on both sides of the chamber that the contest would be carried through tonight and into Sunday, but at 4 p. m. Senator Kern, tactical leader of the administration forces, secured unanimous consent for a recess until 10 a. m. Monday.

With the recess came the announcement from democratic conference rooms that from Monday morning the bill would be kept before the senate continuously without adjournment or recess until it was passed.

Measure Won't be Withdrawn.

Senator Simmons announced he was authorized to deny reports that the administration was considering withdrawal of the bill. He declared that there was not one scintilla of truth in the report.

Early in the evening Senator Smoot, who talked all night last night, his remarks taking up eleven and a half hours, reappeared on the floor, apparently much refreshed and ready for another long-distance argument, should his side be needed.

The galleries were filled with spectators, but there were few senators on the floor until toward 9 o'clock when many who had gone home for a brief rest returned to the chamber.

Senator Smith, whose speech took the form of a general attack on the administration, engaged several democratic senators in brief colloquies.

"If the secretary of the treasury ask a distinguished audience at San Diego, Cal., the other day: 'What is the best thing the government has done since 1890?' 'The people who heard him were struck dumb. Nobody could answer, and finally the secretary of the treasury answered: 'Not a damn thing.'"

Dumb Alden Smith Causes Wonder.

"Did I understand the senator from Michigan to say that he was present and heard this?" asked Senator Chilton.

"Yes, I was present," Senator Smith replied.

"And was struck dumb?" asked Sen-

BRITAIN IS INQUIRING ABOUT PANAMA CANAL

Panama, January 30.—The British admiralty apparently is displaying much interest in the condition of the Panama canal. Sir Claude C. Mallet, British minister to Panama, has been instructed, it is understood, to ascertain the status of the recent landslide.

Sir Claude told canal officials reports had been received in London that the waterway probably would be closed indefinitely in case of unfavorable conditions in Culebra Cut, and that apparently British shipping interests had requested the government to learn what conditions actually were.

It is believed here the reports in London were caused by a misunderstanding of the announcement from Washington that the formal opening had been delayed.

The condition of the channel was better today than at any time since October 15, when it was closed. Five vessels of heavy draft safely navigated the waterway during the day.

The channel is being prepared for the Kronprinz and the Great Northern, which are expected Monday and Tuesday. Each of these draws 31 feet.

Postponement of the formal opening of the canal was announced Monday at Washington. One of the factors said to have been responsible was difficulty in controlling slides. Governor Goethals is said to have told President Wilson he could not promise that large battleships could be sent through in March, when the opening was to have taken place.

NEGRO WOMAN GIVEN MEMBERSHIP IN G. A. R.

New Albany, Ind., January 30.—Lucy Nichols, said to be the only negro woman honored with membership in the Grand Army of the Republic, and reported to have been present for her service in the civil war as a nurse, died here yesterday. She joined the Twenty-third Indiana regiment in Tennessee in 1861.

EPILEPSY CONQUERED? Eminent Physician Said to Have Found a Permanent Cure.

New York, January 30.—Advice from abroad states that the eminent Dr. W. L. Grey-Heaton, of London, has recently compounded a formula that is claimed to produce "true" remarkable results in the treatment of epilepsy and other diseases of nervous origin. Many patients claim to be entirely cured, and one suffering from this disease should at once write to the Grey-Heaton American Laboratory, 114 East 19th St., Dept. 29, New York, who are distributing a supply absolutely free to sufferers in this country who apply.—Advt.

Issue Monthly Bulletin.

Mr. Werner, in order to create interest among the managers, is planning to issue a monthly bulletin, giving the bacteria count of the analysis made of each water sample. This bulletin will be mailed to the managers.

In this way he expects to stress upon the managers the benefits derived from public health control, which ultimately results in bacterial purity in the filtered water.

The laboratory will also issue from time to time educational bulletins, stressing the importance of public drinking water and frequent analysis in order to obtain a definite and known purity.

"North Carolina, Massachusetts, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Louisiana, and many other states," said Mr. Werner, "have recognized the importance of public health of maintaining frequent water tests and have accordingly passed laws requiring them. The United States public health service requires the regular examination of all waters furnished for drinking on trains and has just published a definite bacteriological standard for such waters."

Wants Similar Laws Here.

Mr. Werner is planning a campaign to get the legislature to pass similar laws in Georgia.

"We need laws controlling public water supplies as much as vital statistics laws were needed," he said, "and I don't see how Georgia ever got along without the vital statistics law until thousands of babies, men, women and children have died in the past of typhoid fever and other diseases simply because the community in which they lived was unaware of the fact that public health service is largely caused by impure drinking water coming from polluted streams and impure filtered water."

"That day of ignorance has passed," continued Mr. Werner, "and even the school boys know that typhoid bacillus is borne to the mouth of typhoid victims in contaminated drinking water and that germs in streams into which sewage are dumped."

Could Stamp Out Typhoid.

"If people generally knew the facts about the origin, prevalence and transmission by polluted water of the typhoid bacillus, typhoid could be completely stamped out, as has been done in some communities and countries. Four hundred and fifty thousand people suffer from typhoid fever each year in the United States and $5,000,000 annually from this water-borne disease."

The bacterial count of a city's water that comes from a river should be taken two or three times weekly. The

WORK BEING SOUGHT FOR THE JOBLESS MEN

New York, January 30.—Reports of policemen sent out yesterday to canvass for work for the 10,000 unemployed men with families found in a census recently taken of the unemployed by the police, were being received at nearly every station in the city today.

The patrolmen went from house to house in the residential neighborhood, from store to store in business districts, asking men to sign their names to a promise to pay 15 cents a week for more to unemployed men who would sweep sidewalks and do other odd jobs. If enough subscribers are obtained so that a week's work could be obtained from the four streets surrounding one block amount to $10, a jobless family man who has been unemployed for some time is assigned to the job. In this way one police inspector found fifty jobs and expects to have several more.

AMERICAN RED CROSS WORKING IN SERBIA

Washington, January 30.—Advice to Red Cross headquarters today said the second and third American Red Cross units to Serbia a few weeks ago had turned a tobacco factory at Geggall into a hospital for the neighborhood Serbians and a number of Austrian prisoners. Alleviations had been adopted, the source said, to improve the situation surrounding. On account of the difficulty in obtaining hospital supplies from Serbian sources, it was said, large shipments from America would be necessary.

Hamburg Elects Socialist.

Hamburg, via London, January 31.—Henrich Stubbe, a socialist, was elected to the Reichstag at a by-election yesterday, receiving 4,783 votes, against 19 for his opponent in a district having a voting population of 212,000. This result was due to a political truce, which was expected not to oppose any candidate for reelection.

COURAGE IS COMMON IN THIS WAR.

London, January 30.—Every Englishman knows how to die bravely. The Irish, Scotch and English soldiers face the bayonets, the machine guns, and though out on dress parade, it is the men who are killed and die in the trenches, or at home after an arduous campaign that our sympathy goes out to most. There are thousands of such men behind the battle lines who went to the front without a word of complaint and good pure blood to withstand the deprivations, the hardships of the campaign in Belgium and France. It is a warning that we should pay strict attention to our stomach, liver and blood.

Of one of all the things we should take an interesting tour, an active such as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery which cures diseases of the stomach and bowels, indigestion and nutrition. It eliminates from the blood disease breeding poisons. It cures the invalids, the aged and the infirm, and furnishes a foundation for sound, physical health. Fifty years ago Dr. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hospital, New York, substituted, at Buffalo, N. Record for Season Broken Saturday—12,000 Bales Are Destined for Germany.

Savannah, Ga., January 30.—The foreign shipments of cotton from this port last today totaled more than 33,000 bales, the largest foreign movement of the season for any one day locally. The American steamer Nevada sailed for Bremen, Germany, with a cargo of 12,000 bales. The British steamer Lingfield sailed with a cargo of 9,000 bales, and late this afternoon the Norwegian steamer Finnetta sailed with 12,573 bales. The destinations of the Lingfield and the Finnetta were withheld.

Big Shipment From Mobile.

Mobile, Ala., January 30.—The fifth shipment of cotton from this port left here today on the British steamer St. Quentin for Liverpool, the cargo amounting to 4,500 bales.

WORK BEING SOUGHT FOR THE JOBLESS MEN

New York, January 30.—Reports of policemen sent out yesterday to canvass for work for the 10,000 unemployed men with families found in a census recently taken of the unemployed by the police, were being received at nearly every station in the city today.

The patrolmen went from house to house in the residential neighborhood, from store to store in business districts, asking men to sign their names to a promise to pay 15 cents a week for more to unemployed men who would sweep sidewalks and do other odd jobs. If enough subscribers are obtained so that a week's work could be obtained from the four streets surrounding one block amount to $10, a jobless family man who has been unemployed for some time is assigned to the job. In this way one police inspector found fifty jobs and expects to have several more.

AMERICAN RED CROSS WORKING IN SERBIA

Washington, January 30.—Advice to Red Cross headquarters today said the second and third American Red Cross units to Serbia a few weeks ago had turned a tobacco factory at Geggall into a hospital for the neighborhood Serbians and a number of Austrian prisoners. Alleviations had been adopted, the source said, to improve the situation surrounding. On account of the difficulty in obtaining hospital supplies from Serbian sources, it was said, large shipments from America would be necessary.

Hamburg Elects Socialist.

Hamburg, via London, January 31.—Henrich Stubbe, a socialist, was elected to the Reichstag at a by-election yesterday, receiving 4,783 votes, against 19 for his opponent in a district having a voting population of 212,000. This result was due to a political truce, which was expected not to oppose any candidate for reelection.

COURAGE IS COMMON IN THIS WAR.

London, January 30.—Every Englishman knows how to die bravely. The Irish, Scotch and English soldiers face the bayonets, the machine guns, and though out on dress parade, it is the men who are killed and die in the trenches, or at home after an arduous campaign that our sympathy goes out to most. There are thousands of such men behind the battle lines who went to the front without a word of complaint and good pure blood to withstand the deprivations, the hardships of the campaign in Belgium and France. It is a warning that we should pay strict attention to our stomach, liver and blood.

Of one of all the things we should take an interesting tour, an active such as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery which cures diseases of the stomach and bowels, indigestion and nutrition. It eliminates from the blood disease breeding poisons. It cures the invalids, the aged and the infirm, and furnishes a foundation for sound, physical health. MINERS ARE SLAVES, DECLARES LAWSON

Labor Leader Tells Industrial Commission of Conditions in Colorado, and Again Attacks John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

New York, January 30.—John R. Lawson, of the United Mine Workers of America, who yesterday denounced conditions in Colorado mining camps in testimony before the industrial relations commission, and sharply arraigned John D. Rockefeller, Jr. for his alleged failure to inform himself as to conditions there, continued his testimony today.

"There is no social life in the camps," Mr. Lawson said. "The companies own the houses, grocers, schools, churches and stores. Complete despotism exists in the mining camps."

"Men worked in mines, he said, because they were forced, not because they wanted to."

"If they complain, it is down the canyon for them," he said. "And if the man who does work is hurt he is taken to a company hospital. If he dies, a company coroner conducts the inquest on the body. As long as I can remember only two coroners are favorable to the Colorado Fuel and Iron company have been found—and I think the company furnished the coroners. The company have a habit of giving a verdict of suicide or death due to carelessness. One coroner wrote, in a certain case, that the victim of an accident had no relatives and damned few friends."

Young Rockefeller Quoted.

No coal miner, Mr. Lawson said, has ever slacked his duty in protecting life and the interests of the operators. Mr. Lawson called the commission's attention to a statement which he said was made by John D. Rockefeller, Jr. April 6, 1910, in which Mr. Rockefeller was quoted as saying that the Colorado Fuel and Iron company would not recognize the United Mine Workers of America and that it was a fight to the finish.

"Two weeks after that to the day came Ludlow," Mr. Lawson said. "I do not know whether there was any connection between the two things. I hope not. A man like Mr. Rockefeller should be careful of the things he says, however."

"Mr. Lawson thought it was a mistake on the part of organized labor to re-elect union officials who had been convicted of violence."

The witness read a list of the laws of Colorado which he said the corporations in that state had violated. Commissioner Weinstock asked if it were a fact that the Colorado Fuel and Iron company had refused to treat with the United Mine Workers of America on the ground that the mine workers were lawbreakers.

"That was one of the charges," said the witness.

Commissioner Weinstock read a notice distributed by the United Mine Workers of America, in which the mine workers to form into companies and arm themselves. He asked if that action did not constitute a defiance of the laws of Colorado, or being a call to arms, a violation of the law.

"No violation of law," Mr. Lawson said. "I defy any one to prove that we violated the law. If my neighbor called to me and asked me to get my rifle or revolver and help him defend his property, would that be a violation of the law?"

"It would be if I got a thousand men together that way," replied Mr. Weinstock.

"Yes, you would be violating the law against blocking traffic," the witness replied.

When questioned by Mrs. J. Borden Herriman, of the commission, as to details of the arming of miners, Mr. Lawson asked to be excused from replying as he was one of those indicted in connection with the trouble in Colorado. The so-called "kill to arms" he said was issued to the miners two days after the shooting at Ludlow.

Mr. Lawson was questioned as to statements alleged to have been made by operatives asserting that the United Mine Workers of America were contract breakers in connection with strikes in District No. 2, which includes a part of Pennsylvania. Mr. Lawson replied that if the committee had been taken up with the executive board, the miners would either have gone back to work under the contracts or would have been put out of the union. If a group of miners in one mine went on a strike on their own account, that did not constitute a violation of contract by the United Mine Workers of America, he said, although many operators so consider.

Mr. Lawson said there were nineteen indictments pending against him in Colorado. He said he had a thousand coal miners are under indictment in Colorado, and not an operator has been indicted.

Mr. Lawson said he was shot down several years ago by an operator. When the hearing came up, Mr. Lawson said the district attorney John L. Gray, said the case should not be pressed, as it was a charge growing out of a strike. So the operator was discharged.

Views of Amos Pinchot.

Amos Pinchot, a New York attorney, the next witness, declared government ownership of mines and other natural resources which are foundation of industry and labor, was the "only doctrine in which there is any hope" for the alleviation of industrial evils. Those resources now were controlled by monopolies, he said. Mr. Pinchot favored collective bargaining and recognition of the union as the only means of breaking "the system of so-called benevolent absolutism," but said that assent by the employers to such recognition, while a step in the right direction, "does not provide jobs for the jobless. This can only be done," he said, "by opening up opportunities for more industry and more labor."

"In almost every great industry the thing which both capital and labor must have in order to apply themselves so cooperatively is a small monopolistic group that business cannot be extended and employment cannot be increased and there is no restriction on the one hand a restriction of product and consequent high price to the consumers, and the restriction of labor and consequent unemployment and poverty in the labor class."

Acceptance by educational institutions of donations from the Rockefeller foundation or the general education board, Mr. Pinchot considered a "grave danger." Small colleges, he declared, were full of instructors and professors, who have not been deliberately driven from larger universities on account of economic opinions unfriendly to benevolent exploiters in industry, but who nevertheless have found their chairs in the large universities untenable and have left them owing to influences which were irresistible, but too subtle to complain about."

Pinchot Attacks Press.

New York, January 30.—The commission adjourned until Monday, after Mr. Pinchot had completed his testimony, but he was permitted to place the remaining news in labor controversies. The effect of public opinion could only be justly exerted, he said, when the public was put in possession of the facts. He declared that there was "no element which gives labor a feeling of such helplessness and bitterness as its knowledge that the merits of its side of the question will not be presented to the public through the press."

The Associated Press, in particular, he said, failed to carry news relating to labor troubles in an impartial manner, and "takes affirmatively the side of capital. He asserted that he had been informed by a representative citizen of Colorado, himself a newspaper man of high standing and a subscriber to the Associated Press, that the failure of the Associated Press to carry news impartially in the labor troubles was a serious element in giving strikers the impression that they could not hope for justice."

"Speaking of labor troubles in the West Virginia coal fields and the Michigan copper mine region in 1913, he quoted what purported to be dispatches of the Associated Press as "characteristic evidence of its partiality to the operators' side of the case." He declared that the Associated Press reported a rifle attack by mine guards from an armored train upon a miners' tent colony at Holly Grove, W. Va., as if the miners had perpetrated an attack upon a passenger train.

"Perversion of News."

As "another typical instance of oppression and perversion of news" by the Associated Press, he cited the testimony of Charles H. Moyer, president of the Western Federation of Miners, before the congressional committee, which investigated the Michigan copper strike troubles, with what he declared to be an Associated Press account, both referring to circumstances surrounding Moyer's departure from the mine district of Chicago.

"Both in the Virginia and Michigan strikes the Associated Press grossly misrepresented the real condition of affairs," said Mr. Pinchot. "This was due, in part, to the fact that in West Virginia it got its information from a man in connection with coal companies, while in Michigan, during a large part of the strike, the Associated Press got its information from two newspaper offices controlled by the mine operators. But whatever the cause, the result has been through which suppression and misrepresentation occurred, the fact remains that it did occur and that it resulted in blinding the public to the actual facts until congressional investigations brought them out."

J. W. POWER GOES WITH HALLET & DAVIS PIANO COMPANY

Mr. J. W. Power, one of the best known piano salesmen in the city of Atlanta, has accepted a position with Hallet & Davis Piano Company, 50 N. Taylor street, and has already entered upon his duties with his new connection. Mr. Power was with the piano firm of Phillips & Crew for twelve years, and has made a fine record for himself as an affable, able and courteous piano salesman. His friends wish him the largest possible success with his new employers, and they are congratulating the Hallet & Davis Company upon its having secured the services of Mr. Power.—(Adv.)

MRS. JOYCE TO SUE RIVAL FOR $10,000

Suit to Restrain Mrs. Hazel Sherman From Seeking to Win Publicity Man's Affections Dismissed.

Judge W. D. Ellis, of the superior court, Saturday denied the petition of Mrs. Arthur St. George Joyce, wife of a publicity expert and the former financial editor of The Philadelphia Public Ledger, to restrain Mrs. Hazel C. Sherman, of Philadelphia, from seeking to win her husband's affections from her.

Now comes Mrs. Joyce with a positive declaration that she will proceed to sue Mrs. Sherman for $10,000 for alienating the affections of her husband.

The hearing on the petition for a permanent injunction lasted exactly one hour.

After court Mrs. Joyce gave out the following signed statement to a reporter for The Constitution:

"Judge Ellis did not see fit to grant the injunction I asked for, solely on the grounds that Mrs. Sherman agreed to leave Atlanta in the course of the next few days. Knowing she would then be out of the jurisdiction of the superior court and not amenable to any order it may have issued, there was nothing else for the court to do."

"The chase is just beginning, and I intend to end it in Philadelphia, where I will shortly bring suit against this woman for $10,000 for alienating the affections of my husband. We'll see just who will lead in this chase."

The charge that the injunction suit was brought because of jealousy on my part is absurd.

"This suit was regarded in some circles as a joke. It is the most serious attack on white slavery in Constantinople and its suburbs. One hundred and thirty persons have been arrested, and the chief headquarters of the illicit traffic has been raided and closed."

White slave traffic has hitherto flourished in the Turkish capital through the inability of the consuls and local authorities to co-operate in checking it.

Russia in 1913 bought 130,796,600 pounds of tea from China.

McChord for Chairman

CHARLES C. MCHORD. The new chairman of the interstate commerce commission will be Charles C. McChord to succeed Chairman J. E. Hartman. Mr. McChord is a democrat and was appointed to the commission on January 18, 1910.

WAR ON WHITE SLAVERY IN THE TURKISH CAPITAL

Constantinople, January 30.—Through cooperation of Henry Morgenthau, American ambassador, Bedri Bey, the chief of police, has begun a vigorous attack on white slavery in Constantinople and its suburbs. One hundred and thirty persons have been arrested, and the chief headquarters of the illicit traffic has been raided and closed.

White slave traffic has hitherto flourished in the Turkish capital through the inability of the consuls and local authorities to co-operate in checking it.

ANOTHER RAINY SUNDAY, SAYS THE WEATHER MAN

Present Week Will Start Off Like Many Others During Past Few Months.

WANTED—First-class weather man. One who can guarantee to give Atlanta at least one sunny Sunday a month. Apply to Mr. or Mrs. Outdoor Fan.

Atlanta is on the still hunt for a first-class weather man. Mr. von Herrmann is all right, and all that sort of thing, but he is just a bit too partial to rainy Sundays, according to Mr. and Mrs. Outdoor Fan, and all the little fans; consequently, they are looking for a weather man who can dole out at least one fair Sunday a month.

It has been almost a month of Sundays since Atlanta has experienced a bright sunny Sunday. The Sabbath program, insofar as the weather has been concerned, has been one rainfall after the other, and just as folks were beginning to believe that the monotony of the thing would be broken, out comes Sunday's weather forecast and guess what it says.

More Sky Juice Due.

You're right, the first time. Sunday will be rainy and unsettled. This much is certain. The elements have been assigned to the task of making Atlanta and Atlantans just as uncomfortable on Sunday as possible.

All of which means that there will be rain, rain and more rain. Rain, according to reports, will bring colder weather. Possibly, it will bring on that blizzard which has been hung up in Nashville or Chattanooga, but can't possibly figure out how any respectable blizzard can descend to visit Atlanta with her streets all puddles of mud, and the atmosphere heavy with dampness and fog thick enough to take the crispness out of any old blizzard.

However, one can't tell what will happen next in the weather line. It might hail, or snow, or the sun might shine.

AMERICAN PENSIONS PAID TO FOREIGNERS

Washington, January 30.—The pension bureau has promised the house appropriations committee to ascertain how many persons drawing pensions in foreign countries are still American citizens, and whether there are any pensioners who are citizens or subjects of the countries in which they reside.

"I am so thoroughly American," Commissioner Saltzgeber told the committee, "that I believe a man who adjures his allegiance to this country ought not to receive any reward from it." The commissioner added that more pension money was paid out to persons living abroad than ever before.

The pension appropriation bill will be taken up for consideration in the house after the naval bill is disposed of.

IN THE LOCAL THEATERS

"The Man From Home."

(At the Atlanta.) "The Man From Home" will be the offering at the Atlanta theater this week. On Tuesday and Thursday 25 cents matinees will be played on Monday night all ladies accompanied by gentlemen with paid seats will be admitted free.

The Baldwin-Melville players have made a big hit with their first play, and it seems certain that they will win a place in the hearts of Atlantans which will mean their permanent stay in the city.

Critics and the public alike have pronounced the company the most excellent ever to have been seen in the city, and which they set the opening week is being highly commended. It will be maintained at all times, for Mr. Baldwin is giving his personal attention to the play, and this means perfection in all the little details which some stock managers stir.

"The Man From Home" tells a story which has an appeal to every American. It is by Freds, Tavington and Harry Leon Wilson, and is decidedly full of humor and pathos. It deals with the experiences of a rich American girl and her brother from Kokomo, Ind., while sojourning in Italy. They meet some unscrupulous persons, who claim to be of the inner circle of European society and seek to marry one of their number to the rich American girl. They insist upon a dowry of $50,000. The girl's guardian visits Italy from Kokomo to investigate the proposed marriage. He soon sees the trickery being planned, and in breaking up the affair complications of the most amusing sort attend. The rich American manners and his keen sense of humor finally wins the day, and all ends well after the intrigues have been proven.

In casting the play Mr. Baldwin has assigned William Sullivan the leading role of Daniel Voorhes Pike, the American from Kokomo, while Miss Olga May plays the American girl, Miss Marguerite Chaffee has the role of an adventuress, and other members of the company are given excellent parts which best befit them. Altogether, performance well worth while are assured. Stop this will follow.

"Lady Windermere's Fan."

(At the Atlanta.) Great interest is being manifested in the production of "Lady Windermere's Fan" in her special revival production of "Lady Windermere's Fan" at the Atlanta theater February 13 and 15. Miss Anglin is one of America's foremost actresses, and has demonstrated her remarkable talents in the comedies of Shakespeare, as well as the great tragedies of the Greek masters, but it is as an emotional actress that she is best appreciated.

ters, but it is as an emotional actress that she is best appreciated. In Miss Anglin the theatrical art finds its highest expression in the most remote extremes. Her success in the exacting role of Mrs. Erlynne in "Lady Windermere's Fan" was so remarkable last season—where the play ran for upwards of three months—that she resolved to employ it as her exclusive vehicle this season, and it will be presented here with the same detail of production and complete outburst that merited unqualified praise in New York. She will be supported by a company of exceptional merit, many of whom were identified with the New York run of the play.

Keith Vaudeville.

(At the Forsyth.) Lasky's "The Beauties" will head the bill of features that will be the show at the Forsyth the week starting with matinee on Monday and continuing all the week with regular schedule of performances. A wonderful miniature musical comedy has been turned out by Mr. Lasky in his production of "The Beauties." Some of the critics say it is by far the best work of the famous maker, and a complete outburst that merited unqualified praise in New York. There will be half a dozen musical numbers that will become popular, because of the catchy, tuneful style that will be introduced, and a number of pretty girls who will impersonate the beauties of all nations will surely contribute to the drawing power of the act. "The Beauties" started from New York last summer for a tour of the circuits. Commencing at a small northern Canada, every city in the west was visited and in the Orpheum circuit it was a success. It is now helping to build up new attendance records. Mortimer H. Weldon and W. Lasky are the producers of the act. The music is by Robert Hood Bowers and the story was written by William Lesteron. In all the theaters where it has been presented it has been one of the features of the present season.

In added attraction will be the appearance of Florence Tempest, with splendid character comedienne, with a long record in every theater where she has appeared. Miss Tempest is unquestionably the star of all the artists in the profession, and her dancing partner, who poses the gifts and the qualities that make her a star. She was popular in the city of New York, and she had formerly visited Miss Tempest as one of the drawing cards of the act.

Britt Wood, started his career as a "big time" feature at the Forsyth three years ago. And since that time he has been successful in every theater where he has appeared. He has scored a great hit here, and with his new stories, an eccentric dance and his own hits of a splendid bill. The Lasky-Thomas company, with Edith Allen in the role of Hilary, will be a comedy feature of the bill. The act is declared to be one of the best ever presented in every city she has never failed in any theater where she has appeared, and the act will register along with the hit of any other.

A novelty feature will be the appearance of the famous quick-change man, Edith Allen, in her new act, "The Four," the best quartet of instrumentalists in the city. Each man is a skilled musician with remarkable change of costume, with remarkable change of costume, with remarkable change of costume, with remarkable change of costume.

FLORENCE TEMPEST, AT THE FORSYTH.

and news pictures will be decidedly interesting. Bessie Wynn, the musical comedy star so popular with Atlanta theatergoers, has been signed to headline the bill of vaudeville at the Forsyth the week of February 8. Miss Wynn is traveling this season with a wardrobe of American-made gowns, and she says that there is nothing in Europe any better. Her songs are all new and exclusive, and she is looking forward to her engagement here with a great deal of pleasure.

RED ROSE PETALS NOW USED AS TIPS FOR CIGARETTES

Some day when you rush to your florist and order a bunch of American Beauty roses, you'll be astonished to learn that he is unable to supply you with the usual red roses that make such an impression on the susceptible young maiden. The supply of red roses, so far as Atlanta is concerned, has been exhausted. You would never guess the reason in the world, so to save further thought and mental worry, we'll tell you. The red roses are being used to make tips for cigarettes. That is a surprise, isn't it? But it is quite true just the same. And here is the whereof of the why: Some bright individual connected with the firm of Thielmel Brothers company, the cigarette makers, conceived the idea of using real rose petals as cigarette tips. The demand already exceeds the supply, and not only the florists of Atlanta, but private gardens have been called upon to furnish red roses so that the petals may be converted into dainty tips for cigarettes. Do the men like them? Answer, "they do." And the people ridicule the fads and fancies of the feminine.

MISS GRAY IS NAMED FOR ADAIRSVILLE POST

Washington, January 30.—(Special.) President Wilson sent to the senate today the name of Miss Josephine M. Gray to be postmistress at Adairsville. Miss Gray is a sister of the late editor of The Atlanta Journal. She had been one of the other nominees sent in were those of Frank L. Asbury to postmaster at Adairsville. Mr. Asbury was recommended by Representative Thomas M. Bell. Julian V. Frederick was nominated as postmaster at Marshallville. He held this position by appointment of President Cleveland and was the successful candidate in a letter primary conducted by Representative Charles R. Crisp.

Big Mill at LaGrange.

LaGrange, Ga., January 30.—(Special.)—Grading for the new half-million-dollar mill which is to be built in LaGrange this year, is progressing rapidly. When the work is completed the material will be placed on the grounds and work on the large manufacturing enterprise will begin. This will make LaGrange's eighth large cotton mill—the seven that are now in operation are all running full time. The building of this new mill will mean jobs for more men than can be supplied by the town. It is a thing as scarce as gold, and the so-called hard-time tale has been long since laid aside.

GASPARILLA TAKES TAMPA ON FEB. 12

Florida City to Be Captured by Pirate—Five-Day Carnival Will Follow, to Which All Are Invited.

St. Louis has its "Veiled Prophet's Carnival," New Orleans its "Mardi Gras," Tampa its "Gasparilla Carnival," and all these are the greatest of all these is the "Gasparilla Carnival" for it rivals all the other great carnivals in splendor and gorgeousness and lasts several days longer. Beginning February 12, this year, the carnival extends over into the next week, ending on February 18, and during the period the gaily decorated city, with its fine water front, will be the mecca of thousands from all parts of the country, who will come to witness and participate in the festive occasions. Gasparilla, you know, was a pirate bold. Back in the days when the Spaniards were looting the treasure houses of the Incas and Mexicans of gold and precious stones, Gasparilla, Captain Kidd, Morgan and other pirates infested the Caribbean sea, the Gulf of Mexico and the middle Atlantic region. With their bold crews of buccaniers they captured the great treasure ships, and then to escape capture sought haven in the bights and inlets of the gulf.

Gasparilla Liked Tampa Vicinity.

Gasparilla's favorite hiding place was in the vicinity of Tampa, and numerous have been the treasure hunters who have dug at places along the coast in a vain effort to find some of the gold he hid away.

The "Gasparilla Carnival" is based on this history. At the opening of the carnival Gasparilla and his bold crew sail up the bay, and in mimic fray capture the city. This alone is a spectacle worth seeing. Long distances to come, but once the city is Gasparilla's he inaugurates a carnival to celebrate his victory; the city is turned over to his crew and their friends (who are invited) and they are hidden to go forth and "have a good time."

"In 'having a good time' the good people of Tampa assist the visitor in every way possible. The city is their playground, and they are hidden to go forth and 'have a good time.'"

Many Pleasures Scheduled.

Conspicuous among these are the parade of welcome to Gasparilla and his crew, the coronation of Gasparilla and his queen, costumed street dances, water carnival, industrial parade, musicals, fireworks and many other things too numerous to mention.

The "Gasparilla Carnival" is the work of the European tourists, the citizens of the frozen north and the good people of the south to gather in this flourishing city. The balm of good breezes gently stir the napes and refresh the spirits in this festival of joy and good cheer.

All the public features of this grand event are open to all. The carnival prizes five days of unrestrained merry-making of the clean but fantastic kind, the benefits of the delightful climate of southern Florida, and is guaranteed by those who have participated in it.

Americus, Ga., January 30.—(Special.)—Sales of five hundred bales of cotton this morning to Macon and American buyers reduced local stocks to that extent, although twenty thousand bales still remain in Americus warehouses. Holders are not pressing sales and only let go when prices are favorable. Cotton is strongly held and with maturer obligations extended to farmers are in position to be independent.

HEADACHE, COLD OR SOUR STOMACH, REGULATE YOUR BOWELS—10 CENTS

Advertisement for Cascarets, a laxative medicine. Text: Sick headaches! Always trace them to lazy liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or a sick stomach. Poisonous, constipated matter, gases and bile generated in the bowels, instead of being carried out of the system, is reabsorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, sickening headache. Cascarets will remove the cause by stimulating the liver, making constipation and congestion impossible to move on and out of the bowels. One taken tonight straightens you out by morning. Cascarets is a gentle, healthy head clear, stomach sweet, liver and bowels regulator, and makes you feel bright and cheerful for months. Children need Cascarets, too.

Story of Atlanta Steel Pig Shows Profit in Hog Raising

Just at this time when the question of hog raising in Georgia is of such great importance to the people in this section, the following story of a pig is very apropos:

Out at the Atlanta Steel works the employees have their own restaurant and cook, the expenses being paid by each employee "chipping in." Thomas K. Glenn, the president of the company, discovered one day a few years ago that the waste from the kitchen was worth a great deal. He suggested that it be utilized for the fattening of a pig. Accordingly a pig was bought, fattened and sold. The experiment was repeated and after pig was bought, fattened without a cost, and either killed and eaten or sold.

To give an example of how the small industry paid, the last case of a pig can be stated. When a pig was bought it cost $8. It was named Tommie (this by way of digression, for each pig is named for some one connected with the works) after the president, whose first name was Thomas. The pig was fed daily on the kitchen refuse, which otherwise would have been thrown away, and in a year it weighed 337 pounds. When bought it weighed only 75 pounds. The price paid was 3 cents a pound. It was sold for 7 cents a pound, and even then a wonderful profit was made, for the original cost was $6, while it brought $23.50, a clear profit of $17.50 in twelve months.

MAY DUMP GARBAGE INTO VACANT LOTS

Crematory Could Be Closed Down—Case May Last Three Years.

There is a probability, and what seems to be a very strong probability at that, of a very long tie-up in the crematory litigation, which may result in the city having to dump its garbage into vacant lots about the city, according to a statement made by the city attorney.

The situation appears to be simply this: The New York Destructor Company has brought suit in the United States district court to force the city to pay $125,000 with interest and $50,000 damages, claimed to have been caused by the city in its fight against the company.

When Mr. Callaway makes a report to Judge Newman, the judge can either confirm or reverse the findings. In either event, either side has the right to appeal to the district court of appeals.

and two or three years were consumed in litigation. His reply was: "Can Shut Down at Any Time. The destructor company can shut down the crematory just whenever it wishes to do so, since the city has agreed to accept it. The city is now paying 25 cents a ton for the burning of garbage, the cost specified in the contract. It is said to be costing more than that and the company is supposed to be putting up the plant, then there would be nothing left for the city to do except to dump the garbage into such places as could be procured—into vacant lots, I suppose, just as it has done in the past."

Getting Close to "Bad Actors" Call Officer Evans' Specialty

A few days ago at a meeting of the finance committee of council one of the city fathers jestingly introduced a resolution that the police of Atlanta be armed with rocks, and the money needed for purchasing automatic revolvers and other equipment for them spent in other ways.

So far as Call Officer Lon Evans, of the city motorcycle police, is concerned, this jest of Alderman Maddox, of the fifth ward, might have been carried out in earnest. Call Officer Evans has served five years on the Atlanta police force in the dangerous position of a call officer, a title which is called upon to risk his life score of times.

Proposed Live Stock Fair Boosted by Men Who Have Made Money Raising Cattle

The Georgia Chamber of Commerce is now making investigations as to methods, cost and prospects of holding big live stock fairs in Atlanta, Columbus and Augusta this spring, along the lines of "The Constitution's" recent editorials which were suggested by a letter to Captain J. W. English, of Atlanta, from B. Frank Mebane, a cattle man of Spray, N. C.

J. Hall Miller, of the Miller Union stock yards, of Atlanta, has written to Warren T. McCray, president of the Hereford Cattle Association of America, offering the association the use of the Miller stock yards as a place for holding the Atlanta cattle show and sale. Should the association, however, prefer to hold the show and sale in the city instead of at the stock yards, Mr. Miller has offered to secure a suitable place in the city for the purpose.

Another Atlantan who is interested in the cattle question is Judge John B. Candler. "I have not entered into the industry very extensively yet," says Judge Candler, "but I am sure it is profitable. I would like to see a cattle show here, because I believe it could teach me many things and would be a great encouragement to the hog and cattle industry in Georgia."

"We are now making a thorough investigation," said President Haden, "as to the ways and means of holding such a cattle show and sale as has been suggested by The Constitution. With these facilities, we have no doubt, undoubtedly prove of great benefit to the farmers and do much to encourage the cattle industry in Georgia."

"In order that as many farmers as possible might avail themselves of the advantages to be derived from such a fair, it is the idea of the Georgia chamber that it should be held not only in Atlanta, but also in Augusta and Columbus."

"If the chamber of commerce can find that the plan is at all practicable, it is its idea to hold the show at the earliest possible moment."

Charles E. Black, who, with Dr. Michael Hoke, owns the famous Magnolia farm at Zenith, Ga., ninety-nine miles from Atlanta, is greatly in hopes that the plan will meet with success.

"I believe that such a fair would be of great benefit to the farmers and would do wonders for the encourage-ment of cattle growing in Georgia," said Mr. Black. "At Magnolia farm we have 2-year-old hogs, rolling in fat, that have never been fed in their lives. Cattle can be raised there, without more than two months' feeding in the year. This can be done on other farms in Georgia. So, I see no reason why, if in the middle west where they have to feed their cattle and hogs practically all the year, round they make money, there is no reason why it can't be done in Georgia."

HOLD "OPEN SESSION" FOR GRADY ELECTION

Physicians' Club Pleased by Method of Naming New Members of Staff.

Members of the Physicians' club of Atlanta—members who launched the campaign and succeeded in persuading Grady trustees to add seven more physicians to the medical staff—were elated Saturday when they were informed that "open session" will prevail next Friday when the elections are in order.

Colonel Robert J. Lowry, one of the leading members of the board, called on Mayor Woodward Saturday morning. They were in close conference with other members of the board for more than thirty minutes.

Mayor Woodward said afterward that Colonel Lowry called on him to discuss administrative matters concerning Grady hospital.

"We talked about the nurses' dormitory and other things," said the mayor, "and we may have touched on the approaching elections." "Finally Mayor Woodward admitted that the approaching session was discussed, when he was asked what he had agreed to, he replied that nothing of special importance was decided, except that the trustees will be in open session when the elections are in order."

STAGE EMPLOYEES WILL GIVE SUNDAY BENEFIT AT BIJOU

A first-class vaudeville and moving picture show will be given at the Bijou theater next Sunday for the benefit of the stage employees in Atlanta, now out of a position. The show will last from 2:30 p. m. to 11 p. m., and promises to be one of the best in its line ever given in this city.

The stage employees are the men who shift the scenes and who are never visible to the audience. They have given their brilliant services to all the charity performances without asking anything in return for their work. Owing to the short theatrical season this year these stage men are now out of work and many, having families, are facing destitution.

JACKSON INTERESTS TENNESSEE SOLONS IN PROBATION BILL

Crawford Jackson, general secretary and founder of the Juvenile Protective association, has just returned from a successful trip in North Carolina, where he formed a strong organization first in Greensboro and then went on to attend the North Carolina legislature in the interest of a juvenile court and probation bill for that state.

The juvenile court and probation bill drawn by Mr. Jackson was introduced simultaneously before his leaving, in the senate by Senator A. B. Ward and in the house by Representative Galatinne Roberts. Mr. Jackson interested Governor Loch Craig in the movement and in the bill, which he read entirely, and endorsed heartily. The bill provides that except in extreme cases, and for capital offenses, children 15 years and under be put on probation by the several courts throughout the state adjudicating their cases.

MILK BEING PROVIDED FOR BELGIAN SUFFERERS

New York, January 30.—The shortage of milk in Belgium has been overcome for the time being, the commission for Belgian relief announced tonight, when its own purchases and through donations it has sent forward, has in hand, or on order for early shipment, 491 cases, or 3,928,166 cans of condensed, unswetened and powdered milk. It has also been able to establish and maintain a number of dairies in Belgium. The provisions shortage for the Belgian destitute now relates more especially to older children and adults, the commission states.

Reviewing the work accomplished, the commission reports having secured at Rotterdam 53,351 tons of food by eleven ships up to January 1; that the Kansas state relief ship Hannah went to the New England relief ship, carrying 15,320 tons of food, are now unloading at Rotterdam; that the commission has six ships in transit to Rotterdam carrying 37,010 tons of food; that it has six ships either loading or ready to load 41,850 tons of food in United States ports; that it has ten steamers in transit to American ports for the purpose of loading 82,410 tons of food, and that the commission has under charter nine steamers which will call at United States ports within one to six weeks to load 61,170 tons of cargo, which is now being gathered for them.

Creator's Band to Render Music Loved World Over

Proceeds of the concert to be given in the Auditorium next Thursday afternoon and evening by the famous Creator and his equally famous band, will be turned into the fund of the Atlanta Music Festival association, to be used in furthering the Sunday afternoon free concert and organ recitals at the Auditorium each week.

The coming of Creator will mark one of the most interesting events in music circles in Atlanta this season. As a bandmaster, Creator is generally acknowledged to be among the best in the world. There are some who insist he is the best. No matter how opinions may differ in this direction, it is unanimously agreed that the Creator's personality cannot be duplicated. There is only one Creator.

Temperamentally, he is a marvel. All his readings are original to a marked degree, and the way he conjures effects by personal magnetism, stamps him as a genius. There is no withstanding the magic of his personality, and one can only look and wonder at the remarkable grasp he has over his men. His programs are always interesting and varied. He never uses a music score, and is credited with having memorized more scores of the highest class music ever produced than any other musician who ever lived. Frequently his concert programs contain sixteen different selections and two and often three times as many encores. Let he never refers to the score. Creator is unique among bandmasters. He seems to be the spirit of the music rendered. Unconsciously, he acts it. So well does he have his men in hand that they seem almost in a trance. He electrifies both his musicians and his audience. Usually his advent in Atlanta is a signal for an ovation. Next week's visit is looked forward to with unusual interest generally on the part of music lovers.

Andrews, of 48 Magnolia street, is confined at the Grady hospital, suffering from painful bruises received from a fall when his buggy and a speeding motorcycle crashed near the junction of Lee and Avon streets Saturday evening. Mrs. Andrews, who was accompanying her husband, was also considerably shocked. The rider of the machine went on his way without coming to the help of the injured man, it is said. "The motorcycle was close upon us," said Mrs. Andrews, "and I cannot tell just how the accident happened. When it hit the buggy my husband fell while attempting to control the frightened horse. The man on the machine, whoever he may have been, received a fall in the accident, but must not have been greatly injured, for he immediately got up and went down the street."

Thomasville, Ga., January 30.—(Special.)—In his annual report to the Thomasville city council this week Dr. E. A. Daniels, president of the city board of health, recommended very earnestly the establishment of a municipal abattoir for Thomasville. He showed that the cost of establishing such a plant would not be a large one and that according to the assurance of the state inspector it would pay a dividend of from 12 to 18 per cent. There is a general sentiment in favor of this movement and it is probable that it will be taken up by council at an early date.

TAYLOR IS GRANTED ANOTHER NEW TRIAL

Charged With Assault on Macon Station Gatekeeper. The Third Trial.

Macon, Ga., January 30.—(Special.)—In the superior court here this afternoon Judge H. A. Mathews granted a new trial to W. H. Taylor, a resident of Columbus, charged with assault with intent to murder C. E. Moffatt, gatekeeper at the Central of Georgia depot, two years ago.

The Taylor case has been a noteworthy one in the local courts. His next trial being his third. At the first trial Taylor was convicted of shooting at another and sentenced to serve four years. His attorney, John F. Cooper, reversed the case in the supreme court and at the second trial Taylor was again found guilty of shooting at another, but though the jury recommended that he be punished as for a misdemeanor, Judge Mathews sentenced him to serve two years in the penitentiary.

Later every member of the jury signed a petition declaring they would not have found Taylor guilty had they known Judge Mathews would not follow their recommendation.

Attorney Cooper argued the motion for a new trial today and it was at once granted by Judge Mathews. It was shown to the court that he had failed to charge the jury that in a case where an attempt is being made to arrest a citizen illegally the citizen has a right to use force proportionate with that being used against him, and if in the exercise of such right he kills an officer who is attempting to arrest him, he is guilty of no offense.

When the case was before the supreme court before the court ruled on this particular point. Another ground on which the new trial was granted was that the court had erred in not permitting Taylor's counsel to go into the character of Taylor's victim on cross-examination. The solicitor general conceded this was error.

Taylor's defense has been that he was resisting illegal arrest and was acting in self-defense.

Canada last year imported 10,795,632 dozen eggs from the United States.

Southern Bell Bowling Champions Fifty Teams Have Organized "Turkey League" at Y. M. C. A.

The bowling team of the manager's office of the Southern Bell, which recently won the championship, with a percentage of 850, in the company's league games.

Everything is now ready for the staging of the biggest event of the season when fifty teams composed of Atlanta's most prominent business men, young men, high school, employed and grade school boys begin the series of games in the "Turkey League" Monday, February 1.

The men's division will consist of 25 teams, 12 of which are business men's class, which meets regularly Monday and Thursday at 8:15 and who will compete in turkey hall and a relay race.

The young business men's class, consisting of six teams, which meet Tuesday and Friday evenings at 8:15 and who will compete in basketball, 75-yard dash and 1-1/2 mile relay race.

The boys' division will be composed of the following: Six teams from the school intermediates; four teams from the school boys; and four teams from class B boys, or boys between the age of 12 and 14 years; eight teams from school boys or boys between the age of 14 and 17; four teams from the younger employed boys and four teams from the club boys' class.

All the teams in this division will compete in basketball, one track event and a relay race, with the exception of the school B boys, who will compete in volleyball instead of basketball.

That is, the team winning the basketball relay ball game will be awarded 10 points.

For the relay race 6 points and for the track event 5 points will be given for first, second and third place in this event, so to determine the team's standing in the league.

At the close of the series the team in each division having the highest percentage will be awarded the shield of the supper.

The following is a list of teams and men in the Turkey League:

YOUNG BUSINESS MEN: (Games Played Tuesday and Friday Nights.) Tigers—S. E. Cook, captain; J. E. Priest, J. E. Foster, G. M. Johnson, J. E. Ford, C. H. Howard, J. E. Owen, C. S. Hammond, L. A. Armstrong, J. F. Rogers, J. E. Smith.

Badgers—L. R. Remington, captain; J. C. Hamilton, J. E. Johnson, J. E. Ford, C. H. Howard, J. E. Owen, C. S. Hammond, L. A. Armstrong, J. F. Rogers, J. E. Smith.

Wolves—J. J. Cassett, captain; H. N. Cole, E. L. Way, R. E. Sattler, J. D. Camp, J. E. Johnson, J. E. Ford, C. H. Howard, J. E. Owen, C. S. Hammond, L. A. Armstrong, J. F. Rogers, J. E. Smith.

Patrons—W. W. Snow, captain; R. E. Jones, E. R. Mann, W. B. Childs, J. E. Johnson, J. E. Ford, C. H. Howard, J. E. Owen, C. S. Hammond, L. A. Armstrong, J. F. Rogers, J. E. Smith.

Bees—P. J. Wooten, captain; W. E. Cunningham, W. D. Sands, R. E. Burnett, J. E. Johnson, J. E. Ford, C. H. Howard, J. E. Owen, C. S. Hammond, L. A. Armstrong, J. F. Rogers, J. E. Smith.

Men present from the 1914 team: Witherington, catcher; Bryant, pitcher; Burr, first base; Wooten, short; Hill, second base; Montague, centerfielder; This leaves only the keystone sack and catcher's position to be filled.

From the variety will get the services of such men as Morrison, Senter, Carpenter and the regular team. Carpenter's return for service this spring is looked upon as one of the leading prospects for performance on the diamond before the season opens.

The team should have some of the best brand of backstopping that any club has, with the added experience of campaign this spring. "Doc" Witherington was the choice of many writers.

Although the pitching staff will miss the services of two veterans, Pitts and Bubankis, who have served with the team for several seasons, the team should not be weak on the mound by any means, as one regular, Bryant, and two others, the second string hurlers are back in school.

Burr will be remembered as the one who pitched the winning ball game for the Georgia team last season. He lost but few games last season and his record is a credit to him.

Since Burr's natural position is in the outfield, he is being held over to the position of short.

FORD PLAN BOOSTED AT NEW YORK DINNER

Reports of Active Sociological Workers Prove to Be a Big Feature.

It was a year ago, January 12, that the Ford Motor company put into operation the profit-sharing plan for Ford employees. In recognition of the gratifying results which in one year have been accomplished, a dinner to 200 Ford sociological workers, men entrusted with the distribution of these profits, was given at the Hotel Cadillac, Detroit, on the anniversary date. Henry Ford himself, Norval A. Hawkins, Charles A. Brownell, John R. Lee, Frank L. Kingensmith, Gordon MacGregor and other active executives of the Ford Motor company, were present. Remarks were made by Rev. S. S. Marquis, Hon. Charles E. Warren, Kirk Alexander and Edward Guest.

The most interesting features of the dinner were the reports made by the active sociological workers, who, in their work of distributing profits to workmen that deserve them and know how to use them, have accomplished wonderful results in improving the living conditions and stimulating the ambitions and morals and patriotism of 15,000 workmen representing fifty-one different nationalities. Perhaps the most striking feature of the reports characterized the spirit of the remarkable gathering. So closely interwoven are the material and the spiritual with the material, that the higher wage al-

One of the representatives here today said that he did not know whether Georgia and Tennessee would retire from the S. C. A., but he presumed that they would not.

AUBURN QUINTEZ LOSES TO ATLANTA

Auburn had 3 called on them for the same reason. Clements was the star of the contest from an Atlanta standpoint. He was many, and every man who was in the game played good ball. Individually, Forbes, Dubeid, J. Graves and Frank Carter put up good exhibitions of basketball. However, the main feature of the evening's entertainment was the team work of the club. The game was fast and accurate throughout, and time after time they would work sharp plays from the tip-off for pretty field goals.

For Auburn, Clements, at right forward, played the best game. Clements has an uncanny habit of shooting foul goals and last night he shot four out of five chances. Louzell, at guard, and C. Forbes, at center, also played well.

The line-up and summary:

Auburn (15)	Pos.	Auburn (15)
Forbes (15)	C.	Clements (10)
Harrison (10)	L. F.	Faine (6)
Smith (5)	R. C.	Forbes (2)
Dubeid (12)	L. G.	Louzell (2)
Ed Carter (4)	L. G.	Louzell (2)
Weaver (4)	L. G.	Forbes (2)
Martin (2)	Schomberg (2)

Summary.—Time of halves: 20 minutes. Referee: Gilbert Gowan. (Grant Athletic Club.) Field goal: Atlanta 4, Auburn 2. Goals called on Atlanta 4, on Auburn 2. Goals shot Forbes 2, Clements 4.

Winning Teams Often Fail To Make the Fans Enthuse

BY BILLY EVANS, (American League Empire.)

Why are certain clubs, much inferior in playing strength to others, the better drawing cards? Why do the Philadelphia Athletics, one of the greatest teams of all times, should lose money last year while other clubs, such as the Detroit Tigers, who were in the race, should make money? Why should the Detroit team be a better drawing card than the Philadelphia club? Such a condition existed in the American league last season.

I perhaps the first reason that should be advanced is that the Athletics outclassed the field. Much as the baseball fan loves a winner, he does not love a clinch war with high favor. That seems to be the way the Athletics appeared to the Philadelphia fan last season when the Athletics won something like forty out of forty-five games in a stretch. The attention at Shibe park was very ordinary. Fifteen hundred fans would perhaps be a conservative estimate of some of the crowds that turned out to see the champions while on that mad winning streak which really decided the pennant race.

The next reason that might be advanced and probably it is the most important is the fact that the average fan likes a team with a lot of color. The Athletics were one given to doing much of their work in a "clutch" or "clinch" position. While the club boasted of a number of star players, they were stars who content their brilliancy entirely to their work on the field. The club went on the ball with a set purpose, that of winning, and in a majority of cases, succeeded in so doing. The intention was simply to win with the least possible show, for the Athletics are anything but grand stand players. Fans got to feel that when the Athletics played it was a pretty good bet that the opposing team would be beaten if not overwhelmed, and the result would be thought about without anything out of the ordinary happening to live up to the proceedings.

Fans Like Close Games.

When the Philadelphia club was the attraction there was little to say in advance of the meeting, except that the home team seemed to be in for a good trouncing. When other teams appeared, it was entirely different. There was always some angle to dwell upon, other than the probable outcome of the series. There was a chance that a number of things might happen which would tend to enliven the proceedings, regardless of the outcome of the game. Whether it was a condition to be desired is questionable, but there is no denying the fact that the average fan is often more interested in a game with the hope that he will see something out of the ordinary, something that may not have a direct bearing on the game.

The Detroit club seven or eight years ago was a slugging aggregation. Fans went to the parks to see the Tigers battermen wallop the opposing pitcher while the club no longer boasts the reputation still it has, perhaps because two of the leading hitters, Crawford and Cobb, still grace their positions in the line-up. The fans get a great deal of pleasure out of seeing those two star hitters in action. When Cobb steps to the plate, they are prepared for anything to happen, nothing that he may try to do will surprise them. They get a thrill when they see him start for a base. It is a treat to see a fellow slugger like Cobb get on, the Detroit fan in particular. For when Cobb reaches first base, he makes the position of Crawford all the more important. Sam Crawford, since his advent into the majors, has enjoyed the reputation of being a great hitter. A perusal of the records would show game after game in which he broken up with some mighty wallop at a most opportune time. Crawford is the center of attraction at the plate. His position and swing are perfect. The best compliment I ever heard anyone give to the major league slugger, usually made by a Boston fan, Dutch Leonard had succeeded in striking Sam out, after he had done a long foul fly, either of which would have broken up the game had they fallen.

Paid Crawford Inque Compliment.

Why, that fellow Crawford looks like a great hitter, even when he strikes out. Was the Boston fan expressing his opinion of the Tiger outfielder to me? It was a big bit of praise, for a fellow slugger like Cobb is a great hitter when he strikes out. He surely must have some style at the plate. In the game that came next Crawford combination will still be talked about.

Then there is Hughie Jennings the somewhat different manager. The thing original when Jennings introduced his new style of base running, called by unattractive remarks, and steps of a ballet dancer, the public placed its approval on it. He then placed the ball parks to see him perform. No tint introduced in baseball in years was so widely admired as that of the new base running. Jennings was kept busy snapping Hughie in new poses while scribes were kept busy scribbling out new statistics. Jennings' latest creation, all kinds of tales were printed, some of them as ridiculous as they were.

One would have a story saying that a very move made by Jennings was a signal for the catcher to base runner. Others told about how Jennings gave signals through the medium of the word remarks he uttered from the coaching line.

While working in Washington five or six years ago, the man sitting next to me in the street car engaged me in conversation. He asked me if Detroit was the team playing next week, and I replied in the affirmative. He wanted to know if Mr. Jennings

For FAIR Price-Lists —that can be "taken SERIOUSLY"

THIS is a deliberate Attempt to cut the "Haggle" out of Tire buying and selling,—for Consumers.

It is also an Attempt to set right,—with the Public,—thousands of well-intentioned Retailers of Tires and Auto-Accessories.

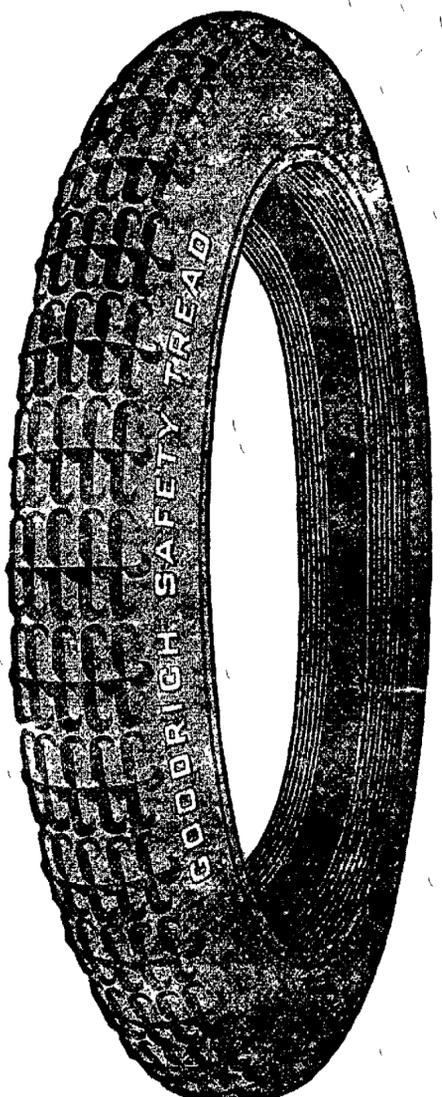

These have, by circumstances, been forced into the gradual adoption of a most Unwholesome Custom, VIZ.—that of selling "PRICE-LISTS" instead of selling Tires, to Consumers,—of selling Discounts OFF Price-Lists, instead of selling Mileage and Service in Tires.

It is not an Attempt to make things harder for the kind of Tire Manufacturer whose Product apparently cannot be sold without the doubtful Expedient of the Padded Price-List.

Said Expedient consisting of an alleged "Price-List" which is purposely printed "UP" so that it may then be deliberately discounted DOWN by the Dealer,—to provide "a Special Bargain" to the Consumer who is Unwary, or who is too busy to investigate Values.

This Attempt is being made also with a sincere desire to save the Retailer of Tires from the consequences of further growth of that Padded Price-List CUSTOM which is inciting Consumers to patronize CUT-PRICE SPECIALISTS and band together to maintain "Supply Depts." with which to fight what they, erroneously, consider EXTORTIONATE Prices and Profits supposed to be charged by Retailers, on "Price-List" basis.

Without the PADDED Price-Lists, which in some cases show as much as 55% Retail Profit on Tires (as much as $11.00 Profit on a single 34 x 4 Plain-Tread Tire), the "CUT PRICE SPECIALISTS" would have no reason for existence, could not make headway, nor threaten to cut the market from beneath the Dealer's feet.

If he can step into an Auto-Accessory Store,—a Garage—or Repair Shop,—in the neighborhood of his need, and there get the Tire he wants, PUT ON in 20 minutes, it is worth a great deal to him to continue his outing without laying up his Car while he awaits Shipment and Delivery of same Tire, on his Telegraphed order.

But, if Auto-Owners do not patronize Auto-Accessory, or localized Tire Dealers, these must go out of business, and such convenient Sources of Supply would then be missed more by Tire-Users than by anyone else.

That is why the adoption of a FAIR Price-List, and the cutting out of the seemingly Extortionate Padded Price-Lists, means so much to both Consumer and Retailer of Tires.

That is why WE take the RISK of lining up the entire Tire Manufacturing Industry against us, in a sincere effort to put the Selling and Buying of Tires on the same sound, safe, and progressive basis that practically all other Merchandise is to-day retailed upon.

WE want to see Price-Lists that are dependable,—Price-Lists that correctly and fairly represent the Mfrs. own sincere Valuation of the Mileage and Service he puts into his Tires.

—Price-Lists that are reasonable, logical, and reliable,—not made to QUOTE DISCOUNTS OFF, but to sell Tires on.

Of course there will still be wide differences in the Value to Consumers,—as great as the difference in the Facilities, Capacity, and Skill of each Manufacturer.

It is not expected, nor required, that Price-Lists shall accurately gauge relative Values, but only that they shall accurately and reliably measure the Value which each Manufacturer intends to give Consumers, for the amount each Consumer invests in his Tires.

It is not desired that the Manufacturers' Price-List shall cut the Dealer's margin down to a profit on which he cannot afford to do business and make money.

It is only expected, urged, and desired, that the Retail Profits offered by Price-Lists shall be moderate enough to be bona-fide.

—Not preposterous "Paper-Profits," that cannot come true without ruin to the future of the Retailer's business, but actual Profits that he actually makes, and that reduce his selling cost, per Tire, to the minimum that moderate Profits and the "One-Price System," can alone make feasible.

That is our Hope, and Wish, for the future of the Tire Industry.

WE set the pace, to-day, by List-Prising our own Tires so as to carry a moderate but REAL profit to the Retailer, instead of the Visionary "Get-rich-quick" profits, of 30% to 55%, that other Tire Price-Lists offer, but cannot deliver, when the price-cutting such huge margins invite, does the setting.

EFFICIENCY METHODS FOR SHOP EMPLOYEES

Factory School Has Been Established by the Hupp Motor Car Company.

The education of shop employees along efficiency methods has for the past year or two been the dominant feature of the entire industrial world. Big manufacturing establishments in various lines for a long time have had their factory schools, where employees are drilled to work with precision, safety, and in a manner which will be to the employees own advantage.

One of the first automobile manufacturing plants to give this kind of educational work, its benefits to the employees, but also to the Hupp Motor Car Company, which recently established a factory school, open to all their employees.

It is the opinion of S. H. Humphrey, manufacturing manager, that it will not be long before the factory school will be as important a part of a large automobile factory as any of its other departments.

"Our idea in opening the factory school," said Mr. Humphrey, "is to teach our men to become efficient mechanics, to show them the fundamental principles back of motor car design, to give them reasons for accurate and careful workmanship and to make them more valuable to themselves.

The mechanical school will be a big benefit to every man who attends. We teach them the principles of motor car construction, how to read blue prints, the functions of the different parts of the engine, their relation to each other, why it is necessary that each man should be his job, and that we have no shirkers, and the results of speed work, after the car is on the road.

Right here is where I think we will accomplish our biggest aim for if we can show the mechanic why it is necessary that we have accurate and careful workmanship in every part that is built in the Huppmobile we will be able to sell without hesitancy, and it would be impossible to build Huppmobiles better.

The school is in charge of R. G. Blaine, son of the noted professor of mechanical devices at Belfast, and a graduate of Edinburgh University. Mr. Blaine besides being an expert mechanic has had a liberal education along mathematical lines, and an ideal man to have in charge of such a school.

"Our idea is to hold meetings twice a week and we shall have experts to talk to our men at frequent intervals on different subjects and carefully.

"It is the aim and object of this company to build Huppmobiles in the best possible manner, and for this reason thorough education of our employees is of utmost importance. I know that this school is going to bring us big results, for the short time the school has been in operation,—only a little over a month—its effect throughout the factory has already become evident.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY.
Britain and Turkey. The Cause of the Rupture. Set out in brief form, from the diplomatic correspondence, by Sir Edward Cook. An interesting pamphlet of about thirty pages, in which the author says "that it seems desirable that the history of the rupture between Great Britain and Turkey should be widely known." Another pamphlet by this author gives a brief resume of correspondence with reference to the European crisis—and this pamphlet has led to the preparation of the present pamphlet, in which a resume is given of the causes leading to war between Great Britain and her allies on the one side, and Turkey as the ally of Germany on the other side.

England, Germany and Europe. By James Wycliffe Headlam, M. A. (Formerly fellow of King's college, Cambridge, and author of a "Life of Bismarck.") This article, now in pamphlet form, originally appeared in the Church Quarterly Review of October, 1914. It is now reprinted by request.

An Englishman's Call to Arms. Reprinted from The Daily Mail. The above title is taken from the last message sent to a friend by Captain Norman Leslie—it is as follows:
 "Try and not worry too much about your own affairs, units, individuals cannot count. Remember, we are writing a new page of history. Future generations cannot be allowed to read the decline of the British empire and attribute it to us. We live our little lives and die. But count the loss and author of "History of Psychology," etc. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York city.)

Studies in Southern History and Politics. Inscribed to William Lieber, Ph.D., LL.D. Lieber, professor of history and philosophy in Columbia university, by his former pupil the author. The preface by James W. Garner is very interesting, as well as the table of contents. (Columbia University Press, New York city.)

Eros. By Emil Lucka. Translated with introduction, by Elsie Schuessler. The best critics say that Dr. Lucka has succeeded in presenting to his readers an historical and philosophical account of the development of the erotic passion in all climes. The book is also considered the most poetical work on the subject. Being a remarkable volume, it is now the subject for argument, for some of the best writers resent the author's conclusion that the Germanic race, including the British and North American peoples, is capable of the highest love. The introduction of several pages will be read with interest. (G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York and London.)

The World's War. How It Looks to Nations Involved and What It Means. We furnish the reader with a series of interesting subjects of the day, subjects that are being studied and discussed by two worlds, Austria and Germany, Russia; III. Germany IV. France; Luxembourg; Belgium; Holland; England; the English; Turkey; War in the After the War and the Wilson's dispatch to the German Emperor. The author, Elbert Francis Baldwin, writes to the American public and has tried to give a complete survey of the entire situation. (The Macmillan Company, New York city.)

Mysticalism as a Mystical Fact and the Steiner. Third Edition, Revised and authorized English translation. The

Mr. Allstorm's numerous friends in different cities, say without a doubt, selected, the poem "When the Lights Go Out," being distinctly a Keely's Poem, especially in the beauty of a single solitary which is written in slang so common that sounds uncommon unless you speak it. "The Sage of East Aurora" is the subject of one of the author's poems. His reference is a very pretty piece of sarcasm which Elbert Hubbard will no doubt receive in the spirit in which it is intended. It seems that Hubbard, who is a great critic, in writing a pen sketch of a great poet, has praised Robert Burns, and Allstorm, also as a critic, writes the following:

"You were a warbler, Robert Burns, immortal for a' that."
 Though moving pictures please us now, they'll improve for a' that."
 And those big ships upon the sea that move without a change, and prove inventions fail, But love is without a change: its music echo long;
 For even Heaven takes from earth the notes which it will soon And hence a thousand years from now the world will drink and say "Pray who was this Hubbard, pray? And all the mighty winds that blow that are being studied and discussed by two worlds, Austria and Germany, Russia; III. Germany IV. France; Luxembourg; Belgium; Holland; England; the English; Turkey; War in the After the War and the Wilson's dispatch to the German Emperor. The author, Elbert Francis Baldwin, writes to the American public and has tried to give a complete survey of the entire situation. (The Macmillan Company, New York city.)

GOSSIP FROM RAND, McNALLY & CO. Colonel W. D. Boyce, owner of the Indiana Times, Saturday Blade, Chicago Ledger, The Farming Business, etc. and author of Illustrated South America, is an inveterate traveler. He has visited the American continent, the United States Colonies and Dependencies. He is the result of his journey. He has taken 300 views with his camera, of which almost a reproduced in the volume just issued.

THE NEW ART SERIES ON BOTTICELLI. Raphael, Watts and Holbein are certainly the greatest masters in art books. Each volume has thirty-two photo-gravures of great masterpieces by these master painters.

"Fenny" Ross, who has for years been the most popular of the Chicago Tribune's columnists, has put "Esther, Mama's Angel Child," into book form.

"The Lovers," by Eden Philpotts, has been issued as a popular copy-right and is the American equivalent of the Englishman, but is gradually coming into his own in America.

ABOUT BOOKS AND AUTHORS. Herbert Adams Gibbons, the author of "The New Market," has recently taken a fifteen days' trip to the West Coast, and reports that nowhere did he have the slightest difficulty with the authorities on the subject of "The American Continent," says, "is altogether normal." Dr. Gibbons is a former member of the University of Toronto, and is now at the University of Toronto, Ontario.

POETRY. Sonnet of Kabir, translated by Rabindranath Tagore, author of "Gitanjali," etc. Edited by the assistance of "Gitanjali." This volume contains one of the most interesting and beautiful of the history of Indian mysticism, who lived, according to reports, about 1490. Tagore, the Indian poet, whose fame is world-wide, has not only translated Kabir's poems into English, but has interpreted in a sweet, sympathetic way Kabir's vision and thought.

James L. Ford, author of "The Great Mirage," just published by Harper & Bros. is a touring artist and critic who has spent his life in New York city.

Mark Twain's romantic story of the little king and his subject who changed places with each other, has been chosen by the war department for use in the schools of Manila. The title is "The Prince and the Pauper."

Benjamin C. Moomaw, of Virginia, whose verse ranks with the best in current literature, has written for The Constitution a spirited song, entitled "The Midnight Run."
 In a letter to the editor of The Constitution the author says:
 "I enclose a poem, 'The Midnight Run' dedicated to the engineer of the Midnight Flyer, who, I think, is the greatest hero in the world."
 The poem will be read with interest and appreciation. Mr. Moomaw wrote the ode for the Jamestown exposition, and but recently read a poem in Atlanta at the laying of the cornerstone of Oglethorpe university. Following is the poem:

The Midnight Run.
 I.
 He goes as one may go unto the clarion call, afar,
 Of battle, while the soul exults above the fear of war;
 Or as the lines of duty lead, wherever it may be,
 That fate shall find her challenge out,
 For he must be as the storm wind, over the world away,
 Over the fields and over the streams, before the lightning comes,
 Flings down the starry gold as from the gateway of the east,
 If comes like thrilling melodies unto a gorgeous feast.

II.
 'Twas thus he held, that solemn night, the lever of his power,
 And thundered over the rails as though he cried the awful hour,
 When to the wrath of God comes forth to smite a godless age,
 And 'A' rushes to the feast of death with quenchless rage.
 On, and ever it thunders on, for since the world began,
 What other victory so marks the haughty son of man?
 League after league across the plains, or where the billows be,
 And fling unto the rushing wind the challenge of the sea.

III.
 Into the empire of the dark as all the hours drew Unto the midnight, even as the blazing
 Along the narrow flow of lines of steel, the eye, and, to the soul,
 Or him flashed over the lane of light, as one who seeks to know
 By all the stars and stars, or by the lordly, sun aglow
 With glory, what the coming hour or hastening moment bears
 For him who thus along the earth, born perils and fears;
 Or to what secret destiny, or what tremendous goal.

IV.
 There where the woodland skirts the way his spirit gently smiled
 When over the rails the fleeing hare
 By the fierce glare of the field, the heifer fled, and turned Anon to gaze wild-eyed upon the roaring fiend that burned
 Its way into the shadowy walls and dim embattlements
 Of old, imperial night; or flung afar
 Its sudden vents
 Of rage, or, 'Tis, how could the eye, alert for peril, how could the eye,
 A ghostly form in sombre robes before his lightning flee?

V.
 It fled within the sheltering edge of the mysterious dark,
 And over its shoulder turned its visage,
 To the onrushing train, and still it swiftly fled before.
 The light, and from the steadfast eye of him who sternly bore
 Upon his soul the life and love committed to his care,
 Devoting thus at length his life, as only they may dare
 Who are the manliest men, and worthy of this holy trust;
 And who shall say that hero soul descended to the dust?

TROUBLE WITH PONCE DE LEON WAS THEY WERE NOT DOING FOX TROT AND THE HESITATION IN HIS SAD DAYS

Elixir of Youth Isn't Anything to Drink, Says Britt Craig, It's Something to Dance—In These Strange and Eventful Days, Miss Debutante and What Goes With Her Aren't Two in the Shade Compared to Foxy Grandpa on a Ballroom Floor.

By Britt Craig.
Nobody has ever accused me of being an explorer. I have never boasted of any particular ability in that direction, although during my day I have discovered that mixed drinks aren't conducive to equilibrium, and that if there is anything on earth more beautiful than a beautiful woman, it's a beautiful girl.
Then, too, I have discovered that mornings-after can be avoided only by passing up nights-before and that ice water furnishes one of the most shining examples of the infidelity of man. But all these do not put me in the Christopher Columbus class.
As I say, my exploring ability will never make history. Aided and abetted by a street car, however, and enough nerve to attend a formal dinner-dance without a dress suit, I did accomplish something in the exploring line that outdid Ponce de Leon with his months of fruitless travel and hardship in quest of the fountain of youth he didn't find.

Where he took a young army, several months off and an unlimited expense account, I took a trolley car. Our explorations likewise differ in that I found what Ponce de Leon didn't—a first-class fountain of youth.
It was gushing forth in volumes, and there drinking from its effervescent depths were near-octogenarians who slumped age in the face, scorned rheumatism and locked arms with youth.

THEY WEREN'T FOUNTAINING IN THE OLDEN DAYS.

But the discovery of this fountain cannot in anywise reflect upon the failure of Ponce de Leon. The fountain of youth—or, rather, this particular sort of fountain—did not exist in his day.

Instead of the lithia of youth from a hillside spring, this fountain of my discovery emitted seductive music and visions of beautifully gowned women dancing beautiful steps in a metropolitan dining room. It was a dinner-dance from 10 until 2, a. m.—youth's own chosen hours.

It is at this fountain that Atlanta's gay-young-old men of affairs imbibe the elixir of youth.

The Sunday editor had said: "Why is it Atlanta's old men are so young?"

And I had promptly answered: "Search me!"

When he ordered: "Go out and find out!"

"Had I been a sailor I would have replied: "Aye, aye, sir!"

A newspaper man, instead, I said: "Sure!"

As though it were a mere matter of going across the street and asking O'Leary.

I went in and consulted members of the society staff.

"On this particular night," I asked them, "where might I be able to find the representative men of affairs, of Atlanta who are so old they're ashamed to admit their birthdays?"

SOCIETY STAFF MAKES STRATEGIC BLUNDER.

"At home," she informed me with the emphasis of one having made a startling revelation.

"But I'm not speaking of where they should be."

They consulted the society editor's assignment book. It disclosed many places, principally an elaborate dinner-dance. The thought struck me amidst-

Ah, it must be the song of the bul-bul and the sweep of the dancers and the dinner cocktail that restoreth their youth. We shall explore!

I caught the trolley car with Ponce de Leon's name on it and, in due time, arrived. The lobby of the hotel, its floor gleaming from excessive scrubbing and naked of the rugs that had been removed for dancing purposes, was practically deserted, except for the bell boys and pages and doormen and a house detective who had tried to disguise himself in a dress coat.

A house detective hasn't any more business in a dinner suit than a crowfish in a chicken pie. The spectacle of a square-toed bull with a No. 16 collar and a 6% hat flopping around in a swallow-tail trying to find some place to keep his hands isn't any inspiring picture.

Every hotel that can afford a house detective, however, has to put him on display on dress occasions, and shows just how far a badge and dress suit would spoil an otherwise good truck driver.

But caution bade me speak with more or less cordiality to this house detective. Back in the depths I heard the hum of voices and the soft strains of an orchestra, and it occurred to me that dinner was in progress.

Under the withering glare of the ubiquitous house sleuth, I stole upstairs to the mezzanine floor and cast about for a convenient spot to hide myself. There was no place to be found that did not offer conspicuousness. The mezzanine floor looked as though the house detective, himself, had designed that floor with a view to concentration of effort.

SOMETHING NEW—HIDING IN SPOTLIGHT.

Search as I might, I could not find a nook in which I could conceal my un-dress-suited self, until my eyes happened upon a spotlight erected in a corner of a balcony that extended out over the cafe.

I felt like embracing this "spot" rack like a long lost friend who had returned in a time of direst need. I snatched a chair and sat down beside it. A few feet away sat the musicians who gazed with apparent thirst upon the hurrying waiters underneath them.
The spot light was being used to light the path of a professional dancing team who proucted through the maze of diners in the main cafe amidst a hubbub of exclamations, mostly from men.
My nook was splendid for observatory purposes, as it commanded a view of every corner of the spacious dining room. I glanced over the immense throng and one of the first things that struck my attention was that fully two-thirds of the men seated at the tables had passed their half-century milestone. Some were plumb beyond redemption.

And I shook hands with myself for having come to the place where, even though they may not find it, Atlanta's men of wealth and affairs, at least, came in quest of youth.
Later, it was to observe conclusively that they not only searched, but found, it might not have been genuine, but it was artificial enough to pass without criticism. It may leave a dark brown taste in tomorrow's mouth, but, my! what a good time while it lasted!

ALREADY BEGGING FOR A TUNE.
The diners were hurrying through their final courses that they might speed the dancing. Even now furtive eyes were lifted to the orchestra in telepathic appeal for a lively dance-tune. The musicians were contemptibly idle, resting upon their instruments and looking down upon their patrons as though they were spoiled children.
I gazed across the way and beheld a judge of my acquaintance whose austere dignity on the bench was nothing short of awesome. I had once been a martyr-

A DISCREDITED SYSTEM THROTTLES A GREAT CITY.

By way of introduction.

J. M. B. Hoxsey is vice president and treasurer of the Southern Bell and Cumberland Telephone companies.

He has been active in unselfish civic and philanthropic projects in Atlanta. He is a public-spirited citizen without bias or egotism or impracticability or anything else but a desire to serve and to build. His record proves these things.

Now, then— Mr. Hoxsey, in a temperate and business-like card, published today, deals with the industrial and the municipal situation in Atlanta—and the two situations today cannot be separated.

He has served on many chambers of commerce boards, and is now on one charged with investigating the problem of unemployment. This latter feature he describes in a manner that appeals and convinces.

He does not believe in artificially-created employment for the unemployed.

He says that in the building of schools, the extension of parks, street work, work on sewers and our water plants, on many other municipal facilities, there is plenty of work to employ nearly all the unemployed in remunerative labor.

He says what The Constitution has urged, that the city will save money by undertaking this work now because of the low material.

He says what we all know to be true, that at some time this work must be done, or stagnation will set in—and that the longer it is postponed the more expensive it will be.

His remedy is a very simple one, and the only one—a bond issue. He asks The Constitution's support.

We endorse every line of Mr. Hoxsey's card, but there is one snag in the way— Our wretched, inadequate, squabbling and quibbling administrative system!

For a month council and the finance committee have been wrangling over the finance sheet, with not one thing accomplished.

Work in each department is held up. No department knows what to expect. The schools are menaced. In a city of nearly two hundred thousand there has been no new school built for two years. Factionalism, partisanship, whatever you want to call it, is playing hob with municipal efficiency, as it has done for many years under the existing system.

More than two-thirds of the registered voters would undoubtedly favor bonds for the purposes indicated if they had confidence in the city's system of administration—but

The people of Atlanta will not vote three millions or more in bonds to be expended under a system the inefficiency of which has been so glaringly illustrated for the past month!

This is now apparent— It wouldn't be so bad if this year's disgraceful hold-up of the city's budget was an unusual event.

But it is the same over and over again every year.

The people have become disgusted with the system that makes such a thing possible. The Constitution has urged a bond issue as the inevitable solution of the city's troubles.

We have hammered the argument day in and day out, receiving overwhelming approval in our contention for a betterment of city conditions, but everywhere being met with the statement—

"WE WILL NOT VOTE FOR A BOND ISSUE THE PROCEEDS OF WHICH MUST BE EXPENDED UNDER THE PRESENT SYSTEM OF ADMINISTRATION!"

And can council wonder at this response? Every day adds to popular protest against the city's administrative system and to a lack of confidence in those whose petty bickerings are penalizing thousands of laboring men in Atlanta and holding the city back when it should be going forward!

The duty of the council is clear— If it cannot dispose of the city's budget and cut the leash which is retarding the progress of the city, then—

It is the duty of the entire body, from mayor down, to turn their commissions back to the people and give the city a chance to elect as their successors men who will lay aside petty politics and cheap bickering long enough to pull the city out of the snarl in which it has been permitted to drift by a top-heavy administrative system which is throttling the city's development and penalizing every man, woman and child in it.

The mayor has already offered to throw his commission back to the people and to go before them on a change of governmental system, if council will do likewise.

The only possible excuse for council not following him would be for its members to put their selfish interests before the welfare of the city, taking no chance at an expression that would weigh their individual welfare against that of the entire city. We do not believe that they would be content to assume this attitude.

But the strain is reaching the breaking point—

The city sees now, as never before, the weakness of an administrative system which is growing heavier and more unwieldy every year—and that the city will in due time apply the remedy there can be no doubt.

A ROLL OF HONOR.

In a communication published today Dr. Thornwell Jacobs cites what might truthfully be called a golden roll of honor of the men instrumental in the founding of Oglethorpe university. Commendation from Dr. Jacobs is significant. Not only has he been elected president of Oglethorpe, but it was his amazing, whirlwind field work and unflagging enthusiasm that played a controlling part in the consummation of this splendid enterprise.

Dr. Jacobs states that it was fourteen men who, when it was even doubted if the project could be materialized, undertook to subscribe $500 each, or such part as might be necessary, with which to begin the campaign for Oglethorpe.

The inspiring feature of the story is that these men, mostly Atlantans, studiously avoided publicity. It was not that for which they were looking. Their chief aim was the success of a great enterprise in which they believed, and their motive power was unostentatious civic spirit.

Here are the names: Wilmer L. Moore, Atlanta, Ga.; C. E. Graham, Greenville, S. C.; William Benseal, Atlanta, Ga.; J. M. Brawner, Griffin, Ga.; L. C. Mandeville, Carrollton, Ga.; Dr. T. P. Hinman, Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. M. N. Armstrong, Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. P. P. Calhoun, Atlanta, Ga.; W. F. Winecoff, Atlanta, Ga.; F. M. Inman, Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. E. G. Jones, Atlanta, Ga.; John K. Cutler, Atlanta, Ga.; Dr. W. S. Kendrick, Atlanta, Ga.; Captain J. W. English, Atlanta, Ga.

Men of this type are the best assets of a community. Any state and city may feel its destiny and its ideals assured with such men ready ever to step unassumingly into the breach.

And the best feature is that every enterprise, of whatever nature, has proved Atlanta rich in citizens of this type.

EUROPE'S FRANKENSTEIN.

The censors have not given us a very accurate idea of the percentage of killed and disabled in the European war. But considering the numbers involved, and the time the war is likely to last, one thing stands out—Europe is building up a veritable Frankenstein in the shape of inferior men, deteriorated mentally, morally and physically.

The youngest and healthiest men of the leading continental nations have been placed on the firing line. The larger proportion will, of course, escape with their lives, though they may be wounded. But no man who comes through that tornado of fury, unparalleled in history, but will have its mark left on him indelibly.

What of the children who are the offspring of these men? Are they likely to be strong, resistant, virile, productive? Hardly. Look at France. Today she is doing magnificent fighting. But she is stretched to her farthest resource, and the point is that the fighting is being done by undersized men, who do not match the Germans, the English or the Russians in physique. The responsibility for this condition, as for the tendency toward sterility in the French, rests largely upon the Napoleonic wars. These wars sapped the best blood of France. The effect was not immediately visible. It is counting now, and it may count disastrously before the present futile war is ended.

One wonders if the other nations have counted the cost in this direction, if no other. They wage war, ostensibly, in the name of national preservation. Yet, by a paradox, they are pursuing a course that may ultimately threaten national preservation.

That is just one reason why, even if Germany wins in the current struggle, she may lose in the long run. For she is sacrificing every available man, utterly reckless of the future, if the point of the moment may be gained. What the German historian of the future will have to say will be interesting.

The mothers know the frightful cost, the eventual consequences, of all this lordly blood-letting. It is upon them that the burden principally falls. They must see their menfolk swallowed up in an insatiable maw, all in the name of patriotism, with never a protest. Lucky is the United States that thus far it has escaped the far-flung effects of the madness that has seized all Europe.

POSSIBLE, NOT PROBABLE.

The reluctant admission was drawn from John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in his testimony before the commission on industrial relations that there was a possibility donations by the great foundations, such as the Rockefeller, the Carnegie, etc., might exercise an undue influence on educational tendencies in this country. It is unfortunate that the chairman of the commission is one John D. Walsh, of St. Louis, who seems more bent upon occupying the spotlight than in maintaining the perspective that is essential in investigations of this magnitude.

Princeton, Harvard, Yale, Berkeley, Leland Stanford, and all the great universities of the country, not forgetting the University of Georgia at Athens, and the Tulane university at New Orleans, have been recipients of endowments and loan funds from individuals of all manner of faiths. Yet it is not of record that the young men issuing therefrom have, been influenced by the views of the donors.

It may be objected that in the case of the great modern foundations, the gifts are so huge, the control so absolute and stipulations so implicit, as to impress participating young men with a sense of obligation, and of subtle, unconscious yielding to influence. That theory belongs much more to the doctrinaire than to the man of practical sense. What a boy goes to any institution for is an education. When he emerges, diploma in hand, he bears the college stamp, of course, just as he does when he emerges from Athens or Harvard. But deal with him in matters of religion, of business or of politics, and it is a long shot that you will find him swayed by the fact that he was tutored by men paid by multimillionaires.

The country needs a rebaptism in common sense and a wholesome forgetfulness of some of the bogies raised in the era of the muck-raker and the demagogue. Rockefeller and Carnegie may harbor sinister designs on the minds of the future generation. But their lives and utterances of latter years do not bear out any such nonsensical assumptions.

WHAT HURTS DEMOCRACY.

When General Wotherspoon, former chief of staff of the army, assumed charge of the department of public works in New York city, he declared one of his first cares would be to dismiss the men whose chief qualification was to help get out the vote on election day. That is practically the platform upon which General Bingham headed the police department in New York city. In New York they still point to the regime of Bingham as one in which efficiency ruled machine politics. It is probable General Wotherspoon's administration will make the same record. But—they "got" Bingham in the long run. Will they "get" Wotherspoon?

That question really compresses the core of rule by the people. A reform wave starts, given impetus by intolerable conditions, and some such unchallengeable personality as Wotherspoon or Bingham is put in to clean the rascals out, and to give the city a decent administration.

Then, what happens? Sad to relate, the people go to sleep again, thinking they have accomplished wonders and forgetting that the price of efficient government, like the price of liberty, is eternal vigilance.

The prevailing trouble is the average voter thinks he has done his part when he votes a good man, or men, into office. He forgets to watch for the sure and insidious encroachments of the petty small politicians, the men who make their livings by politics, who could not earn a "meal ticket" in any other calling, but who seem to be adepts in fooling "part of the people part of the time."

As a consequence, matters gradually drift back into old conditions, the good man is either corrupted or grows discouraged from lack of encouragement, and after awhile there is the same old job to do over again.

No city in America is exempt from the spectacle—including Atlanta, whose exhibitions of indifference toward her municipal system are perfectly incompatible with the city's characteristics in other directions.

Fortunately, for genuine rule by the people, more voters are constantly realizing the necessity, in self-interest, for vigilance. Only when the entire voting population is thus, educated will we have government that can accurately be termed efficient.

When they become president for a day they are quickly informed that they didn't see Mexico first.

Now, really, are the bunched birthdays of all the kings on earth worth a prize fight on a battle front?

Don't look for a thunder of bands. Prosperity is in the ranks, waiting for the recognition of a handshake.

The war-kings wear the worried look. The slaughter is so slow!

UNIVERSAL PEACE POSSIBLE ONLY THROUGH WORK OF OUR WOMEN.

By Isma Dooly.

Back on woman falls another burden—that of carrying from the cradle to high places the message of universal peace. This message cannot happen at the psychological moment and ebb in truth all at once the world of men and women. It is a message that will have to grow and reach out, and finally become a doctrine. The old tradition of ebb and flow, we have to change and even when the little boy of the cradle tightens for the first time his fat fist, to the mother will have to have to fight for his country does not mean to strike at a brother, but to become so good and strong as to teach their first lesson—the lesson that will broaden as it goes on. This first lesson is a composite one of country-loving and brotherly love. The coming generation may begin and receive their training in it through the educational organization of the nation, for logically the thought has taken root in the fountainhead of the university, and will permeate, let us hope, every department of education.

Dr. Guthrie's Plan.

The Lady of the Valley

By FRANK L. STANTON.

THE Valley lies still in the beam Of Winter's wild, lingering light, But I know of a glory far-thrilled through its dream— The fairy-like, phantoms of flowers that seem The shadows of angels of night.

FOR the Valley is dreaming of Spring— Of the starlight that slithes from the eyes That out of all season makes mockingbirds sing, While the silver-soft bells of the dim thrushes ring Of morning and violet skies.

AND I sing to the Valley: "When Sleep Has lavished her love-gift of dreams That hold the high

Another Great Trunk Line Railroad for Georgia Soon; Actual Work of Construction Starts Within Few Days

Map showing route of new Georgia railroad, upon which work of construction will soon begin. New line will connect Jacksonville and Atlanta. The promoters will also be bidders for the lease of the state road when this matter is considered by the legislature next year.

Another great trunk-line railroad for Georgia and one of the most important that has been constructed in the south in many years is now under way. So far have the plans materialized that the actual work of construction will begin within the next few days.

This announcement was made by J. A. Henderson, president of the Ocala Southern Railroad company, when seen by a representative of the Constitution. Mr. Henderson was in the city on a business trip in connection with his road, and asked about the proposed new railroad, said that the plans were about completed. Coming from such a source, the news cannot but carry joy to the heart of every Georgian who feels a pride and interest in the welfare and prosperity of his state.

Mr. Henderson, as is well known throughout the south, is no dreamer of dreams. He is a man who "does things." He has done things before, and great things, for he has built railroads and carried to success many other enterprises. Having served ten years in the Georgia legislature, he is fully cognizant of the needs of the state in the way of railroad development. He is a born promoter and one who has never failed to carry out any project he has undertaken. This much is stated in order to give a strong assurance of the reliability of the good news which The Constitution now heralds.

ROUTE OF NEW RAILROAD
NORTHWEST TO SOUTHEAST
The new railroad will cut through the state in an almost air-line route from the extreme northwest to the extreme southeast border, making a commercial artery that will mean millions of dollars to business men and farmers throughout the state. It will give Georgia and the state railroad another direct outlet to the sea. The men behind the big enterprise are well known for ability and success in the business world and have too strong a financial backing to admit of any doubt as to the railroad being built as proposed and in as short time as possible.

The new road is sure to revolutionize commercial and farming interests in a great section of Georgia, as it will traverse many of the richest counties, touch some of the largest cities and connect a number of the most important towns in the state. It will also connect large cities with many small but important towns by short lines. With a route of this kind, the state, with men of practical railroad-building ability and experience, with a sound financial backing, the success of the new road, states Mr. Henderson, is already assured.

WORK OF CONSTRUCTION TO BEGIN SHORTLY
The actual work of construction will begin with the next few days, a statement that dispels any doubt as to the soundness of the enterprise and the intention of the promoters. The announcement that a new railroad—a great trunk line—is to be built in Georgia, and at once, is not only a welcome piece of news from a commercial and transportation point of view, but coming just at this time it will be far-reaching in its influence upon business, carrying, as it must, the assurance that capital is ready for such investment.

It is, therefore, with no little degree of pleasure that The Constitution gives the news of the building of a railroad through one of the richest sections of the south and at a time when every investment of capital and the expenditure of money means not only the employment of labor, but stamps a guarantee upon the prosperity of Georgia and this section of the country.

ACCOMPANYING MAP SHOWS IMPORTANT ROUTE OF ROAD
Look at the accompanying map. Note how this new road will cut from north-west to south-east through the state. See what a direct route it makes from Atlanta to the sea. Read the list of counties it will traverse and the important cities and towns it will touch. The magnitude of the enterprise, can then be more fully realized.

It will be seen that the proposed route is, first, from Jacksonville, Fla., to Atlanta. The promoters, as has been seen by a statement from Mr. Henderson further on, will be bidders for the lease of the state road next summer, when a new lease is almost certain to be made by the legislature. If the state road is secured by the promoters, the new trunk line will extend from Jacksonville to Chattanooga.

While the main and general route of the road is practically agreed upon, there may be some changes and deviations in order to take in important towns, as many such are clamoring, it is said, to get on the line. Owning to the fact that the legislature has made it is not improbable that some important changes may be made at two points on the route as shown on the map. These changes, however, will not alter the route as a whole. Mr. Henderson, who is president of the Ocala Southern, as stated, and from whom The Constitution obtained the good news, said that it has always been the dream of the Ocala Southern to make a connection with some line running to the gulf, probably the South Georgia railroad from Sparks, Ga., into Florida, which would be a very desirable route if secured. It is already built and would reach far in the direction of the gulf. It has also been the idea of the Ocala Southern to make an extension to Jacksonville, either a direct line from Milltown to Jacksonville or via the Waycross and Western from Milltown to Waycross and from Waycross to St. Mary's via the Atlantic, Waycross and Northern railroad, which is now proposed and partly constructed, and which is known as Captain Lem Johnson's line. There is a strong sentiment for this last named route and it is being seriously considered. With this line another link would be to Jacksonville and then on to Jacksonville.

CONNECTING LINKS OF NEW TRUNK LINE
The Ocala Southern runs at present from Nashville, Ga., in Berrien county, to Rochelle, in Wilcox county, a distance of about 65 miles. The first construction work on the northern extension will begin at Rochelle, where the right-of-way has been secured for quite a distance and work ready to commence.

This first seven miles is between Rochelle and Pope City, in Wilcox county, where it gives a northern connection with the Hawkinsville and Gulf line.

From Pope City there are two prominent propositions before the company, as can be seen by reference to the map. One is to construct from Pope City to Tippettville, then to Indian Springs, in Butts county; from Jacksonville, from McDonough, and from McDonough to Atlanta. The line will intersect within 11 miles of Atlanta with the Georgia and Carolina road, to the southeast of the city, thereby giving an easy way into Atlanta.

WILL BID FOR LEASE OF THE STATE ROAD
As it seems to be a certainty that the Georgia legislature will this coming summer find it necessary to lease the state road, the promoters of the new trunk line have arranged to be a bidder and there is a probability that they will secure control of the road. Under such a lease the state road will be operated in connection with the line as proposed, from Jacksonville to Atlanta, thereby giving the state road the long-desired outlet to the sea.

The members of the Georgia legislature will no doubt read with interest the proposition to construct such a road, as they will doubtless find it a necessity to make a new lease this year of the state road.

COUNTIES OF GEORGIA WHICH WILL BE TRAVERSED
An inspection of the map will show that the following large and important

Georgia counties will be traversed by the new road between the Florida line and Atlanta:

Fulton, DeKalb, Henry, Butts, Monroe, Bibb, Houston, Twiggs, Dodge, Wilcox, Ben Hill, Irwin, Berrien, Lowndes, Clinch and Echols.

The following are the counties in Georgia through which the state road will pass:

Fulton, Cobb, Bartow, Gordon, Whitfield and Calhoun.

Among the important cities and towns through which the new road will pass are:

Atlanta, McDonough, Locust Grove, Jenkinsburg, Jackson, Indian Springs, Forsyth, Macon, Avondale, Perry, Hawkinsville, Hawkinsville, Wallace, Mableton, Plainview, Bartonville, Cleyson, Pope City, Rochelle, Fitzgerald, Ocala, Alapaha, Ashwood, Nashville, Milltown, Sermans, Dupont and Homerville. This does not include the towns along the state road nor the ones that may be taken in if deviations of the route, as mentioned, are decided upon.

POPULATION AND AREA OF COUNTIES ON LINE
It is interesting to note the size and population of the counties through which the new line will pass, counting the state railroad, the total area of the counties through which the line will pass is 6,626 square miles. The total population of the counties is 478,004, or nearly half a million people.

The total number of counties thus affected is sixteen. On the state road the number of counties is five, the population 32,756, and the total area 1,669 square miles. This makes a grand total in Georgia of a population of 560,760 and an area of 7,895 square miles to be affected. By adding Jacksonville and Chattanooga the population will be increased some 150,000 and there is no reason why the close to the 10,000 mark to be served by this new enterprise.

The population and area of the counties on the state road are as follows:

Cobb—23,357. 311. Bartow—25,388. 485. Gordon—15,861. 357. Whitfield—15,934. 285. Calhoun—7,134. 171. These populations have all been increased since the last census from 1910.

PRES. HENDERSON TALKS ABOUT NEW LINE
When President Henderson of the Ocala Southern, was seen by The Constitution representative and asked about the new trunk line that is to mean so much to Georgia, he said:

"Yes, it is true that we have all matters concerning the road now well in hand and there is no reason why the people of Georgia should not be informed about the facts. The route has been practically agreed upon, the right-of-way has been acquired, and the distance, and we expect to begin the actual work of construction within the next few days. I would like to state that the people along the proposed route, including the line where there is no such support, have given their right-of-way freely and almost without an exception without a dollar of charge. They realize the value of such a road to a community, even in sections that are not served, because they want competition.

"We have practically in hand the profile of the line from Jacksonville to Atlanta, and we expect little or no trouble when we begin the work of construction.

"I would like to say in this connection that the construction work will be done far cheaper than any line has been built in this section of the country in recent years. There will be no waste of either time or money. There is frequently extravagance in the building of a railroad just as there can be in the keeping of a road.

"While the main route has been agreed upon there are two changes that might be made. One between Pope City and Perry and another between Milltown and Jacksonville. We are showing much divided as to which route will be taken between Pope City and Perry, both routes having made propositions which have strong points.

"The connection with the building of the new road which will be of special and great interest to the people of Georgia is that this road will in all probability be a strong bidder for the lease of the state road.

"One strong reason why the new line would like to lease the state road is on account of the terminal facilities at both Atlanta and Chattanooga, owned and controlled by the great property of the state.

"Our canvass of the section through which our road will run has convinced me that not for many years has there been a railroad that will mean so much to Georgia. The entire state will be benefited."

STRONG FINANCIAL BACKING BEHIND ENTERPRISE
When asked about the financial backing of the new road, Mr. Henderson said:

"We are operating 65 miles from Nashville to Rochelle and the road is bonded and comfortably financed, and we have made still further financial arrangements to begin work and make further extensions.

"The large area and population to be affected in the counties through which the line will pass speaks of the importance of the road. With over half a million of people in these counties and with nearly ten thousand square miles of territory, to say nothing of nearly a million acres of land, the route is one that will give a wonderful developing agency to the state, and, for that matter, to the south.

"It may be of some interest to state that we have already been approached about the shops for the new road. Many are anxious to know what place will get the shops, with their payrolls. As to this I can only state at this time that the matter of shops has not as yet been decided upon. We will give very careful consideration before reaching a decision."

Mr. Henderson stated that since he has found among financial people in the east, as well as in this section, that there is a better feeling existing between the railroads and the interstate and state commissions, as well as between railroads and the law-making bodies, there is greater willingness on the part of financiers to back up enterprises needing capital. He said that the cessation of nagging of railroads by the people has brought about a more liberal change that means much to the upbuilding of the south, thereby furnishing work and homes to the idle and homeless.

NEWS WILL BE READ WITH GREAT INTEREST
Now that the announcement of the building of the trunk line has been made public, the news will doubtless be read with absorbing interest by the citizens of Georgia, the people of the south and the members of the state legislature.

It will create renewed interest in the leasing of the state road. It will stimulate activities throughout the state and herald a brighter prospect for Georgia, and give an impetus to many kinds of industries. The very fact that capital is to give Georgia a new railroad and that men of push and energy are behind the enterprise, is a most encouraging thing.

Mr. Henderson returned to his home Saturday. Further news of the projected railroad will be furnished by him as rapidly as developments take place, and the people of Georgia will have such developments with keen and wide-awake interest.

DANCING IS THE ELIXIR OF YOUTH THESE DAYS

before his noted bar of justice. He held every one of these things for the male to break forth that I might gloat in the spectacle of my foe (the judge) trying to unlimber his age and rheumatism into accord with the vicious howl of a fox-trot across the table.

Presently the orchestra ripped into tune. I recognized one of the most popular ragtime arias of the day. Harmony instantly began to assert itself in the shoulders and arms and ankles of the guests as they arose from their chairs.

The fountain of youth had begun to spout. It was a fox-trot, one of those liddle, tiddle, tiddle, tiddle, tee-tee-tum things. And, at this juncture, it might be appropriate to add that a fat man dancing the fox-trot is so forcibly reminding of a cow-trot that it is almost impossible to keep from chuckling.

"To do the fox-trot, if you don't already know, you execute a limited number of effeminate one-steps, then leap up and down in a dance, fox-trot that is even more effeminate. In its entirety, the dance suggests the picture of a curly-haired "pretty boy" approaching a field of daisies thusly:

ness man, who is a pillar in his church and a staunch supporter of most anything else he puts his hand to, will try to outdo Clarence in something you'll have to figure out yourself.

ALL OF THEM DANCING THEMSELVES YOUNG.
But this same ordinarily rational business man was there in large numbers. I noticed a lawyer who knew enough about the courage he had acquired by strenuous battles in the courtroom to ever venture upon the dance floor, yet his bland smile beamed about his face as he was showing the time of his life, but was showing the other dancers a thing or two.

Lawyers, doctors, judges, financiers, retired and otherwise, business men of every possible type—men who lo! in wealth and position and in the front rank—some with profusely gray hair and others who would have been gray had there been any hair to turn color. They had come here to seek the elixir of youth.

They were dancing. And they danced better than most of the young men; a fact which the young men must have known, for I observed a marked preference on the part of the younger female contingent for the older male contingent. Boys, we had better speed up. Our papas are throwing dust in our eyes.

Tempus certainly does fugit. It used to be that the father sat up and waited for son to leave the bright lights and come home. Now the son, tired of sitting up and waiting, must go and drag father home.

Father and grandfather tread the light fantastic with the season's debutante. Son must stay home and content himself with the victrola. Times are changing. Youth no longer has the right to have its fling. It must give way to age that grandfather can sow his wild oats.

It is wrong for a youth to overfeed himself two hours before midnight, dance until 3 a. m., then follow the ancient habit of his grandfather who long ago discarded this crutch for a dance program, can get away with it in grand style! Age must have its fling!

It was getting long after midnight. Morning was in the air. But dancing never lagged. The hum of voices was as spirited, the encores for additional music as frequent. Grandfather's fling was truly a fling in every sense of the word. Grandfather didn't seem to know when to quit flinging.

The orchestra was becoming listless and sleepy. It needed intermittent injection of highballs and sharp rebukes from the floor manager to stir it into activity. Along about 2 o'clock it grew indifferent. The musicians would play a rousing strain and, when finished, the dance-mad guests would clamor for more.

MUSIC NOW JUST ONE-STEP OF NOISE.
They weren't exacting, either, in their choice for music. Just anything sufficed so it had a syncopated meter to it. By this late and faded hour dancing was just a matter of making a social ingredient of the fountain of youth could emit anything and still impart a required spirit of youth—yea, it had become juvenile.

As I said, the musical ingredient, by now, didn't mean music as much as it did noise adapted to one-step-time. The drummer proved it. He played a solo on the cowbells and had the flinging room dancing the t-t-t-t. The orchestra implicitly combined Tipperary with the Star Spangled Banner, Yankee Doodle and Die Wacht am Rhine, and still the dance went madly on.

The violinist nodded and his bow scoured blue notes in profusion; the cornetist hoisted his scale, and the clarinet player gave up in disgust. The pianist, propped his right elbow upon the music rack and languidly struck notes with his left hand only when the time beats required.

But none of it kept grandfather from having his fling down there beneath the bright lights and in the whirlpool of midnight gaiety. Why should he worry of home and the morrow? His wayward son had got home long ago and would be there to let him in! And to-morrow is another day, while tonight is a night of nights!

Remember, grandfather only discovered the fountain of youth a short time ago! It was not until then that he got wise to the fact that he had another fling coming.

Ponce de Leon searched for it and gave up in despair. Grandfather can now reach it in fifteen minutes from home by his limousine or by trolley. It is truly the fountain of youth, for frivolity is the essence of youth.

May it ever bubble as effervescently as a bubble that bursts at a moment. I left it bubbling at 2 a. m. I had to get some sleep. I'm not an old man!

More.

GRANDMA NEVER LET HER HAIR GET GRAY
Kept Her Locks, Youthful, Dark, Glossy and Thick With Common Garden Sage and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Youth's Hair Dressing." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has become thicker.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire to be young, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger.

TU-BO-LAX
CORRECTS CONSTIPATION
Corrects CONSTIPATION
in 2 MINUTES

Adrienne, the Editor of "Health & Beauty" page in The Philadelphia Inquirer, gives Mothers this very sensible advice:

"Try to do without drugs. I say this, not from any dislike to the use of medicines in treating children, but because we are here dealing with a function that persists through out life. If we control that function by drugs we injure the intestines in their action, so that larger and larger doses must be taken, and in the course of time nothing short of drastic purgatives will effect the result desired and as such drugs when habitually used injure the system—the condition of the sufferer is pitiable."

Had she written a whole volume she could not have said more. Only she might have added—that where children should—by all means, be treated with TU-BO-LAX. This laxative ointment, which is inserted in the rectum, brings immediate relief without disturbing the stomach, intestines or any part of the body, and soon habituates the lower bowel to act regularly without assistance. Treating Constipation through the mouth in any shape will soon be tabooed by the Medical Profession. We want everybody to realize the fact that the lower bowel is nothing more or less than a sewer pipe, and when it becomes clogged or fails to evacuate the refuse matter it upsets digestion, creating dyspepsia, nervousness, liver ailments, sick headache and general debility.

If you are constipated—try TU-BO-LAX, and in 2 MINUTES you will be grateful for this advice. You will have no more use for Cathartics. TU-BO-LAX is as pleasant as easily used as taking a swallow of water. It gives you one cornucopia of relief and the most perfect purgative effect without the result of a half dozen times, just when it is most inconvenient.

For sale at Jacobs' Pharmacia and all first-class druggists, or upon receipt of 25c we will mail you a package. Large size contains five times the amount of the 25c tube.

The plan evolved by The Atlanta Constitution whereby you can take one of these wonderful trips as outlined is as simple in understanding as it is easy of execution. Although The Constitution has a large circulation, there are some who at present are not subscribers. They want the Daily and Sunday Constitution, but have put off ordering from day to day. The Constitution desires your assistance in locating and placing these people on its subscription list, and for this favor you are to be liberally rewarded.

Points will be given on each new subscription payment to The Atlanta Constitution according to the schedule given above and after you have obtained the required number of points a wonderful trip to the greatest of all expositions will be yours.

You may nominate yourself or a friend as a candidate for one of these trips. The names of all candidates nominated will be published in The Daily Constitution from time to time, giving their respective standing.

Each candidate on nomination will be credited with 100 points free, and will be provided with an authorized Constitution receipt book. These receipt books may be had by applying to the Circulation Department of The Constitution. Each candidate obtaining one of these free tours may take the trip to San Francisco any time during 1915 he or she may desire. The exposition opens on February 20, and closes December 4, 1915.

Special arrangements have been made with the McFarland Tourist Agency to furnish the various trips we are offering and the starting point of all of the successful candidates will be Atlanta. U. C. T. CHARITY BALL POSTPONED SHORT TIME

Will Be Held Some Time in April - Committees All Held Intact Till Then.

U. C. T. council, 13, has decided to postpone its big charity ball until some time in April. Chairman H. D. Shackelford explains the reason in the following interview.

"Owing to the fact that the majority of our general committee on arrangements for the charity ball were not familiar with the customs observed by the different denominations," said Mr. Shackelford, "we had decided to have the ball on the first of February 17. We find that this is a day observed by a great many people, and as we do not want to conflict with other organizations we have decided to postpone this ball until some time in April."

"The committees have not been dismissed, but have been advised to hold themselves in readiness to meet and to roll call some time during the month of March, at which time we will decide definitely just when this ball will be given."

"We wish to thank all of those who have been so kind as to make arrangements thus far and trust that we will be able to count on these same people when we again undertake this entertainment."

The meeting Monday night will be held at the Chamber of Commerce building, and the two committees from the jobbers and the retailers will map out an interesting program, which will be a change from the other night's meeting, and will arrange all other details for the meeting on the last Thursday evening in February.

Past Counsellors' Night

Editor Firing Line: It has been suggested that Fulton council have, on Saturday night, February 20, what is to be known as Past Counsellors' night or meeting, at which each office will be filled by past counsellors of the order.

It is the custom with some councils to have such meetings once each year. They always excite much interest and enthusiasm and, no doubt, Fulton will, on Saturday night, February 20, have such a meeting and have some of the 18 past counsellors to fill many of the offices. This will be quite an interesting innovation for the U. C. T. boys of Atlanta, and, too, it will give them something out of the ordinary to look forward to, and by that time all of us will become active in the promotion of the great ball to be given in April at the Auditorium under the auspices of U. C. T. council, No. 13.

Brothers J. L. Moore, W. H. Arnold, E. L. Wallace, W. G. Moore and E. Baber were the representatives of Fulton to visit council No. 13 last Saturday night. All had a good time. Sincerely yours, W. G. MOORE, Chairman Press Committee, U. C. T. Council, No. 505, January 30, 1915.

CITY SALESMEN OPPOSE NEW FRUIT ORDINANCE

The following communication explains itself: Editor Firing Line: The city salesmen of Atlanta, having their attention called to a resolution that will come before the council, introduced by Councilman Dallas, of the seventh ward, to allow fruits to be sold on Sundays in Atlanta, went on record by motion unanimously opposing said Dallas resolution.

They also feel that if this resolution is passed by council it would be a great step backward for Atlanta, and we protest with all of the determination possible against such a step. We do not wish our Sundays to be despoiled by any open stores in this city, and we make an appeal to council and to the public in general to come to our aid and back us in killing said Dallas resolution.

Respectfully, CITY SALESMEN'S ASSOCIATION, E. H. D. Shackelford, Press Committee.

She and Mr. Felton in their marriage illustrated the old-time romance of "sweethearts from childhood." They first met as children at Warm Springs, Va., where the Felton and Duncan families of Macon have gone each year, meeting as regularly as the Gibson family. The wedding was planned for the early summer, to be an all fresco affair of great beauty, but illness in the groom's family changed the original plan, and the marriage took place several weeks ago in Baltimore. It was a beautiful ceremonial with breakfast following, and attended only by the

* In the Social Whirl *

By Isma Dooly

With society this week there has been an intermingling of thoughtful entertainment, for many of the same people who attended the tea-dances and evening dancing classes attended the three lectures delivered by Dr. William Norman Guthrie under the auspices of the Drama League and are studying their French that they may the better follow M. Eugene Broussier when he lectures here in early February. Many Atlanta women are anticipating the interpretative lectures on the grand operas to be presented here, these lectures to begin Thursday morning at 11 o'clock at the Atlanta Woman's club, Miss Nana Tucker to give the first lecture. The Sunday Night club at the Georgian Terrace will begin later a series of similar lectures.

The Atlanta Woman's club will also present this week an exhibition of American handicrafts in the clubrooms, the day to be announced later.

While these two movements cover departments coming under the head of the cultural head of club work, another movement along more commercial, but nevertheless practical and patriotic, lines is the crusade the club women will inaugurate to get Atlanta women to purchase their opera trousseaus in Atlanta, patronizing Atlanta shops and dressmakers.

"In that way, we can co-operate with our merchants in their efforts to retain their employees instead of reducing the force, and our dressmakers in retaining their help," explained Mrs. J. P. McGovern, president of the club. Each year the department store and commercial people put up much of the guarantee for grand opera, making it possible for us to enjoy the great musical treat. It is inconsistent of women who are the largest buyers, not only of clothes, but of household purchasing, not to see to it that they do their part by trading with the home markets by buying their gowns, wraps and millinery at home.

The Home Market.
The fact that the home market does provide the very same opportunity now that the metropolitan market does has been proven by displays made here by firms from outside of the city. For instance, it has been reported to me by a club member that at one of these exhibits made here by an outside agency, three gowns of different fashion were made from one material; to be accurate, a striped chiffon in black and white. The same material could have been purchased at any of these dressing establishments and in every store. The style of the gown was one that could have been produced by any modiste who had the gown described to her, whether she had seen it or not.

"The truth is," continued Mrs. McGovern, "our modistes and buyers here buy directly from foreign markets. Many of them send their own purchasers. This year especially, because of the war, our country has had the same chance. The fashion books, plates and model gowns are accessible to everybody, and now is the time for every one of us to show our real patriotism in this direction. We must not forget that the first woman to initiate the idea of patronizing domestic wares was the president of our own Georgia Federation, Mrs. Z. T. Fitzpatrick, her message on the subject going forth August 21 and followed by a series of movements looking to the patronage of 'home industry'."

Mrs. McGovern stated that at the meeting of the Atlanta Woman's club one week from tomorrow formal plans will be announced for carrying on the patronage of Atlanta shops, especially for the purchase of opera trousseaux. Commenting on the fact that the Atlanta Woman's club had as an organization gone on the guarantee fund of grand opera, Mrs. McGovern said: "It is unusual that the club takes so large an amount from the treasury for other than educational purposes, but who could be more distinctly educational than grand opera?"

WOMEN GUARANTORS.

The response of many prominent Atlanta women to the guarantee fund of grand opera illustrates their unselfish interest and co-operation in public movements. A list of the women guarantors will disclose the fact that their names do not appear not only as patrons of art, but patrons of the city's practical and public movements. For example Mrs. T. S. Lewis, who subscribed yesterday to the opera guarantee fund, sending her word of approval of women becoming guarantors, is a member of the Atlanta Woman's club, of the Free Kindergarten association, of the Home for the Friendless, the Home for Incarcerated and Georgia branch of the woman's department of the National Civic Federation, and these are all organizations to which dues have to be paid.

Mrs. Kelly Evans, who started the woman's guarantor list, is the largest giver among Atlanta women to the Associated Charities this year, while the names on the list of women repeat the names of honored citizens who have for years contributed to Atlanta's upbuilding in many ways.

CHARMING VISITORS.

Among the feted visitors in the city this week was Mrs. Henry Bispham, of Paris, who spent the early part of the week with her relatives, Colonel and Mrs. Lowry. Two dinners were given her by the Lowrys, Mrs. Bates Block entertained in her honor at tea, and on Wednesday Mrs. John D. Little invited to meet her at luncheon Mrs. Lowry, Mrs. Peel, Mrs. Richard Orme Campbell, Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, Mrs. William D. Grant, Mrs. Victor Smith, Mrs. Samuel Wayman, Mrs. John S. Cohen, Mrs. J. K. Orr.

Since Thursday Mrs. Bispham has Drama League to Hear Brieux Play.

Next Tuesday's reading at the Drama League will be a preparation for the coming of Eugene Brieux, when "The Three Daughters of Monsieur Dupont" will be read by Mrs. Eugene Luncford. Mrs. Luncford is a delightful reader, trained at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York, and her reading of this play, which has already been heard at the Drama League Study class, is a wonderful and delicate interpretation of one of Brieux's masterpieces.

In "The Three Daughters of Monsieur Dupont" Brieux assails the conditions that surround French marriage—conditions which many of them are paralleled in America. His reading will be of the highest interest, as Brieux himself is to be in the city from Thursday to Sunday as the guest of the French Alliance. On Saturday the members of the league will meet him at a reception at the home of Governor and Mrs. Slaton.

In that play, which has been compared both in France and in England but uplifted by all of the clergy, doctors and professors. Brieux's exposure of ignorance as one of the social evils. The first talk was made by Christine Hjort on "Influence of Seniors in the Rural Schools."... The juniors and seniors were the classes allowed to attend the mission-ary conference at the Methodist church, finding the sessions both interesting and helpful... He made a wonderfully good impression on all who heard him... A veritable musical feast was the reward of those who attended the Lyceum on Saturday evening of last week, when the Schubert quintet gave a recital in the auditorium... The idea of giving a brief explanation of the number before playing, which Director Lampert did, was a happy one, and not only enabled those who knew little about music to enjoy it the more, but also made those who were familiar with it more deeply appreciative... From the first, the large audience was almost breathless with attention, and the last number was encored as heartily as the first... Needless to say the Schubert quintet will be asked to return.

COMPLETION of the Nemo Self-Reducing IDEA. FOR seventeen years past, millions of women have owed their health, vigor and symmetry largely to Nemo Self-Reducing Corsets. A strong statement; but true, BECAUSE— The Nemo Self-Reducing Corset introduced a new IDEA that was practical. It met a crying demand never before satisfied. It provides complete hygienic support for the abdomen and the delicate organs contained therein. It reshapes and reduces surplus flesh. It actually decreases both the size and the weight of over-full figures. The standardized Self-Reducing Corset, with exterior reducing straps, is made in a variety of models, most popular of which are Nos. 322, 324 and 326, with the elastic Nemo Lasticurve-Back. Made of stout material, well boned, and strong enough to control all heavy figures, these models are giving—and will give—complete corset-satisfaction to more than a million women. Our new "Invisible" Self-Reducing Corset marks the COMPLETION of the Self-Reducing IDEA. It is a concession to women who want to enjoy all the hygienic features for which the Nemo is world-famous, but object to outside straps. The "Invisible" straps are concealed by the corset-skirt, but give the same complete support as the exterior straps. GREATEST $3.00 CORSETS EVER MADE. No. 322—Medium bust, long skirt $3.00; No. 324—Medium bust, longer skirt $3.00; No. 326—Higher bust, medium skirt $3.00; No. 341—Eor Short Full Figure $3.00; No. 342—For Taller Full Figure $3.00. THE FINISHING TOUCH

E.B.H.

THREE girdled with black velvet is the evening frock of gold satin, illustrated on the left; though waistless in itself it has the appearance of being quite long-waisted. Delicately tinted tulle is tied around the arms in gay butterfly bows and folds of it fill in above the bodice in front. The skirt is scalloped and bound with a narrow fold of the material. A lovely big rose in deep orange satin at the girdle exactly matches the beaded tassel that tips the end of the sash.

The back view of this gown is shown on the seated figure.

THE blue brocade of the sleeveless gown, illustrated on the middle figure, hangs in graceful folds from a moyen age corsage of plain blue silk, fastened over the shoulders with ropes of crystal beads. The full skirt so short in front that the ankles are plainly visible, nevertheless in back is accompanied with a long, square train.

THE DIVORCE OF JOSEPHINE IN THE PATH OF NAPOLEON

100 Years After His Downfall

A Journey of 20,000 Miles

By JAMES MORGAN

Before proceeding with the life of Napoleon, and taking up the birth of the king of Rome, Mr. Morgan here turns back a page and recites the pathetic story of Josephine, her sublime fortitude when she realized that divorce was inevitable, and the part she took in nominating her successor in wedlock—Marie Louise—the story of whose wedding to Napoleon was related in last Sunday's installment.

With the divorce of Josephine the tragedy of Napoleon's career very perceptibly deepens and his feet are seen to be forever planted in the downward path.

Mr. Morgan's story today is of Josephine as wife and empress of the long and painful divorce campaign that preceded her dethronement, of the emperor's final resolve taken in the very palace of Marie Louise, of the pathetic dignity with which Josephine bade farewell to her greatness and still more pathetic loyalty with which she forwarded Napoleon's plan to marry the Austrian archduchess.

THE DIVORCE

While Napoleon dwelt in the palace of the fugitive Archduchess Marie Louise of Austria at Schonbrunn, in 1809, as he occupied the room of the future king of Rome, he formed the long-deferred resolution to divorce Josephine, and, marrying a daughter of one of the ancient dynasties, provide an heir to his empire.

As the victor of Wagram, in the pride of success and the responsibility of power, tread the palace halls of the Hapsburgs, his determination ripened that the inheritor of his glory and his conquests, should be at once a child of his own potent blood and the son of a race of kings. He saw no other way to lift the imperial succession above the ugly jealousies and conspiracies that had already divided the Bonapartes and to give to the empire the more ambitious marshals who stood ready to fight for the crown among themselves.

Like his only companions in fame, he was childless, but he would not, like Alexander, bequeath his kingdom to the strongest or, like Caesar, adopt a nephew. True, he had looked with favor on the first-born of his brother, but the child of his brother died in 1807, the emperor did not transfer his favor to the second son, nor yet to the third, who was born the next year, although the emperor had long been destined, as Napoleon III, to be the only successor his throne ever was to have.

THE DIVORCE CAMPAIGN.

For two years the emperor had wrestled with the man, the monarch with the husband, ambition with affection, the head with the heart. Nor was Josephine blind to that situation, but she, which had so long agitated her husband's breast. She dreaded to have him pass for a moment beyond her spell, and she was begging him in her letters, throughout his absence on the Prussian and Polish campaigns, to let her share his hardships in the camp and in the field.

While the anxious wife waited for the return of her friends, she continually read and consulted the cards to learn from their mystic faces whether the hoped-for summons was on the way. She impatiently tore open one of his letters to read "I laughed at your saying that you had married to be with your husband. I thought, in my ignorance, that the wife was made for the husband, the husband for his country, his fame and his glory. Again I received his letter, and I read: 'I am told you are always crying. Fie! How ugly that is! An empress ought to be courageous.'"

All the while the same superserviceable faction, ever at his side, had paved the way for him to the life consulate, and then to the throne, was eagerly plotting, in season and out, to have him marry again and obtain an heir to that throne by which his name lived. Always ready to do the dirty work, Pouché had gone to the empress, either with or without the emperor's sanction, and urged her to make a voluntary sacrifice of herself for the sake of the empire. But when she asked Napoleon to do the deed, he denounced the meddling of the minister of police and, folding her in his embrace and weeping over her, he reassured her of his love.

JOSEPHINE'S SPELL.

A year afterward, while Talleyrand, Pouché and other agitators of the question were again stirring their counsels upon him, and even stirring up a public agitation for the divorce, he, the emperor, the sight of her one evening dressed for a levee, with a tender melancholy in her eyes, reopened the floodgates of the emperor's memory and emotions. Catching her in his arms and crushing her beautiful gown, he cried like a child while he protested: "No! I cannot leave you!" He was so overwrought, as he sobbingly complained of the people who were tormenting him, that the empress induced him to lie down and let her hold the reception without him, after which she returned and stared with him through a troubled night, when, we are told, he literally walked his pillow with tears.

As the agitators saw the emperor passing again under the spell of his wife's charm and recoiling from the step toward which they were pushing him, Talleyrand expressed their impatience and disgust: "What a devil of a man! How he yields to his impulses! Why can he not come to a decision and stop making us the puppets of his moods?"

The interruption of the campaign for a new marriage was prolonged by the empress' journey to Bayonne, where, with her perfect tact, she greatly aided the emperor in his rough task of taking the crown of Spain away from the Spanish royal family who were gathered there. She showed herself as superior in manner as she showed herself superior to power to those princes, born in the purple and together they overwhelmed the Bourbons. Never had Napoleon so much enjoyed his trip, when they ran races on the beach and he threw her into the waves with her clothes on.

A BATTLE WON AND LOST.

But Wagram seems to have decided the issue, when it confirmed once his title to the vastest and richest estate in the world. The empress did not miss the calamitous significance of that battle to her, nor fail to understand that in her husband's victory she had lost her rights. To be sure, his emotions were still on her side, and even vitally struggled against the inevitable. Nearly three months after Wagram, and at the end of September, she wrote him, in a letter, in the old spirit of playful fondness: "I warn you to look after yourself well at nights. For one night very soon you will wear a great noise!"

It was perhaps fortunate for them both that Josephine had not yet reached Fontainebleau when the "great noise" burst upon that palace on a late October morning in 1809. The emperor had traveled from Vienna faster than the news of his coming, and the empress did not arrive from St. Cloud until the evening. Her absence dashed his spirits, and, when at last they met, it was under the influence of a mutual constraint which steeled them both for the inevitable trial that awaited them.

Already Pouché had seen the emperor and bluntly warned him: "There is not a moment to be lost. You must decide to dispose of your estate if we have the misfortune to lose you. It is an instance of Alexander's lieutenants eager for his kingdoms." All the imperial Bonapartes had been for the divorce from the beginning, and now even Napoleon's mother was saying: "I hope the emperor will have the courage this time to take the step which not only France but Europe awaits with anxiety. His divorce is an act of necessity."

JOSEPHINE'S EXTRAVAGANCE.

Extravagance appears to have been Josephine's one fault under the empress. It is doubtful if she had given the emperor any other grievance since she took her place beside him on the throne. Once he cast her milliner in prison for several hours to frighten her out of her habit of extortion. But life imprisonment would not have corrected the reckless expenditures of the empress, with her 500 chemises, her new pair of stockings for each dressing, her 300 or 400 cashmere shawls, some costing nearly $2,000, and her robes of lace for which she paid as high as $20,000 each. Mme. de Renusset never entered a dressmaker's or a milliner's, so when she would, that she did not and something in the making for an empress. Her annual allowance for dress rose as high as $90,000, but her credit being good, she spent as much as $250,000 in a year. Out of her yearly expenditures, however, she accumulated most of her jewelry, which represented at the time of the divorce an investment of nearly $1,000,000.

Whenever creditors pressed and the inevitable time of reckoning came, the empress cried and the emperor raged, but not at her so much as at the tradesmen. Although he arbitrarily cut down their bills 30, 40 and 50 per cent, they were well enough satisfied with the profit still remaining to start at once a new campaign of temptation and a new account with the empress.

The emperor's practiced eye came to know the signals of her financial distress, but he never could induce her to confess at once the full amount of her debts. "No! No!" she protested to her confidants, when they advised her to seek relief in telling him the whole truth. "The world will kill me," and she always tried to spare herself by keeping back half the truth. "I will pay the balance out of my savings," the childlike spendthrift would promise herself, she whose fair fingers were formed only to be it slave for gold.

One day when her red eyes were flying the unmistakable signal, the emperor said to Duroc, as he pointed to the empress and her lady of honor: "Those women have been crying. I am sure they had the 'detached' husband, what is the matter." Josephine at once sobbingly confessed to the grand marshal of the palace that she owed $80,000.

"Ah," exclaimed the wheedling Duroc, "the emperor thought it was $160,000!"

"Not No!" Josephine protested; "but since I must tell you all, I swear it is only $120,000!"

The crafty mediator next feelingly portrayed to the emperor the despair of the empress. "She is conscious of her fault," then, he detested the husband said. "So much the better. She must owe an enormous amount, possibly $200,000."

"But, sire," Duroc pleaded, "it is only $120,000!"

"Only $120,000!" the emperor exclaimed, concealing his surprise and relief. "You talk as if that were nothing. Then he went to the report, the sugar of the matter, and he finished by coaxing her from her tears with the comforting assurance, "Come, come, my little Josephine; don't cry. The debts will be paid."

JOSEPHINE'S COURT.

Even in her weakness, however, there is to be found the source of Josephine's strength. Her creative force of beauty and luxury, costly as it was, had framed a fitting background for Napoleon's imperial pretensions and made his court the foremost in the world when he had been left to his own devices, it would have been nothing more than a military camp and the butt of scornful Europe.

With simple and genuine fondness for people, and with a native dignity free from the stiff hauteur, the levity artificiality of women bred in royal palaces, the supple little islander from the sugar isle of Martinique blended a motley array of ex-servants and their garter wives with the old nobility. Under her dainty touch the Tuilleries became the mold of form and the looking glass of fashion for all the ancient and frumpy courts of the continent. Even the English, although they blockaded Napoleon relentlessly, were eager enough to smuggle across the Channel iron, steel, hardware and Josephine's dressmakers. A revival of the British fad for the empire style, a century after the reign of the empress was at an end, provoked the indignation of Gilbert in the opera of "Patience."

Josephine, my destiny is stronger than my will. My dearest affections must yield.

itary campaigns. It was no less Josephine's duty to conduct her social campaigns, and a consoling world could find no fault in her strategy. It being his first care to awe the world, he attached high importance to the role he played upon her to play. As he sought to impress or irritate his peoples and his allies, he marched and counter-marched the empress and her train like grenadiers of the guard.

From Josephine's continual journey from palace to palace, from country to country in tortuous coaches over racking roads weary and stagger the understanding. Is she about to set out upon one of these imperial progresses? "She is a good natured, easy-going woman and must have her route along her way until his instructions were 21 large sheets of paper! Even though he might be fighting the Tartars in Poland, he unfailingly watched over her ceaseless activities. When 1,000 miles away from Paris, he wrote her: "You must not go to the small boxes at the small theaters"—where, of course, all the fun was—"It does not become your rank. You must only go to the four principal theaters"—enacting heavy tragedies prescribed by him—"and always to the principal box."

AN EMPEROR'S HELPMATE.

Josephine lived wholly for Napoleon and his interests. Having no great ambitions of her own, no desire for power or grandeur, she did not meddle in politics, but in the spirit of a grocer's or banker's wife, she made it her main purpose in life to please her husband, look after his home and promote his success by being agreeable to his associates. Eager she was to be the wife of an emperor, whose home was a palace, whose business associates were kings, princes and dukes, her duties were no lighter and no less difficult.

"How this wears me," she once exclaimed. "I have not a moment to myself. It would be better for me were I the wife of a laborer." Although diamonds crowns and gilded carriages cast their luster over the scene of her splendid drudgery, Josephine could not have tolled harder had she been a laborer's wife. For three hours each day she slaved over her morning toilet, and thrice daily she changed her linen throughout. A mob of servants and courtiers surrounded her morning, noon and night. She breakfasted, lunched and dined with them, and the repetition of some dreary function was scheduled for each waking hour. "Be gay! Be gay!" That was the imperial command always.

However borne down under the burden of a crown, however ill she might be, and she was not physically strong; however hard her head ached, never did Josephine on her unending round of petty tasks, disappoint the emperor above all men valued every tick of the clock, never had to complain that she kept him waiting a minute. And when he was worn out by the cares of the world, if her early indifference had not been a mistake, a wrong word or a lacking smile, there never was an indiscreet remark, an intrigue, an act of favoritism on her part to embarrass her husband for present. "FIGHTING FIFTEENTH," THE 15TH (KING'S HUSSARS) SAVING THE EMPEROR OF AUSTRIA, 1749 FROM THE SKETCH

HATS in a name?

"Forces not to be measured; life, death, divine courage, a rampant spirit of reckless abandon; these are in a name," comes the living, pulsating answer to this trite question—an answer which reverberates around the world to the accompaniment of cannon music from the plains of Flanders, where fighting British regiments are once more inscribing in blood on the scroll of fame their "nicknames" won on many a shell ploughed, shot down field.

Because of its simple eloquence the "Fighting Fifteenth" is one of the most striking of nicknames of British regiments now at the front. The name is an intense concentration of the regiment's history. It is fighting now; it has always fought when there was a cause, and it has never questioned the cause—that it was Britain's was enough.

This was the first regiment of light cavalry organized in the British army, and dates from 1759, when it was officially the Fifteenth Light Dragoons and popularly known as Elliot's Light Horse, from Colonel Elliot, whose defence of Gibraltar is one of the epics of history.

The Earl of Pembroke, Sir William Erskine and David Dundass were among the distinguished men who held commissions in the "Fighting Fifteenth" at the first. At Brusdorf, July 16, 1759, under Prince Ferdinand of Brunswick, the Fifteenth Hussars began to earn their nickname of the "Fighting Fifteenth."

The regiment performed notable achievements at Grochstein, and at Friedburg it made the first of a series of famous rescues when it saved Prince Ferdinand, who had been surrounded by the enemy's cavalry.

Later they were to rescue the Prince of Schwarzenburg. It was near Le Cateau and Landreches that a squadron of the "Fighting Fifteenth," under Captain Pocklington, advanced to support a reconnaissance made by the Prince of Schwarzenburg and a regiment of Chlaus.

The most famous exploit of the "Fighting Fifteenth" was the rescue of the Emperor of Austria at Villers-en-Couche in 1794. The regiment was then serving with the Austrians against the French revolutionary forces in Flanders, where some of the fiercest fighting is in progress to-day.

The "Black Watch" is another name famous throughout the United Kingdom and the colonies. The Forty-second Highlanders, the oldest Highland regiment, does not get this name from the performance of any particularly gallant action, but the name has come to stand for all that is glorious, dashing and courageous in battle. The "Black Watch" has an enviable reputation as a fighting regiment.

It was organized by combining several Highland companies raised in Scotland in 1725 to 1729, recruited first for the purpose of maintaining order in Edinburgh, and its members were for the most part from the clans of Campbell, Grant and Munro. These clansmen wore their own tartan, but when John, Earl of Crawford and Lindsay, welded them into one regiment, known as "The Highland Regiment," a new tartan was devised by abolishing the color from those worn by the men in the ranks. Crawford, being a lowlander, had no family tartan, and it was from their black garments that the regiment got the name of the "Black Watch."

The "Gunners" means to the Briton the Royal Regiment of Artillery, whose record is the record of British arms in every quarter of the world.

It was not cavalry alone which attained immortality at Balaklava. The Second battalion of the Ninety-third regiment of Foot was there, and against it the Russians hurled the flower of their cavalry, a body of men in gallantry and dash rivaled of the Light Brigade. In a "thin red line," only two men deep, the Ninety-third, with bayonets fixed, sprang to their feet and charged the Russian horse, not waiting for the enemy to reach them. It is hard to ride horses onto solid steel, and the Tsar's cavalry wavered, but only for a second. Urged by spur and voice, the horses plunged forward again.

There was a furious clashing of steel, plunging horses, stabbing, slashing and shooting men.

The thin red line swept onward, the wave of Russian cavalry rolled back.

That British regiment is still the Ninety-third Foot in the files of the War Office, but to Britons throughout the world it is simply the "Thin Red Line."

The Royal Welsh Fusiliers is a pretentious and elegant sounding name, but the men and officers of the regiment prefer the title which has been conferred upon them by admiring thousands, the "Nanny Goats." It was in 1683 at Ludlow that the "Nanny Goats" first became a regiment, being developed from thirteen companies of foot recruited three years earlier in the Welsh marshes by Henry, fourth Lord Herbert. Among the battles where the "Nanny Goats" earned distinction are the Boyne, Namur, Schellenberg, Blenheim, Ramillies, Wynendale, Oudenarde, Malplaquet, the siege of Lille, Douai, Dettingen, Minden, Fontenoy, Bunker Hill, Corunna, Gibraltar, Copenhagen, Martinique, Torres Vedras, Badajos, Salamanca, Burgos, Vittoria, San Sebastian, Alma, Inkerman and Sebastopol. It also served in Egypt, Spain, Nova Scotia, Hanover, the Indian Mutiny, Ashantee, Burma and South Africa.

Quite a warlike record for a "Nanny Goat," which name was given to the regiment because of its mascot. In the officers' mess on St. David's Day the goat, escorted by drum and fife, is marched round the table while each officer and guest who has not done so before must stand on his chair and eat a leek while a drummer beats a long roll behind him.

The "First Tangerines" are officially the Queen's Royal West Surrey regiment, but they won their nickname by their defence of Tangier in 1662, which fortress had become a British possession as part of the dowry of Catherine of Braganza.

The "Devil's Own" was a name given to the Couraught Rangers, or Eighty-eighth Foot, because of their notorious rascality. General Picton had described them as the greatest blackguards in the army, but after their terrific fighting at Fuentes d'Onoro he was obliged to admit they had redeemed their honor. At the taking of Badajos the "Devil's Own" rivaled their feats performed at Fuentes d'Onoro, and since then they have been continually bettering their reputation as fighters.

George II. was the last British monarch to appear on the field of battle actually under fire. At the Battle of Dettingen he witnessed the remarkable bravery and excellent work of the East Surrey regiment, then known as the Thirty-first Foot, originally a marine regiment. As the survivors went swinging past him in the midst of the battle he cried out:—

"Well done, Old Buffs!" mistaking them for the Third Buffs.

When his error was pointed out to the King he exclaimed, "Well done, Young Buffs, then." The name has stuck.

The "Carabiniers" were originally the Ninth Horse and the Queen Dowager's Cuiraassiers, so called in honor of Catherine of Braganza, whose master of horse was their first colonel. The regiment dates from 1685 and won its nickname at the Battle of the Boyne, where it fought in the cause of William III. so effectively that he termed it "Carabiniers" as a distinguishing compliment. The present official title of the regiment is Sixth Dragoon Guards.

At Albuera Colonel Inglis commended the Fifty-seventh Foot, who were defending an artillery battery. As the enemy pressed home their last charge Colonel Inglis shouted above the din of battle:—

"Die hard, my men; die hard."

That the Fifty-seventh Foot did die hard is attested by the bones of the enemy's dead. That was in 1811. Since then the "Die Hards" have been dying according to their reputation.

When General Monk marched to London in 1660 to insure a free Parliament and the restoration of the Stuarts he took with him from Coldstream, in Berwickshire, his own regiment of foot, who were known thereafter as Monk's Coldstreamers. There is an unauthenticated story that when the asserting force met Charles II. at Blackheath this regiment kept the still loyal troops from mutiny, and the King, on learning whence they had come, dubbed them "My Coldstream Guards." To this day they are known as the Coldstream Guards.

There are several traditions concerning the origin of the name "Scots Greys." The most generally accepted one is as follows:—When the Royal North British Dragoons, as the regiment was styled up to the time of the Crimean War, landed in the Low Countries in 1742 the Stadtholder noticed that the men were without mounts. He immediately ordered his own guard to turn over their gray horses to the Scottish corps.

SYNOPSIS—Door opens upon strange things. How many locked doors are there in this world? How many people are there trying to find "The Master Key"? Thomas Gallon found out. He thought of two things his daughter Ruth, and gold for her. Gallon died because his partner Wilkerson, whom he thought he had killed in the desert, came back and demanded a share of his find. Wilkerson is working gold for the sake of a woman. John Dorr, the mining engineer in whose charge Ruth was left, is also fighting to find the secret which Thomas Gallon apparently took with him to his grave.

When the train pulled into Los Angeles the next morning John Dorr's party got off and John left Ruth with Tom Kane while he went to engage an automobile to take them to Beverly Hills, a suburb recommended by Everett as quiet and restorative for shattered nerves. As they stood there Wilkerson, Mrs. Darnell and Estelle also got off the train, still disguised, and were hurrying away when Wilkerson observed Ruth and called Jean's attention to her. For an instant she was nonplused. Then she said in a low tone, "So much the better. We can keep an eye out on them."
"I must find out where they are going to," Wilkerson returned. "I don't like the looks of it."
He soon came back with word that they had ordered the car to take them to Beverly Hills. Jean stood in deep thought a moment and then said decisively, "We have plenty to do. We know where they will be and Estelle can keep us informed. The place for us to go is to a quiet, comfortable hotel. I refuse to live in dog holes any longer."

After some inquiry Wilkerson found the address of a hotel that seemed to answer their requirements and they were soon on their way. In a taxi. Within an hour the deft Estelle had installed herself and her mistress in a comfortable suite. Wilkerson took a room near by. They both were soon their real selves and sat down to a hearty breakfast in Mrs. Darnell's room. This ended, Jean took out the papers and spent an hour going over them carefully. Wilkerson smoked nervously, but did not interrupt her. When she laid the documents down he saw a queer glimmer in her tawny eyes.
"So it has come to the old game, eh?" she said in a low voice. "I thought you had had enough of that."
"Enough of what?" he demanded quickly.
She smiled maliciously. She formed the word slowly and precisely:
"Forgery."

His dark face grew pallid and his eyes flashed ominously. "I did it for you that time—and no thanks! But this is all right. Those deeds are genuine."
"Certainly," she said mockingly.
"Well, what's the matter, then?"
"They merely assure the property to Thomas Gallon and his heirs and assigns."
"Of course not!" he muttered.
"And when you found Tom Gallon at last and had him ready to do anything you wanted just as the price of your silence, I suppose it didn't occur to you to have him deed over the Master Key mine to you, did it?"
"He wouldn't have done it!" he burst out furiously. "He shot me once. He would have shot me again to save the mine for the girl."
"Then what good are these papers?"
Gradually he perceived the drift of her speech. He looked at her for a moment dumbly, as if for instruction. But she was ruthless. He must propose the crime himself. She handed him the papers.
"I'll have to go out and buy some blank deeds," he said laboriously. "I may have to look up some other points too, about these papers."

Ruth makes a new acquaintance. Life at Beverly Hills was a welcome change to Ruth after the strenuous days that had passed since she left the Master Key mine. The very day that she arrived she insisted on walking out with John Dorr and Tom Kane, who were careful not to refer to subjects that might disturb her returning peace of mind.
There were not many at the hotel and the most prominent figure among the guests was a tall, carefully dressed Englishman, so typically the tourist that the old cook insisted on identifying him on the register.
"I ain't seen many of the new kinds of people," he explained. "I've been out in the mine so many years that the styles in real gents has kind of escaped me. I admire to know just what kind of birds I'm roosting with."
"Who is he?" laughed Ruth, as they gazed out at the rising hills.
"He's marked down as Sir Donald Faversham and he's from the British isles," Tom Kane rejoined. "He is here for his health, they say. I suppose that's why he has to wear them white ankle warmers on his legs."
"Those are called spats, Tom," said John, smiling. "That eyeglass is a monocle."
"Does he see through it?" inquired Kane, with apparent anxiety. "I reckoned he was near-sighted, for I spoke to him a while ago and he didn't even see me."

Oddly enough Ruth blushed at this. Sir Donald had seen her, and she had been made aware of it instantly.
John Dorr saw the blush and interpreted it rightly. He, too, had observed the Englishman's sudden interest in the lovely girl. For the first time he felt a sharp twinge of jealousy.
Therein he did not count upon the other man's resourcefulness. Sir Donald was a man of the world and well accustomed to mingling with all kinds of people. He was also a careful observer and the very next morning when Ruth and John came out from the hotel ready for a stroll Faversham lay in wait for them.
How it happened only Sir Donald could have told, but within three minutes he was exchanging remarks about the scenery with them all.
The acquaintance thus made was destined to have a great bearing on the lives of both Ruth and John.

The next morning John and Tom met Ruth walking with Sir Donald about the hotel grounds and the young man could not help showing in both voice and manner that he was little pleased that Ruth should have so suddenly taken up with a stranger.

That afternoon George Everett turned up and was warmly greeted.
"I don't know that I have anything new and startling to tell you," Everett told Ruth, in answer to her question. "I know a dozen places where I can raise the money to finance your mine, but we must have the deeds, papers and surveys first. And they're gone, I understand."
"Yes," Dorr replied bitterly, "I suppose Wilkerson has them. I ought to have been on his trail long ago."

Everett glanced at Ruth and saw the discouragement on her face. He went quickly on, "However, I've made temporary arrangements which will relieve you of all trouble for the present, Miss Gallon. I'll talk over the business details with John and Tom Kane."
She brightened and laid one hand affectionately on John's arm. "I knew everything would come out all right when John took hold," she said softly.

For the Women's Sake.
For two days Harry Wilkerson worked steadily and secretly in his room. Occasionally a signal at the door would tell him that Jean was outside and he would carefully open to her and together they would contemplate his handiwork. At last it was done.

"I See a Way to Make You Owner of the Master Key."

"No one can ever prove that Old Tom Gallon didn't draw that deed himself," Wilkerson said triumphantly. "And it makes me the owner of the Master Key mine, Jean! and once in charge I'll make us both worth millions! Then—"
She shrank back at the flame in his gaze upon her.
"Now what are you going to do?" she demanded, attempting to bring the conversation back into business channels.
He bit his nails savagely. "Drake is out all right," he told her. "You see, Kane didn't turn up to prosecute the case and they turned him loose. What do you say to my wiring him to go and take charge of the mine while we decide just what to do? He can see what's going on and warn us."
"Dorr and the rest are still at Beverly Hills?" she inquired.
"Sure!" he said scornfully. "They're tying up with some blooded Britisher they think has money. They figure on getting him to finance them, I reckon. And I happen to know that Sir Donald couldn't happen to anybody. We needn't worry about Dorr."
Mrs. Darnell remained in thoughtful silence awhile and then agreed to the suggestion. Wilkerson immediately wrote the message:
"Charles Drake, San Francisco, Cal.:"
"Go to Silent valley at once and take charge of Master Key mine until you hear further from me. Am wiring Tubbs, engineer, to this effect."

"HARRY WILKERSON"
When he had sent this and a message to Tubbs he resumed his gloating contemplation of his forged deeds. He did not see the look of burning scorn on Jean's face as she left the room.
"Why must I always have to use fools?" she murmured bitterly. "A lovely pair—Wilkerson and Drake!"
Trouble Brewing.
Drake did not hesitate when he received Wilkerson's telegram. San Francisco, he felt, was no place for him. He was known to the police and it had been intimated that his actions were being watched. So he took the next train for Silent valley and on arrival there procured a rig and drove to the mine.
On his arrival he was dismayed to see that no work was being done. The machinery was idle and the miners were loafing about the streets or gathered in little, sullen groups. They eyed him curiously, but when he asked for Tubbs they made no comment nor asked any questions.
Following their directions he soon found himself on the porch of what had been John Dorr's house. He knocked and there was shuffling of heavy boots, then the door opened and an unshaven, bloated-faced man asked him grumpy what he wanted.
Drake produced Wilkerson's wire and instantly the engineer showed relief.
"Come in! Come in!" he said. "Come in and have a drink!"
The interior of the cabin showed that Bill Tubbs had apparently been merely camping out in his new quarters without regard to the decencies. But Drake was not squeamish after his long trip and shared a drink with his host. A few words served to put the situation before him.
"There ain't no money to pay the men, the store's closed, the cook shanty ain't running, Wilkerson is away, Dorr hasn't turned up with the money he promised."

Two miners entered and Tubbs introduced them to Drake.
"This is the new boss, boys," he said.
"Who sent you here?" was the first question asked.
"Wilkerson," responded Drake.
"Humph!"
"I'm just here to take charge temporarily," Drake went on hastily, not liking the ugly tone of the man's voice.
The other man took this information, and after digesting it, said, "Going to start up and pay wages?"
"I'm not acquainted with the situation yet," was the evasive reply. "I'll go over things with Mr. Tubbs tonight and then in the morning I'll see what is to be done."
"The first thing is to give us money and food," was the curt answer. The men stamped out, leaving Drake to look at Tubbs in some dismay.
The next morning did not bring cheer. Drake's head ached from the fumes of Bill Tubbs' whisky and the chill of the mountain air was not dissipated by a cold breakfast. And before the sun had risen enough, as he had come into the camp a dozen miners had recognized him and scowled. He had felt their hatred and it fed the man's sinister passion to do harm, and to hurt, to destroy. Now he faced Drake and Tubbs arrogantly.

"It won't be long till these chaps find out who's boss," he said. With a significant look at Drake he pulled out the forged deeds and handed them to Tubbs.
"Those mean that I'm legally the owner of the Master Key mine," he announced.
The engineer peered at them dully. He haltingly mumbled over some of the legal phrases, grinned slowly and passed the papers back.
"I guess that'll fix 'em!" he said huskily.
"I guess it will," was the rejoinder.
Tubbs seemed thoughtful, glancing out of the window now and again. Drake voiced his feeling.
"The sooner you let the miners know and get things settled, the better."
Wilkerson licked his dry lips. The battle was on. He broke the silence by saying gruffly: "Call 'em up here, Bill!"
When the men were gathered before him Wilkerson stepped forward and commenced to speak. He could not break their sullen silence, and after a few words of generalities he mustered his courage and shouted, "I am owner of this mine! I have the deeds right here!"

The effect of this was far other than he had expected. Not a murmur came from the still, motionless throng. It was as if they had not heard him. In a lower tone he repeated it, "I am the owner of the Master Key mine and all that goes with it."
There is a quality in the silence of the crowd of earnest men that is more questioning than any word could be. The men who had worked and toiled for old Tom Gallon, who had been deceived and baffled, who had had their loyalty tested to the utmost, now demanded through their impetuous silence that Wilkerson open up his mind to them. If he was indeed the owner of the Master Key, what did he intend to do?
"You'd better say some more quickly," warned Drake, in a low tone. And Wilkerson, completely bewildered, set the match to the powder. He stepped forward with as ugly a look as he could assume and cried: "Now tell me what you want!"
Instantly the air was filled with roars of rage and disappointment.
Fifteen minutes later Harry Wilkerson was sweating within the cabin. With a shaking hand he poured himself out a tumbler of Tubbs' whisky. He had promised the miners back pay, steady work, full wages and food. He must make good and he did not know how.
Presently the liquor steadied him and he turned to Tubbs, who was chuckling to himself empty, as if over some invisible comedy that was being played before his drunken eyes.
"Tubbs!" he said sharply, "you must find out what men we can trust. Say nothing, but get all the information you can! I'll make it worth the while of the men who'll stick by me."
The next morning he set Drake to work clearing up odds and ends of business while he himself bustled himself in going over the mine and getting the gangs to work again.
It was late in the afternoon when Tom Kane appeared on the mail wagon. The driver had already informed him of how affairs were going and the cook wasted no time. He climbed down from the high seat, jerked his battered sult case out of the wagon and made straight for his shanty. Within five minutes he had divested himself of his black clothes and donned his official overalls and apron. Then he appeared on the porch as calm and unconcerned as though he had not been away in no time at all a couple of dozen miners had gathered to shake hands and swap news. Naturally their biggest item was Wilkerson's proclamation of ownership.
At this Tom Kane laughed scornfully. He derided the papers, ridiculed the miners for being fools taken in and stated in set terms that he, Tom Kane, actually held the piece of authority.
This soon came to Wilkerson's ears and he hurried down the hill to stop what he knew to be a dangerous secession. Instantly the old cook locked horns with him, pooh-poohed him to his face, called him names of peculiar virulence and offered to fight him on any terms.
Before long the camp was in an uproar and it was due to certain cooler heads that trouble did not ensue immediately. These men insisted that there was time to settle the dispute of ownership, forced Wilkerson to withdraw his command that Kane leave the mine instantly and managed to bring a semblance of peace out of disorder. Kane bowed his neck to the yoke of their authority but dispatched a trusty messenger to the station with a telegram to John to come as soon as possible. Wilkerson resorted to a scene which was eventually to threaten the very existence of the Master Key. He sent Drake south to confer with a desperado whom he knew who could gather a band of Mexicans like himself on short notice, ready for anything that promised loot.

"Tell Jose to be here tomorrow night!" he instructed him. "I'll want about twenty men well armed."
Drake rode away as from destruction, cursing the luck that had put him in the power of such a man!

Ruth Parts From Old Tom Kane.

Dynamic.
In response to Kane's message John Dorr, Ruth Gallon and Everett left Beverly Hills for Silent Valley. They arrived the third day after the cook and from the moment they were recognized the miners dropped their attitude of sulky waiting and thronged about their mistress, cheering and shaking hands. When they had gone into the big house Kane arrived, apron and all, to report on the situation.
"It's come to a showdown," he remarked. "Wilkerson has several of the worthless fellows here and a lot of half-breeds back in the hills. He knows I have that money of yours and he's promised it to the Mexicans if they help him. You see Wilkerson will keep his skirts clear that way. He can say that it was a raid by bandits."
"How soon does all this happen?" drawled John.
Kane glanced at him curiously. He understood that warning not to frighten Ruth and went on airily, "Oh I reckon just as soon as Wilkerson gets Tubbs weaned from that bottle of his."
"But when Ruth had gone to her own rooms the cook wasted no words in smoothing things over.
"You've got to act and act quick," he told John and Everett. "It ain't the time for fooling. Tonight may do the business, for those Mexicans are impatient. Remember that Wilkerson has the keys to the powder house and he has all kinds of chance to lay his traps."
"I don't think he expected us so soon," John remarked.
"A good cook always has grub for people that drop in unexpected like," was the grim response. "Just take a peek down there now!"
Through the window John saw that the camp was quietly but surely dividing into two parties. The older miners were gathered about the cook shanty. Around the office stood a dozen or so malcontents, half drunk, under the leadership of Tubbs, who was wholly drunk, and on the porch talking to Wilkerson were a couple of Mexicans.
"It looks as if they meant to rush the camp," Dorr said thoughtfully. He proceeded to arm himself and Everett quietly followed suit.
"I'm going to talk to the boys first," said Dorr. He left the bungalow and strode off down the hill, followed by the cook.
The events of the next few moments came thick and fast. Before Dorr had well started on his explanation that Wilkerson had no claim on the mine there was a gun fired up by the mine tunnel mouth.
"That's a signal that the Mexicans are making trouble!" Kane shouted. "Look out for dynamite in the shaft, John!"
Without a word further Dorr leaped down from the porch of the cook shanty and started up the hill, followed by a dozen faithful supporters. Other shots were fired, Wilkerson appeared at the tunnel mouth and then vanished inside. John sprang upon the trestle and rushed after him.
Instantly a band of Mexicans materialized half way down the hill, fired a few shots and retreated. John paid no attention to them but kept on.
Once within the tunnel he saw a faint gleam of light ahead of him. He understood that Kane was right. Wilkerson was playing a desperate game in blowing up the shaft and then in the ensuing confusion allowing the bandits to loot undisturbed. He could assert when all was over that he had done his best to fight them off, but was overpowered.
A few yards farther on John stopped. A dark figure rushed by him towards the open air. But the little glow of light remained. For a moment Dorr hesitated. Then he leaped forward and began trying to extinguish a lighted fuse.
He had almost succeeded when a bullet whizzed by him, then a second splattered on the rock overhead. He turned and fired blindly in the direction of the shots and resumed his task. The fuse was short, but he succeeded in extinguishing it and started back. He met a fusillade of bullets. He dashed on towards the mouth of the tunnel and suddenly emerged on Wilkerson, who, not being able to see into the murk of the shaft, was firing blindly into the opening.
With a shout John leaped for the man whom he now knew to be seeking his life.
Seeing their two leaders grappling, both sides ceased to await the issue of that mighty conflict.
John Dorr for the first time in his life knew the absolute and terrific thirst of killing that sometimes comes to a man. It was either his life or Wilkerson's. And no one should interfere with his revenge. He threw himself on the man with but one object in view: to slay him bare handed.
Wilkerson fought tigerishly and, for the moment had the advantage. The lofty trestle was an ill place for a heavy man like Dorr to fight on and the other's agility and lithe quickness seemed about to win when John by a sudden unexpected and desperate maneuver caught him and threw him clear into the air, breaking his clutch with a terrific blow. Then he jerked him to the edge of the trestle and flung him over.
Standing erect, John drew the air into his tortured lungs and let out a tremendous yell of triumph. For the moment he was no longer a product of civilization. He was primeval. He had slain his foe. The valley echoed with his wild proclamation of supremacy.
Ruth Gallon heard that barbaric yell and shuddered. Tom Kane stared upward at the figure on the trestle and his open mouth seemed lifeless, for he, too, shared in the moment's blood lust.
And on the rocks below Wilkerson's figure sprawled grotesquely, its white and darkening face turned sightlessly to the sky.

above the peak of the mountain the miners had approached him with questions.
For an hour or so Drake equivocated and tried to postpone action.
At last he saw that he must do something immediately. He called some of the leaders into the office and with apparent frankness told them he had known nothing of the situation and that he felt sure Wilkerson was unaware of it.
"What are you going to do?" came the demand.
"This," replied Drake, writing rapidly. He showed them the message.
"Harry Wilkerson, Los Angeles, Cal.:"
"Come to mine at once. Trouble is brewing."
"DRAKE"
What is to Be Done?
Meantime John Dorr, Everett and Tom Kane were spending long hours in discussing what was to be done to save the Master Key to Ruth Tom once more went over the exact situation at the mine and asserted that unless prompt measures were taken not only would there be actual distress but likely rioting.
"I see," said Everett, at last. "Not having the papers I can't put this deal through the way I want to eventually. But something must be done on the spot."
"In the way of money," added Kane harshly. "Precisely." Everett assented with all cheerfulness. "Now, I'm going to loan John Dorr here five thousand dollars today for the Master Key mine."
"But who will take charge of it? Who will go to the mine?"
The broken laughed at him. "Not you! You'd be in a fight in three minutes, specially if Wilkerson turned up. Tom Kane is our man." He turned on the old man abruptly. "Will you take this money and go?"
The old cook stared at the crisp bills and then at Drake. "I ain't handled paper worth that much lately," he remarked. "But if you want me to go there and feed them people and get 'em back to work and keep things going till John can fix things up here, I'll go."
So it was agreed. After an affectionate farewell to Ruth, Kane left the hotel for the train that was to take him to Silent valley. He was very cheerful, but when settled at last in his seat in the train he muttered to himself, "I'll bet this won't be any picnic for your Uncle Thomas. If I know skunks, there'll be a smell named Wilkerson around the camp mighty nigh the time I arrive."
He was not astonished the next day to find Wilkerson on the ground.

The Battle for Control.
On his way to the mine Harry Wilkerson's courage, newly fired by a last conversation with Jean Darnell, commenced to ebb. She had employed every art of which she was mistress to persuade him that he must instantly obey Drake's telegram. And when he had surrendered to her wiles she laid down a plan of campaign and hurried him off, almost eager to be on the spot and seize the property that she told him was within his grasp.
However, as he recalled the situation which he had left, he could not blind himself to the fact that he was going to risk everything. From now on it would be open war between him and John Dorr.

Drake and Tubbs received him with unaffected relief. A few words sufficed to make the status of affairs plain.
Wilkerson had lost his sense of fear oddly enough; as he had come into the camp a dozen miners had recognized him and scowled. He had felt their hatred and it fed the man's sinister passion to do harm, and to hurt, to destroy. Now he faced Drake and Tubbs arrogantly.

"It won't be long till these chaps find out who's boss," he said. With a significant look at Drake he pulled out the forged deeds and handed them to Tubbs.

"Those mean that I'm legally the owner of the Master Key mine," he announced.

The engineer peered at them dully. He haltingly mumbled over some of the legal phrases, grinned slowly and passed the papers back.

"I guess that'll fix 'em!" he said huskily.

"I guess it will," was the rejoinder.

Tubbs seemed thoughtful, glancing out of the window now and again. Drake voiced his feeling.

"The sooner you let the miners know and get things settled, the better."

Wilkerson licked his dry lips. The battle was on. He broke the silence by saying gruffly: "Call 'em up here, Bill!"

When the men were gathered before him Wilkerson stepped forward and commenced to speak. He could not break their sullen silence, and after a few words of generalities he mustered his courage and shouted, "I am owner of this mine! I have the deeds right here!"

The effect of this was far other than he had expected. Not a murmur came from the still, motionless throng. It was as if they had not heard him. In a lower tone he repeated it, "I am the owner of the Master Key mine and all that goes with it."

There is a quality in the silence of the crowd of earnest men that is more questioning than any word could be. The men who had worked and toiled for old Tom Gallon, who had been deceived and baffled, who had had their loyalty tested to the utmost, now demanded through their impetuous silence that Wilkerson open up his mind to them. If he was indeed the owner of the Master Key, what did he intend to do?

"You'd better say some more quickly," warned Drake, in a low tone. And Wilkerson, completely bewildered, set the match to the powder. He stepped forward with as ugly a look as he could assume and cried: "Now tell me what you want!"

Instantly the air was filled with roars of rage and disappointment.

Fifteen minutes later Harry Wilkerson was sweating within the cabin. With a shaking hand he poured himself out a tumbler of Tubbs' whisky. He had promised the miners back pay, steady work, full wages and food. He must make good and he did not know how.

Presently the liquor steadied him and he turned to Tubbs, who was chuckling to himself empty, as if over some invisible comedy that was being played before his drunken eyes.

"Tubbs!" he said sharply, "you must find out what men we can trust. Say nothing, but get all the information you can! I'll make it worth the while of the men who'll stick by me."

The next morning he set Drake to work clearing up odds and ends of business while he himself bustled himself in going over the mine and getting the gangs to work again.

It was late in the afternoon when Tom Kane appeared on the mail wagon. The driver had already informed him of how affairs were going and the cook wasted no time. He climbed down from the high seat, jerked his battered sult case out of the wagon and made straight for his shanty. Within five minutes he had divested himself of his black clothes and donned his official overalls and apron. Then he appeared on the porch as calm and unconcerned as though he had not been away in no time at all a couple of dozen miners had gathered to shake hands and swap news. Naturally their biggest item was Wilkerson's proclamation of ownership.

At this Tom Kane laughed scornfully. He derided the papers, ridiculed the miners for being fools taken in and stated in set terms that he, Tom Kane, actually held the piece of authority.

This soon came to Wilkerson's ears and he hurried down the hill to stop what he knew to be a dangerous secession. Instantly the old cook locked horns with him, pooh-poohed him to his face, called him names of peculiar virulence and offered to fight him on any terms.

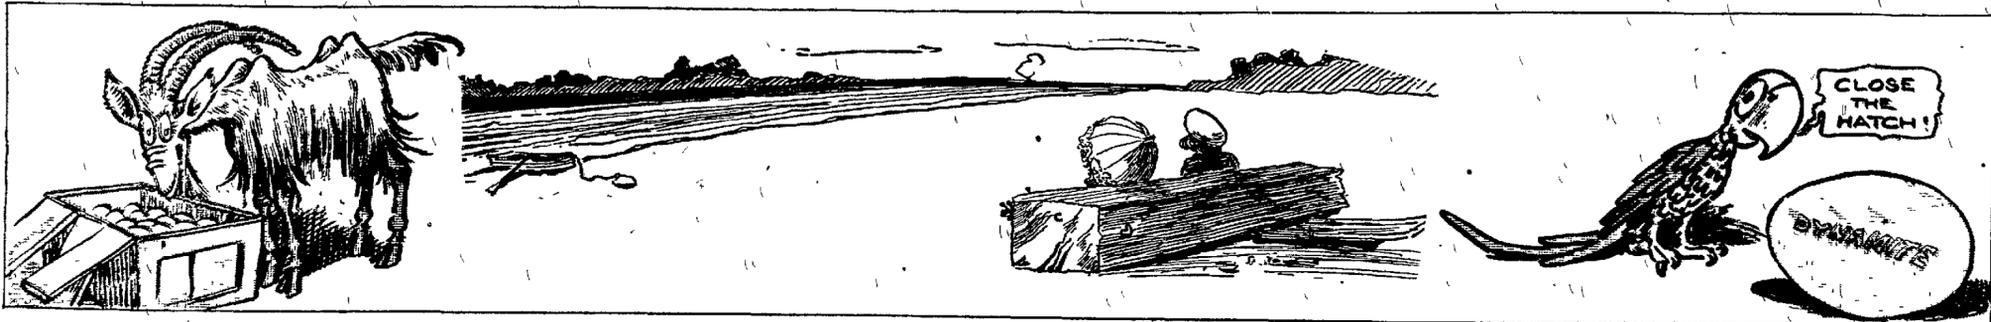

Before long the camp was in an uproar and it was due to certain cooler heads that trouble did not ensue immediately. These men insisted that there was time to settle the dispute of ownership, forced Wilkerson to withdraw his command that Kane leave the mine instantly and managed to bring a semblance of peace out of disorder. Kane bowed his neck to the yoke of their authority but dispatched a trusty messenger to the station with a telegram to John to come as soon as possible. Wilkerson resorted to a scene which was eventually to threaten the very existence of the Master Key. He sent Drake south to confer with a desperado whom he knew who could gather a band of Mexicans like himself on short notice, ready for anything that promised loot.

"Tell Jose to be here tomorrow night!" he instructed him. "I'll want about twenty men well armed."
Drake rode away as from destruction, cursing the luck that had put him in the power of such a man!

Dynamic.
In response to Kane's message John Dorr, Ruth Gallon and Everett left Beverly Hills for Silent Valley. They arrived the third day after the cook and from the moment they were recognized the miners dropped their attitude of sulky waiting and thronged about their mistress, cheering and shaking hands. When they had gone into the big house Kane arrived, apron and all, to report on the situation.

"It's come to a showdown," he remarked. "Wilkerson has several of the worthless fellows here and a lot of half-breeds back in the hills. He knows I have that money of yours and he's promised it to the Mexicans if they help him. You see Wilkerson will keep his skirts clear that way. He can say that it was a raid by bandits."
"How soon does all this happen?" drawled John.
Kane glanced at him curiously. He understood that warning not to frighten Ruth and went on airily, "Oh I reckon just as soon as Wilkerson gets Tubbs weaned from that bottle of his."
"But when Ruth had gone to her own rooms the cook wasted no words in smoothing things over.
"You've got to act and act quick," he told John and Everett. "It ain't the time for fooling. Tonight may do the business, for those Mexicans are impatient. Remember that Wilkerson has the keys to the powder house and he has all kinds of chance to lay his traps."
"I don't think he expected us so soon," John remarked.
"A good cook always has grub for people that drop in unexpected like," was the grim response. "Just take a peek down there now!"
Through the window John saw that the camp was quietly but surely dividing into two parties. The older miners were gathered about the cook shanty. Around the office stood a dozen or so malcontents, half drunk, under the leadership of Tubbs, who was wholly drunk, and on the porch talking to Wilkerson were a couple of Mexicans.
"It looks as if they meant to rush the camp," Dorr said thoughtfully. He proceeded to arm himself and Everett quietly followed suit.
"I'm going to talk to the boys first," said Dorr. He left the bungalow and strode off down the hill, followed by the cook.
The events of the next few moments came thick and fast. Before Dorr had well started on his explanation that Wilkerson had no claim on the mine there was a gun fired up by the mine tunnel mouth.
"That's a signal that the Mexicans are making trouble!" Kane shouted. "Look out for dynamite in the shaft, John!"
Without a word further Dorr leaped down from the porch of the cook shanty and started up the hill, followed by a dozen faithful supporters. Other shots were fired, Wilkerson appeared at the tunnel mouth and then vanished inside. John sprang upon the trestle and rushed after him.
Instantly a band of Mexicans materialized half way down the hill, fired a few shots and retreated. John paid no attention to them but kept on.
Once within the tunnel he saw a faint gleam of light ahead of him. He understood that Kane was right. Wilkerson was playing a desperate game in blowing up the shaft and then in the ensuing confusion allowing the bandits to loot undisturbed. He could assert when all was over that he had done his best to fight them off, but was overpowered.
A few yards farther on John stopped. A dark figure rushed by him towards the open air. But the little glow of light remained. For a moment Dorr hesitated. Then he leaped forward and began trying to extinguish a lighted fuse.
He had almost succeeded when a bullet whizzed by him, then a second splattered on the rock overhead. He turned and fired blindly in the direction of the shots and resumed his task. The fuse was short, but he succeeded in extinguishing it and started back. He met a fusillade of bullets. He dashed on towards the mouth of the tunnel and suddenly emerged on Wilkerson, who, not being able to see into the murk of the shaft, was firing blindly into the opening.
With a shout John leaped for the man whom he now knew to be seeking his life.

always looks for some means whereby to play a trick on his adversary. The Germans have a mania for wire. They hustle their works with a metallic embroidery, of debatable taste, and it is one of our nightly sports to cut these with shears. Exasperated to find each morning their wire lace work in shreds, they decided to hang (here a cartillon (chimes) of empty bottles, accompanied by empty conserve tins. The first time that we used the shears—music and firing.

We did not continue that night, but the following night a corporal glided as far as the network, adjusting three ropes, and regained his trench, from where he began to ring up the Germans. The lat-triumphant relief, opposite—they had killed all or put them to flight. Then furiously broke forth our fusillade, instantly followed by a rush with bayonets, and in ten minutes the German trench was ours.

Another night, profiting by the fog, to get a knowledge of what was in front, our men found at a little distance a trench where were the tools and weapons of its occupants. They possessed themselves of the weapons of the Germans, filled up the trench and returned with a smile on their lips, quite gay at the joke they had played on the Germans.

Between the enemy's trenches and ours, rose a birch tree. The Germans coveted this birch. One of them during two nights went to this tree and, despite our fusillade, patiently tried to cut it down. At length the birch was on the ground.

even a cattle pen, where graze several cows. Lately was celebrated the birth of a calf, and each day at dawn and twilight some men leave their hole, to milk the cows. "Never should, I have believed that there were such good milkmaids in all Flanders," said a soldier to me admiringly. And then I asked why it was that the Germans did not fire on the cows. He replied, scandalized:—"Fire on our cows! They had better not. In the first place, it would not be long before we repaid them. They have their cows, too, and we let them alone." Thus politeness is rendered in the midst of slaying.

Our soldiers and the Bavarian soldiers procure water from the same well situated in the neighborhood. At first they went separately, but by degrees they accustomed themselves to go at the same time, exchanging a few words, giving packets of tobacco or other objects in exchange for those of a different color or nature. Sometimes they even take their coffee in common. However, the hostilities continue. For instance, the Germans are set upon destroying a work of defence every evening that we have patiently labored at all day, according to orders given. On our side we no less systematically pull down a redoubt that the Germans were untiringly reconstructing.

One day, at an hour when by tacit accord the troops made a truce, two German officers came out from their trenches without weapons and their hands raised. They advanced toward our trenches, from where we in our turn came out. The officers explained that it was absurd to demolish every day the two pieces of work that both sides had been given orders to construct. He offered to abstain from touching ours if we on our part would leave theirs alone.

The agreement was concluded, some ter responded with precision and riddled their bottles and tins. A little later our corporal pulled the ropes; from the Germans another volley, nearer than the first. Silence; then again the dance of bottles. We could hear the nervous orders; evidently the enemy did not comprehend this sudden invulnerability of the wire cutters. During half an hour they attacked each jingling with an intense fusillade. Cleverly the corporal diminished the effects and decreasingly graduated into silence. One guessed the

The man wanted to drag away his booty as far as his entrenchment; this time a ball struck him. Two of his comrades boldly tried to replace him; they arrived at the tree and dragged it some yards. They were killed. There came still two others, and after those two more. This fighting for a birch tree lasted several hours. The tree was at length taken away. It had cost the Germans twenty-three men.

newspapers were exchanged, then at the moment of leaving us one of them announced that their period of sojourn at the front was drawing to an end, that he did not know what troops would replace them, but perhaps they would be Prussians. "Be on your guard with them," he said. "When we know we will notify you by hanging some pieces of blue paper from the wires that defend our trenches." So it goes without saying that the Bavarians, at least, do not love the Prussians.

In each hole there is an inventor who

F SANDERS, December, 1914.—The present war has abolished all that which until now lent to the resistance, to the retaliation, and the assurance of men a kind of grandiose splendor—has thrust to one side the fine array of troops that one sees in the ancient battle pictures; the variegated lines, the groups of staff officers going to the height of a plateau, the movements of the armies, the galloping of the cavaliers clothed in brilliant costumes, the beating of the drums—all that which created the ardor, excitement and courtesy of the combat. Warfare was gallant because it was made between adversaries who were in view of each other. "What would such men as Napoleon, Murat, Lassalle, Wellington and many others think about this clandestine war?"

Formerly a campaign consisted of one or two great combats of half a day, some times a whole day; then a joyous entry into the towns conquered. Good fortune and intrinsic held in these wars as much a place as did the encounters of the enemy. "It is as impossible to recount a battle," affirmed Wellington, "as to describe a ball."

But without wishing in the least to diminish the valor of the ancients, we must recognize that one of their battles would be merely a pleasure excursion for our soldiers of to-day. If Napoleon exacted from his "Gronards" (Gronards) such discipline of iron, such impersonality, so contrary to the temperament of our race, and which the modern tactics force; if he had attempted what is indispensable at the present time—to transform their natural impetuosity into abnegation—the formidable grenadiers would have found the task too hard and would have said without dissimulation that it did not please them.

To-day a hole in the ground, ordaind science, immobility under the rain that falls and the shrapnel that descends, under the sounds of the cannon that roar; battles of forty days' length, without a single instant free from the deafening noise of the artillery, more or less near. On a front of four hundred miles in extension the soldiers of the Allies arrange things, and the French soldier accommodates himself with as much cheerfulness, zany and good humor as our ancestors acquitted themselves in their light and rapid adventures of former times.

Let us judge of it.

The trenches are long narrow ditches, on the front border of which is arranged an embankment or parapet formed by the earth from the ditch. "The trench for the fire" (rifichten), seated or lying, has a depth of a little more than a yard and a parapet of at least half a yard. The trench "for kneeling" has a depth of nearly a yard. If there is the time to make a trench for "standers" it must be a yard and a half deep. That is not all. If one can, one covers the trench with a slight shelter; doors, planks and pieces of wood cover the ground, providing that one has time to place them.

These rudimentary shelters afford a means of protection, the importance of which one does not at first imagine. In fact, the shooter, seated more or less comfortably at the bottom of his trench, laughs at the rifle shots that brush the ground in their strident flight above his head. But he must take care not to show his head higher than the shelter; not even an arm must be seen. As for the shell, it makes much noise, but does very little damage to the soldier in his trench. A shell of forty kilos (88 pounds) produces a tunnel shaped hole of six yards at the point where it falls, but only a lucky stroke can reach a trench. The combatant who is not exactly at the point where it burst runs no other danger than that of being covered with earth or mud.

It is scarcely necessary to say that the most difficult "trump card" is for the artillery to reach this thin outline scarcely visible on the ground. The soldiers go so far as to even paint the shelters the color of the earth around, and, when time affords, to make some false trenches that constitute an excellent ruse of war. The organization of the battle field comprises also an ensemble of defence. Trees cut down and piled up and stockades are excellent use if the surrounding land is woody, where trees can be procured, and when they are lacking tangled barbed wire constitutes an accessory defence. The effect of the artillery is null on this enclosure of network; it cannot be passed through except by the mine or the shears. Also we have inaugurated the war of strongholds in the open country. Everybody invisible or nearly so, the least movement possible. It is observed. Word of order. To hold the front that one occupies. It is manifestly the same on each side. The service is also regulated: three days in the trenches of the first line, three days in the reserve trenches, three days of repose.

Trenches! We have made them over a distance of hundreds of kilometres (a kilometre is a fraction more than three-fifths of a mile), and our lines from the front resemble molehills that are cut out in galleries. One can live there, and some men remain for two or three months in these moist ditches. The courage necessary to resist day and night the inclemency and the assaults continues. One sleeps little, one eats badly. How can such a life be described with enough power to make comprehensible the incalculable grandeur of its meaning?

Night, cold. Toward the morning a thick white frost falls on us. The sun rises. British, French and German begin their daily routine. From behind a crest a German captive balloon slowly rises. Opposite it a French balloon appears little by little. There! All is in place; the scenery changes not until the evening. But to pass days and weeks adorning these holes in the earth becomes monotonous. We busy ourselves in organizing to render the trenches more comfortable; each day brings an improvement. There have been some attempts to heat them. A brick and a foot warmer are tried by turns, for one must not dream of having anything with smoke, for that would be a sign for the enemy.

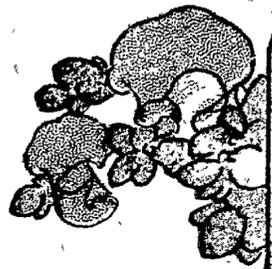

These modern trenches advance irregularly, in zig-zag fashion. They are carrefours (where two or more trenches cross), some places (squares), impasses (blind alleys). This makes altogether an improvised town. In order that the soldier may refine his trench they have baptized each one. There is the "rue Poincaré," "King street," "rue de Russie," "rue de Bruxelles," "Place de la Liberté." Next, each "refuge" receives a name graven on a beak. There is the "Palace Hotel," "Savoy Hotel," "Royal Hotel," &c., with the name of the proprietor. At the edge of the wood opening on the enemy's lines is an enticing notice—Entrance to the Cinematograph.

Taking the left of the "Passage Albert I," we arrive at the bathing establishment, "Regiment, Third Company," "Salle de douches," says a label. Some dressing gowns and some towels hang on bayonets fixed in the partitions of earth; these also serve as hat and coat rails. The water falls from a hose. It was the captain who had this idea. A shell had hollowed out a large hole at this place. A large flagstone was placed at the bottom and a roof put on the top. It is a reservoir fed by rain water. A tap is put at the end of a hose to conduct the water; this hangs above a tub, and in turn one takes a glacial douche. With vigorous rubbing a healthy reaction is quickly produced. It must not be thought that this is either luxury or amusement; this instalment is very precious to all the regiment. And the regiment is clean. This cannot be said of those opposite, for our prisoners captured are in sad plight.

Certain trenches are only thirty-five yards from the enemy, and from each burrow talking can be heard. French and Germans look each other in the eyes, without hatred, but there remains the inevitable necessity of killing each other piously. And the war takes a new character. What a pity that there are not archers in the armies! An arrow had virtue in its parabola, penetrating more profoundly in the trenches, closer than a rifle shot can be sent. Soon we will come up with each other, knife between the teeth. Yet one does not feel the sentiment of a great combat—the struggle is too personal, too isolated.

Yes, we who have kept the enemy at bay for several weeks have the impression of doing nothing. We are reduced to writing the "Journal of the Trenches." There one reads the pleas-
