

FOX TROTTING TO AID HORSE TROTTING!

THE last public place in the world which fox-trotting could invade has been invaded and conquered. Fox-trotting as an aid and adjunct to horse-trotting is now firmly established.

It was done the other day at the great Belmont race track in New York, where thirty thousand people had gathered to see the horse-trotting and where later in the same day almost thirty thousand people forgot the horse-trotting to gaze in amazement upon the fox-trotting.

The restaurant, the aisles and lobbies of theaters, some churches, the home, the office—in fact, every institution of public, private, or semi-public character has been conquered by the fox-trot. It looked as if the fox-trot would have to rest on its laurels for the remainder of its days simply because there were no more worlds for it to conquer.

Then along came Mrs. August Belmont, Jr., and Miss Anne Morgan with the suggestion of a fox-trot for the race track. The fox-trot came, saw and conquered. Hereafter no race, at least no race which pretends to be both up-to-date and a social affair, can possibly be held without the fox-trot accompaniment. And in the meantime the unemployed of New York and the war sufferers in Europe are going to benefit to the extent of many thousands of dollars as a result, for the "race-dansant" was held for them.

It was the first time the thing had been done in these daring United States. One of the beauties of the experiment was that it permitted you to play your favorites on the track and then celebrate your winnings with a rollicking dance.

Or if the goddess of betting did not smile on your wager you could seize a partner and forget your loss and disappointment in the mazes of a mad maxime or the follies of a fervid fox-trot.

It was really an exciting afternoon.

There are two things in the world that hold their devotees in an almost fanatical allegiance. They are dancing and horse racing. Therefore when both of these joys were brought into juxtaposition nothing less than an exciting afternoon could result.

As has been said, it was the first time the thing had been tried this side of the Atlantic. In fact, it might be said with a fair degree of assurance it was the first time racing, dancing, pretty girls, well-dressed men and music were ever brought together in the history of the race, of the dance and of pretty girls. Society actually forgot to indulge in its favorite pastime of watching the passing style review in its keenness for the dances.

Likewise it was a new type of "the dance" conversation that made its appearance. Also of race-track boudoirs. Didn't Miss Marshall make a grand showing in the last one?" "Isn't she light on her feet?" "What do you suppose the girls would bring at auction?" "Look at her step!" "Fine wind she's got!" "Look how he's holding her in!" "Wasn't that chase just too exciting for anything?" "They've been using liniment on her ankles." "Look at her three white stockings!" All these remarks about dancers and racers so indiscriminately strung together had everyone guessing as to whether woman or horse were the subject, and resulted in many a vexing misunderstanding.

Underneath the grandstand the Vacation War Relief committee, under whose auspices the dance was given, had set up a platform, antiseptic if suitably from the point of the multitude who did not have quite enough in their pockets to take advantage of it, and sprinkled the whole platform with dainty tea-tables, with shining white tablecloths and napkins and shining silver and glasses.

The largest crowd that ever watched a race at the Belmont race track—a track which, by the way, has held many a record crowd—watched the dances in good-natured approval and interest. There was, of course, a sprinkling of dyed-in-the-wool race fans who looked with supremest contempt upon the maids and men who could ignore or neglect for a few moments a race for the make of a dance. Some didn't even try to hide their contempt and displeasure. But they were far in the minority. They were all but lost in the crowd who were eminently in favor of the innovation and encouraged it with applause.

It was Mrs. August Belmont, Jr., who originated the idea of the race-dansant. Miss Anne Morgan was treasurer of the committee who got the people together, and Miss Ruth Shaw Kennedy was its secretary.

FOURTEENTH INSTALLMENT

SYNOPSIS.

Sanford Quest, master criminalist of the world, finds that in bringing to justice MacDougal, the murderer of Lord Ashleigh's daughter, he has but just begun a life-and-death struggle with a mysterious master criminal. In a hidden hut in Professor Ashleigh's estate, the professor's servant, Mrs. Malony, and his maid Lenora, have been captured half-naked, hair torn, destroyed by fire. In his room have appeared black boxes containing notes signed by a pair of armless hands. Laura and Lenora, his assistants, and Mr. Craig, the professor's servant, are also missing. The black boxes continue to appear, in uncanny fashion. Craig, trapped, escapes to England. Quest, Lenora and professor follow him. Lord Ashleigh is murdered by the hands. Craig, captured, escaped into the desert. They are captured by Indians, escape with Craig as their captive, and turn him over to Inspector French in San Francisco. He escapes in a train wreck, outgenerals his pursuers, and starts back to New York.

A BOLT FROM THE BLUE

CHAPTER XXXI.

There was a peculiar, almost foreboding, silence about the camp that morning when Laura returned from her early ride. The only living person to be seen was the Chinaman, sitting on a stool in front of the wagon with a dish of potatoes between his knees.

"Say, where's everyone?" Laura sung out, after she had looked into Lenora's tent and found it empty.

The Chinaman looked up at her malevolently.

"All gone," he announced. "Cowboys gone. Workers. Misses gone hurry up find Mr. Quest."

Laura hesitated, puzzled. Just then the professor came cantering in with a bundle of grass in his hand. He glanced down at the Chinaman.

"Good morning, Miss Laura!" he said. "You don't seem to be getting on with our friend here," he added in an undertone.

"Pshaw!" she answered. "Who cares what a chink thinks! The fellow's an idiot. I'm worried, professor. Lenora's gone out after Mr. Quest and the inspector. She wasn't fit to ride a horse. I can't make out why she's attempted it."

The professor unslung some field-glasses from his shoulder and gazed steadily southward.

"It is just possible," he said, softly, "that she may have received a warning of that."

He pointed with his forefinger. Laura peered forward. There was something which seemed to be just a faint cloud upon the horizon. The professor handed her his glasses.

"Why, it's a fire!" she cried.

The professor nodded.

"Just a prairie fire," he replied—"very dangerous, thought, these dry seasons. The flames move so quickly that if you happen to be in a certain position you might easily get cut off."

Laura turned her horse round.

"Come on, professor!" she exclaimed. "That's what it is. Lenora's gone to try and warn the others."

They rode to the very edge of the tract of country, which was temporarily enveloped with smoke and flame. Here they pulled in their horses and the professor looked thoughtfully through his field-glasses.

Laura gave a little cry and pointed with her riding whip. About twenty yards farther on, by the side of the road, was a small white object. She cantered on, swung herself from her horse and picked it up.

"Lenora's handkerchief!" she cried.

The professor waved his arm westward.

"Here comes Quest and the inspector. They are making a circuit to avoid the fire."

They galloped across the rough country towards the little party, who were now clearly in sight.

From the center of one of the burning patches they saw a riderless horse gallop out, stop for a moment with his head almost between his forelegs, shake himself furiously and gallop blindly on again.

Laura would have turned her horse, but the professor checked her.

"Let us wait for Quest," he advised. "They are close here."

The cowboy, riding a little behind the two others, had unlashed his lariat, and, while they watched, swung it over his head and secured the runaway. Quest galloped up to where Laura and the professor were waving frantically.

"Say, that's some fire!" Quest exclaimed. "Did you people come out to see it?"

"No, we came to find Lenora!" Laura answered, breathlessly. "That's her horse. She started to meet you. She must be somewhere—"

"Lenora!" Quest interrupted, fiercely. "What do you mean?"

"When I got back to the camp," Laura continued, rapidly, "there wasn't a soul there except the Chinaman. He told me that Lenora had ridden off a few minutes before to find you. We came to look for her. We found her handkerchief on the road there, and that's her horse."

Quest did not wait for another word. He jumped a rough bush of scrub on the right-hand side, galloped over the ground, which was already hot with the coming fire, and followed along down the road by which Lenora had passed. When he came to the first bend, he could hear the roar of flames in the trees. A volume of smoke almost blinded him; his horse became wholly unmanageable. He slipped from the saddle and ran on, staggering from right to left like a drunken man. About forty yards along the road, Lenora was lying in the dust. A volume of smoke rushed over her. The tree under which she had collapsed was already alight. A twig fell from it as Quest staggered up, and her skirt began to smoulder. He tore off his coat, wrapped it around her, beat out the fire which was already blazing at her feet and snatched her into his arms. She opened her eyes for a moment.

"Where are we?" she whispered. "The fire!"

"That's all right," Quest shouted. "We'll be out of it in a moment. Hold tight to my neck."

He braced himself for a supreme effort and ran along the pathway. His feet were blistered and from the heat, there was a great burn on one of his arms. At last, however, he passed out of the danger zone and staggered up to where the professor, the inspector and Laura were waiting.

"Say, that was a close shave," he faltered, as he laid Lenora upon the ground. "Another five minutes—well, we won't talk about it. Let's lift her on to your horse, Laura, and get back to the camp."

CHAPTER XXXII.

The professor laid down his book and gazed with an amiable smile towards Quest and Lenora.

"I fear," he remarked, dolefully, "that my little treatise on the fauna of the Northern Orinoco scarcely appeals to you, Mr. Quest."

Quest, whose arm was in a sling, but who was otherwise none the worse for his recent adventure, pointed out of the tent.

"Don't you believe it, professor," he begged. "I've been listening to every word. But say, Lenora, just look at Laura and French!"

They all three peered anxiously out of the opening of the tent. Laura and the inspector were very slowly approaching the cook wagon. Laura was carrying a large bunch of wild flowers, one of which she was in the act of fastening in French's buttonhole.

"That fellow French has got grit," Quest declared. "He sticks to it all the time. He'll win out with Laura in the end, you mark my words."

"I hope he will," Lenora said. "She's a dear girl, although she has got an idea into her head that she hates men and loathes. I think the inspector's just the man for her."

"We're wired for them to meet Craig," Quest said after a short silence. "I only hope they don't let him slip through their fingers. I haven't much faith in his promise to turn up at the professor's. Let's see what Laura and French have to say."

"Can't see any sense in staying on here any longer," was French's immediate decision, "so long as you two invalids feel that you can stick the journey. Besides, we're using up these fellows' hospitality."

"We'll get everything in order tonight," Laura decided, "and start first thing tomorrow."

They busied themselves for the next hour or two, making preparations. After their evening meal he sighed and leaned back wearily.

"If I had had you for a little longer, Mary," he said, "perhaps I should have been a better man. Go to the window, please, and tell me if that man is still there."

She crossed the room with light footsteps. Presently she returned.

"He is just crossing the street," she announced.

"I think that he seems to be coming here."

Craig took the girl for a minute into his arms.

"Good-by, dear," he said. "I want you to take this paper and keep it carefully. You will be cared for always, but I must go."

"But where must you go?" she asked, bewildered.

"I have an appointment at Professor Ashleigh's," he told her. "I cannot tell you anything more than that. Good-by."

He kissed her for a moment passionately. Then suddenly he tore himself away. She heard him run lightly down the stairs. Some instinct led her to the back window. She saw him emerge from the house and pass down the yard. Then she went to the front. The man in the blue serge was talking to the landlady below. She sank into a chair, puzzled and unhappy. Then she heard heavy footsteps. The door was opened. The man in the blue serge suit entered, followed by the protesting landlady.

"There's no sense in coming here to worry the young lady," Mrs. Malony declared, irritably. "As for Mr. Craig, I told you that he'd gone out."

"Gone out, eh?" the man repeated, speaking in a thick, disagreeable tone. "Why, I watched him in here not ten minutes ago. Now then, young lady, guess you'd better cough up the truth."

The man retired. Quest unfolded the sheet of paper. His expression suddenly changed.

"Listen!" he exclaimed:

To Sanford Quest:

Gather your people in Professor Ashleigh's Library at ten o'clock tonight. I will be there and tell you my whole story. JOHN CRAIG.

The professor sat for a moment speechless.

"Then he meant it, after all!" he exclaimed at last.

"Seems like it," Quest admitted. "I'll just telephone to French."

The professor rose to his feet, knocked the ash from his cigar, struggled into his coat and took up his hat. Then he waited until Quest had completed his conversation. The latter's face had grown grave and pensive. It was obvious that he was receiving information of some importance.

clothes man whom they had left on guard was standing there with his hand upon Craig's collar. The girl, sobbing bitterly, was clinging to his arm.

Craig was making desperate efforts to escape. Directly he saw the little party issue from the library, however, the strength seemed to pass from his limbs. He remained in the clutches of his captor, limp and helpless.

"I caught the girl trying to make her way into the house," the latter explained. "She called out and this man came running downstairs, right into my arms."

"It is quite all right," the professor said, in a dignified tone. "You may release them both. Craig was on his way to keep an appointment here at ten o'clock. Quest, will you and the inspector bring him in? Let us resume our places at the table."

The little procession made its way down the hall. The girl was still clinging to her uncle.

"What are they going to do to you, these people?" she sobbed. "They shan't hurt you. They shan't!"

Lenora passed her arm around the girl.

"Of course not, dear," she said, soothingly.

"Your uncle has come of his own free will to answer a few questions, only I think it would be better if you would let me—"

Lenora never finished her sentence. They had reached the entrance now to the library. The professor was standing in the doorway with extended hand, motioning them to take their places at the table. Then, with no form of warning, the room seemed suddenly filled with a blaze of blue light. It came at first in a thin flash from the window to the table, became immediately multiplied a thousand times, played round the table in sparks, which suddenly expanded to sheets of leaping, curling flame. The roar of thunder shook the very foundations of the house—and then silence. For several seconds not one of them seemed to have the power of speech. An amazing thing had happened. The oak table in the middle of the room was a charred fragment, the chairs were every one blackened remnants.

"A thunderbolt!" French gasped at last.

Quest was the first to cross the room. From the table to the outside window was one charred, black line which had burnt its way through the carpet. He threw open the window. The wire whose course he had followed ended here with a little lump of queer substance. He broke it off from the end of the wire, which was absolutely brittle and tasteless, and brought it into the room.

"What is it?" Lenora faltered.

"Say, what have you got there?" French echoed.

Quest examined the strange-looking lump of metal steadily. The most curious thing about it seemed to be that it was absolutely sound and showed no signs of damage. He turned to the professor.

"I think you are the only one who will be able to appreciate this, professor," he remarked.

"Look!" It is a fragment of opotan—a distinct and wonderful specimen of opotan."

Everyone looked puzzled.

"But what," Lenora inquired, "is opotan?"

"It is a new metal," Quest explained, gravely, towards which scientists have been directing a great deal of attention lately. It has the power of collecting all the electricity from the air around us. There are a dozen people, at the present moment, conducting experiments with it for the purpose of cheapening electric lights. If we had been in the room ten seconds sooner—"

He paused significantly. Then he swung round on his heel. Craig, a now pitiful object, his hands nervously twitching, his face ghastly, was cowering in the background.

"Your last little effort, Craig?" he demanded sternly.

Craig made no reply. The professor, who had disappeared for a moment, came back to them.

"There is a smaller room across the hall," he said, "which will do for our purpose."

Craig suddenly turned and faced them.

"I have changed my mind," he said. "I have nothing to tell you. Do what you will with me. Take me to the Tombs, deal with me any way you choose, but I have nothing to say."

Quest pointed a threatening finger at him.

"Your last voluntary word, perhaps," he said.

"But science is still your master, Craig. Science has brought many criminals to their doom. It shall take its turn with you. Bring him along, French, to my study. There is a way of dealing with him."

Quest felt his forehead and found it damp.

There were dark rims under his eyes. Before him was Craig, with a little band around his forehead and the mirror where they could all see it. The professor stood a little in the background. Laura and French were side by side, gazing with distended eyes at the blank mirror, and Lenora was doing her best to soothe the terrified girl. Twice Quest's teeth came together and once he almost reeled.

"It's the fight of his life," he muttered at last.

"But I've got him."

Almost as he spoke they could see Craig's resistance begin to weaken. The tenseness of his form relaxed, Quest's will was triumphing. Slowly in the mirror they saw a little picture creeping from the outline into definite form, a picture of the professor's library. Craig himself was there with mortar and trowel, and a black box in his hand.

"It's coming!" Lenora moaned.

Quest stood perfectly tense. The picture suddenly flashed into brilliant clearness. They saw Craig's features with almost lifelike detail. From the corner of that room where the professor was standing came a smothered groan. It was a terrifying, a paralyzing moment. Even the silence seemed charged with awful things. Then suddenly, without any warning, the picture faded completely away. A cry, which was almost a howl of anger, broke from Quest's lips. Craig had fallen sideways from his chair. There was an ominous change in his face. Something seemed to have passed from the atmosphere of the room, some tense and nameless quality. Quest moved forward and laid his hand on Craig's heart. The girl was on her knees, screaming.

"Take her away," Quest whispered to Lenora.

"What about him?" French demanded, as Lenora led the girl from the room.

"He fought too hard," Quest said, gravely. "He is dead. Professor—"

They all looked around. The spot where he had been standing was empty. The professor had gone.

(TO BE CONTINUED)

1—"He Fought Too Hard," Quest Said Gravely, "He Is Dead."

2—"I Caught the Girl Trying to Make Her Way Into the House."

3—"I Cannot Tell You Anything More Than That. Good-by."

He put down the instrument at last with a curt word of farewell.

The professor moved towards the door.

"Beauty Meter" Classifies Faces As Handsome, Ugly, or Medium

YOU may be one of those people who frequently use the expression "I just love to sit in a street car or train and study faces." Scientifically, your words mean nothing. If some one were to ask you to give the dimensions of a normal human face you, no doubt, would find yourself up a tree, so to speak.

But there is a man who can use the expression with definite meaning and literal truth. He is Professor William Barnes Fotheringham of England. For years the professor has studied the faces of men and women with the minute care that a botanist studies a plant; a geologist measures and classifies a specimen.

The instrument he has invented for classifying faces according to the standard of the Greek statues is termed a "beauty meter." The scientific name is "kallometer." Anyone can construct this instrument by stretching threads or wires across a wooden or cardboard frame at the intervals shown in a photograph accompanying this article.

Professor Fotheringham always starts from a horizontal line drawn through the pupils of the eyes (which should be exactly two and a half inches apart) when the gaze is directed level immediately in front. From this point to a line drawn below the opening of the nostril the nose should be one and seven-eighth inches, the upper lip should measure three-quarters of an inch to the mean line of the mouth, and two inches from the mouth to the bottom of the chin. The width between the eyes in infants and adults is practically the same.

"Upon investigation," says Professor Fotheringham, "it will be found that faces group themselves in certain easily recognizable divisions. These divisions can be so minutely subdivided as to resolve them selves into a practical proof of the truth that there are no two human faces exactly alike."

"But any minute division would defeat our purpose, and I have chosen rather to limit the types of faces to forty. This is not extravagant when one remembers that there are twelve hundred varieties of birds and nine hundred of fishes. There are even a hundred and ninety varieties of dogs, and yet the breeder has no difficulty in remem-bering them all."

The standard of beauty, by general consent of the artists and poets of all ages and all climes, is to be found in the faces and forms of the Greek statues. How many women and men of today fulfill the canons of beauty? "One or two in a million," says Professor Fotheringham.

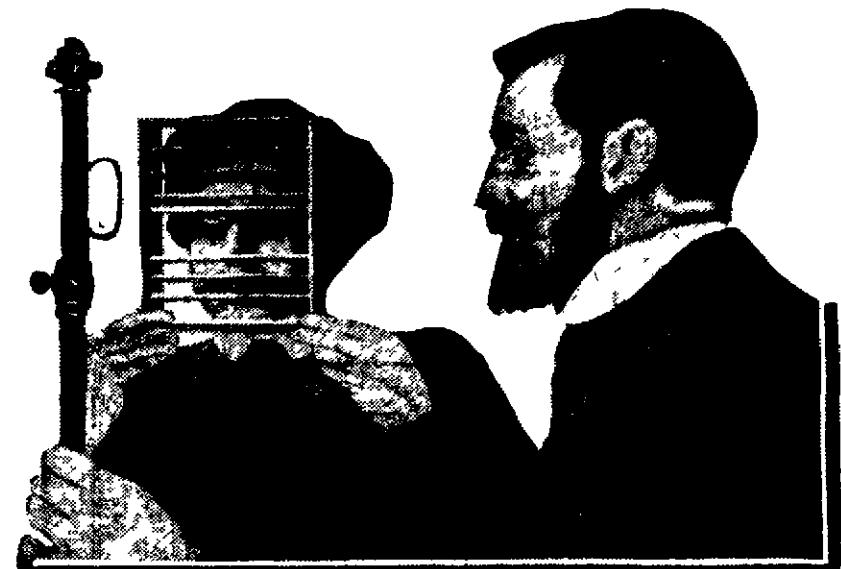

Passing the faces of certain celebrities through Professor Fotheringham's kallometer we become aware of some extraordinary varieties, revealing the fact that no animal offers such striking differences of outline as man. For instance William Makepeace Thackeray, besides being a famous novelist, possessed a head measuring nine and three-quarters inches long instead of eight and a half. Moreover, his nostrils were half an inch above the standard and his mouth a quarter of an inch below it. Charles Dickens could boast an almost beautiful mask. His great predecessor, Scott, was abnormal in the height of his brow and the length of his upper lip.

The perfect head, according to Professor Fotheringham, is nine inches square, from crown to chin, and from nose tip to back. The standard face, he says, should be of a certain width—some five and a half inches across at a point just below the ear, and the eyes two and three-eighths inches apart. This would make the width of the head a full seven inches, yet there are heads only five and a half inches wide, and eyes less than two inches apart.

Construct a beautymeter and ascertain how far you, or your acquaintances, vary from the standard of the ideal form of face.

Make Your Own Mouse Trap

ARE you having trouble with mice? Would you know how to make a simple and effective trap?

If you would, follow these directions. Stick a match into a piece of cheese, pare the other end of the match, and place the tip on a thimble on the rim of a plate. Place a basin on the match and thimble. If the whole is carefully poised, as soon as the mouse touches the cheese the basin will fall and imprison the mouse.

ORIGIN OF MOTTO ON COINS

THE introduction of a religious motto or device for the coinage of our country had been suggested, more or less indirectly, several times, but the suggestion that was finally adopted came from a farmer of Maryland.

In 1861, when Mr. Chase was Secretary of the Treasury, he received a letter from this old farmer, who suggested that, as we claimed to be a Christian people, we should indicate our profession in our coinage. The letter was referred to the director of the mint, James Pollock.

In Mr. Pollock's report for 1862 he discussed the question of the recognition of the sovereignty of God and our trust in Him on our coins. The proposition to introduce a motto upon our coins, he said, had been considered by Mr. Chase, and he did not doubt, but believed, that it would meet with approval by an intelligent public sentiment. But Congress gave no attention to the suggestion, and in his next annual report he referred to the subject and said:

"The motto suggested, 'God Our Trust,' is taken from our national hymn, 'The Star Spangled Banner.' The sentiment is familiar to every citizen of our country; it has thrilled the hearts and failed in song from the lips of millions of American freemen. The time is propitious; 'tis an hour of national peril and danger—an hour when man's strength is weakness, when our strength and salvation must be of God. Let us reverently acknowledge His sovereignty, and let our coinage declare our trust in God."

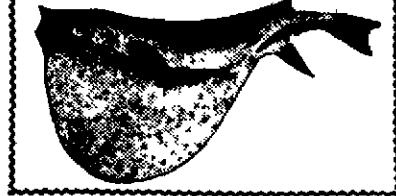

A 2-cent bronze piece was authorized to be coined by Congress the following year—April 22, 1864—and upon this was first stamped the motto: "In God We Trust." In his report for that year Mr. Pollock expressed his approval of the act and strongly urged that the recognition of trust be extended to the gold and silver coins of the United States. By the fifth section of the act of Congress of March 3, 1865, the director of the mint, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, was authorized to place upon all the silver and gold coin of the United States susceptible of such additions thereafter to be issued the motto: 'In God We Trust.'

Here's a Rare Catch

FYI! should throw your hook into a pond and, after a few moments pause, pull out a stellated globe fish you doubtless would be surprised. But that was the experience of Fred Tiltman, an English fisherman, who recently tried his luck in a pond in the south of England.

Although the fish was a comparatively small one, its stomach was found to contain at least two quarts of water which was full of debris of seaweed. Its body was covered with small pines, each of which rose from a distinct stellated root.

A CHINESE BABY MINDER

HOW to keep a baby quiet and out of harm's way is always an interesting subject to mothers. Chinese women have a novel method, as testified to by the accompanying photograph taken in the village of Anting, China.

The child seen in the tub is just able to rest its feet on the earth with which it has been partly filled, in order to keep it quite steady. When this snapshot was taken the mother rushed from the house in an excited state of mind, snatched the child from the tub, and cried out in despair that the "evil eye" had been cast upon it.

An offer of a dollar to the woman only added insult to injury.

The Tub Is Filled With Sand—The Baby Can Neither Fall Nor Climb Out.

Meerchaum Not German Word

MANY people are inclined to believe that meerchaum is a product of sea foam. Meerchaum is a German word, compounded from meet, which means sea, and schaum, which means foam. It is the name of a fine clay composed of magnesia, silica and water in equal parts. When fresh from the pit it is soft and makes a lather like soap, which gives rise to its name. After being molded into pipes, these are boiled in oil or wax and baked until hard.

AGE TO RETIRE FROM WORK

WHEN should a man retire from busi-ness? Should he retire at all? Varying answers to these questions have appeared in the public prints from time to time. In order to learn the viewpoint of the medical fraternity, or a part of it, the questions were put to Dr. William S. Sadler, a well-known authority on nervous diseases. He said:

The mirrors make it possible for the detective to watch the movements of those behind or at the side of him, and if he is at all clever, without the knowledge of those he is watching. It is likely that Sir A. Conan Doyle's hero, Sherlock Holmes, who is seldom without a pipe, will have this new invention in his mouth when next seen they find other and equally absorbing lines of work or endeavor with which to engage their minds and occupy their energies.

The pessimistic old gentleman and the quarrelsome old lady, as a rule, are those who have tried to stop work in their old age. They are endeavoring to sit down in peace and quiet and enjoy life, but they are rewarded only with peevish discontent; they become a bore to themselves and a nuisance to their loved ones, they blame their children and grandchildren and other relatives for their misery, and all of this could have been prevented had their powers been kept employed in useful work to the last.

The most beautiful picture of the eventide of life is the old man with the sound brain, who works steadily on until the end, radiating optimism, sunshine and wisdom to all about him, proving himself the valued counselor of his younger associates and effectually demonstrating that the evening of life is the most beautiful period of existence when one's energies are employed in an appropriate manner and when one's unselfish interests are kept in action to the very end."

WHY TOMORROW IS LONGEST DAY IN YEAR

WHY will tomorrow, June 21, be the longest day in the year? Every schoolboy can answer this question if he remembers his textbook, but it has been a long time since most of the grown-up readers of this page left school. They might have forgotten—so to refresh their memories we print the following sceptical version of the seasons:

The causes of the regular changes of conditions known as the seasons are the passage of the earth around the sun and the inclination of the earth's axis to the plane of its orbit.

As the orbit of the earth is elliptical, one axis is longer than the other, so that the earth is not always the same distance from the sun. As the axis of the earth is inclined to the plane of its orbit at an angle of 23½ degrees, the same part of the earth is not always inclined to the sun and the sun's rays are not always perpendicular over the same place on the earth.

In the season known to us as spring the sun's rays fall perpendicularly upon the equator, day and night are equal all over

By DELIA AUSTRIAN.

HE fingers of Moloch, stained with the blood of Europe's sons, reached forth across the Adriatic, and, lifting the King of Italy from his throne, set him down among his fellow monarchs in the seething cauldron of war. He surveyed the situation critically, and then unsheathed his sword.

Somewhat it seems quite natural for us to think of the German Kaiser being at the front, or the Czar of Russia, or the King of England Nicholas of Montenegro and Peter of Serbia do not seem out of place at the head of their troops, away from their families, for rulers have led armies to battle down through the pages of history. But it is hard to reconcile Victor Emmanuel in the role of a soldier, in the role of anything but a peaceful monarch, a loving husband, a proud father.

King Victor Emmanuel is the idol of his people because he believes in democracy. He rules to serve his people, not to command them. Their aspirations and wishes are his—their needs are his needs. Whether in the north, as in Milan, or in the south, as in Rome and Naples, the people speak of him with the same enthusiasm and genuine love.

This is true of his subjects in all walks of life, though he means more to his army. He likes to fraternize with his soldiers and listen to their stories and their experiences. Though a firm believer in peace, he likewise is a firm believer in preparedness—and is recognized as one of the ablest strategists of Europe. The king has assumed supreme command of the army and navy forces of his country, which will necessitate his being away from his family the greater part of the time. And it is of this ideal family life that I wish to tell you.

Weds Famous Beauty.

It was in Venice that Victor Emmanuel, then the crown prince of Italy, met his future wife, Elena, a Montenegrin princess. She was there with her mother and her sister, and she dazzled everybody by her rich beauty, accentuated by her brilliant dark eyes and jet black hair. The young prince was charmed by her svelt, girlish figure and her vivacious manner.

The love of Victor Emmanuel was returned by the princess, and, much to the surprise of royalty, they became engaged. Emperor Alexander III of Russia had hoped to welcome Elena as the bride of his eldest son, and with this in view had gone to the expense of having her educated at Petrograd. Hence the surprise of royalty when she accepted the proposal of the future ruler of Italy.

Years Strengthen Love.

Victor Emmanuel and the princess were married in Naples. It was with some trepidation that the latter went to Rome to make her debut at the Quirinal. She knew that every one, including the king and queen and suite at court, would be eager to note how a modest Montenegrin girl would conduct herself at the brilliant court of Rome. Crown Princess Elena won them to her immediately by her beauty and unaffected manner. Nature and outdoor life meant more to her than rich palaces and costly jewels.

So began the married life of Victor Emmanuel and his consort. They are no less sweethearts today than when they first heeded the call of love. Both are devotedly fond of their children.

The king is a camera fiend and in times less strenuous than these may be seen walking in his gardens at Rome or at one of his country estates, carrying a camera in one hand and leading one of his children with the other. He spends a great deal of his time posing them into attractive groups. He especially likes to photograph them when riding their ponies.

One day he was found in wild excitement in the park of the royal palace at Roc-conigli. For a moment the queen, who was watching the king and the children from a distance, was at a loss to know what had happened. When she came up she found that the king was merely elated over his success in making an attractive picture of Prince Humbert leading a pony belonging to Baby Jolando.

Another favorite pastime of Italy's ruler is to teach his children to mount and ride. Long before they were able to manage the reins he put them into a wicker basket and strapped them into the seat while he led the pony and the young charges around the park.

Favors Military Training.

The king began his military training on reaching his teens. He was educated under Colonel Oslo, who taught him the highest forms of strategy. After a year's service like other Italians of rank he was given command of a regiment and rose rapidly. Then he went aboard a man-o'-war and got the same broad experience.

Victor Emmanuel was a weakling, so to speak, until committed to the charge of such a strict disciplinarian as Colonel Oslo, and he is of the opinion that such a change from the nursery will be of benefit to 10-year-old Prince of Piedmont, the crown prince and Italy's future king. A year ago the prince was handed over to the guardianship of a rough and ready seaman, Frigate Captain Donaldi, to be "hardened."

He has his own suite in the Quirinal and his nurses have been dispensed with. Governesses continue to teach him foreign languages. The choice of a naval tutor-guardian is taken to mean that the heir to the throne desires to become a sailor rather than a soldier. He would be the first Italian monarch to adopt the sea.

King Is Fearless Reformer.

Crown Prince Umberto is uncommonly intelligent, but willful and headstrong. His royal parents do their best to keep their children unspoiled, but Umberto is the pet of the family.

When King Victor Emmanuel took the throne he made many reforms in his government, especially of the military branch. He knew that some regiments were inefficient and lax, and accordingly he placed the blame on the officers. His way of correcting these faults was to visit the regiments unawares, and on finding a laxity in regard to rules disciplining the officers severely.

Like the king, Queen Elena is idolized by her people. She is a mother first and a queen last, and she has always seemed willing to forget her own interests when her subjects' welfare is threatened.

Often has Queen Elena gone out among the sick and suffering of Italy to administer comfort and aid—sometimes at the risk of her own life. The most memorable incident of this character occurred at the time of the Messina earthquake. As soon as she learned that the king was hurrying southward to his people she made ready to accompany him.

King Victor Emmanuel tried in vain to persuade her to remain behind. He argued that the sight might be too terrible for her to witness. "There is nothing in the world so terrible for me to see so far as my people are concerned," was her reply.

So she went to the stricken district where she was so impatient to assist that she even gave a hand to clearing away debris. It was while engaged in this difficult and dangerous work that she suffered an injured arm, which has bothered her since. At the time she paid little or no attention to the wound, assisting the Red Cross to care for hundreds of unfortunates, many of them lifeless.

Queen Given Decoration.

It was not with an aim to being commended that Queen Elena undertook this hardship. She was surprised, indeed, when she was given the Legion of Honor by M. Barrere, who represented the Republic of France in Italy. He explained that if any woman had the right to enjoy such a distinction it was Queen Elena. She has often shown the same heroism and patriotism when Naples and the surrounding country have been threatened by earthquakes or cholera.

In times of peace and prosperity Queen Elena has helped the women and children of her country in a great many ways. She has founded creches where working mothers may leave their children while toiling, and where they may be sure of good food and attention. An investigation of the hospitals of Rome and Naples convinced Queen Elena that they were overcrowded and not segregated as they should be. She has spent no small part of her private fortune establishing hospitals for women and children.

She was the first woman to found kindergartens in Italy, and when Dr. Maria Montessori commenced her experiments among the children of the tenement districts in Rome Queen Elena gave her hearty support and co-operation.

In Less Strenuous Times Than These the Royal Family Often Went Riding.

Militarism of Germany Is Explained and Defended By General Bernhardi, Famous Author and Soldier

By Special Permission of Kaiser Wilhelm, Gen. von Bernhardi Sets Forth Argument to Prove What a Potent Factor German Kind of Militarism Would Be in Development of Mind and Body of Any Nation—Gives German Opinion of Reasons Why France, Russia, England and Belgium Are Fighting Against Teutons.

By FRIEDRICH VON BERNHARDI
(General of Cavalry)

Russia and France have forced the war upon us under the most terrible circumstances that had to protect criminal Serbia against the reprisal demands of Austria-Hungary, which, in view of the Serbian policy of murder, were justified in every respect. England entered into the war ostensibly in order to protect neutral Belgium against German violation although England through its military agreements with that country had long before violated the spirit of Belgium's neutrality and although Belgium herself had silently joined the war agreement directed against Germany.

Today there is no room for war are no longer taken seriously by our enemies themselves.

The English press has quite frankly declared—certainly not without governmental sanction—that the violation of Belgian neutrality was only the ostensible pretext for England's declaration of war that England even in absence of this alleged event, under any circumstances would have participated in the war against Germany.

In France no secret is made of the fact that for years preparations had been made for this war and that the first opportunity was seized to draw the sword. In Fuss a, finally it's quite frankly admitted that the crushing of Austria and the conquest of Constantinople were the real objects of this war, and carefully prepared war.

In that empire of the knot little attention is paid to the opinion of the population which is on a low level of culture. The armies are led or driven in a battle with out knowing for what they are fighting, and why they must die in hundreds of thousands. Like the masses of the population they come in lack, on the whole, an understanding of political aims that are connoted solely by instinct.

In England and France on the other hand only one word is needed to stir up the "antics" of the masses in order to justify the war of aggression and to begin the war in popular favor. Having opposed as an argument for war the protection of Serbia and Belgium as a national violation but not as a violation of universal conscription and learned to regard military service as a natural duty.

Then when in the beginning of the year King Wilhelm called a strengthening of the army and a reorganization of its antiquated institutions, a theoretically limited representation of the people's will in the representation of the army, its voice against universal conscription but against its materialization in the modern army. But still opposition reigned when the Prussian people's army in 1861 against Denmark and in 1866 against Austria showed how correctly King Wilhelm had judged that much concerned military men in the rapid rise of the high school of an enlightened national consciousness not only for the army but for the whole German people.

When the young, more trained in the army rating, will life after their service is over, they take with them a fund of moral strength, increased efficiency, and deeply rooted in the ideas and in the philosophy of life of the entire German nation. It has been deepened and strengthened by the realization that Germany situated in the center of Europe, and on almost all sides by antagonistic nations, and that her very existence is threatened if she is not able to effectively defend her self.

Our enemies are quick with the ready.

German militarism enslaves the nation and makes it the most ambitious government which through its aims of conquest and world domination menaces all neighboring countries where the influence of force can be shown in 1868 and 1870. This militarism is an enemy of all culture which can flourish only in a free nation. The fact that all recent wars are absolutely barbaric is proved by their present warfare on land and at sea. From the voice of this barbarism the world must be saved. It must be prevented from being a strong, well armed nation in order that the onward step of civilization be no longer retarded by this brutal nation.

It is a great pity that the blessings of universal peace be not shared by all nations.

To attain this noble end—to argue our enemies—it is well worth while that the mass of civilization, real, brave, bears witness and sacrifices themselves upon its altar. To attain this end the English and the French allied themselves with the Russians to fight the English and the Belgians, New Zealanders, negroes and Negroes in order to definitely subdue Germany which formerly was called the land of the thinkers and the soul, which is in reality a land of warlike and slavish barbarians.

That is the publicly professed opinion of our opponents, as it is now openly manifested in all papers, news, and at all meetings that what they are endeavoring to make the people of the United States and all the rest of the world believe. THE TRUTH OF THE SITUATION.

Now what is the truth of the situation? Universal conscription was introduced in Prussia in an hour of need. When in the beginning of the last century Napoleon had subdued all Germany, and destroyed more than 10 million inhabitants, Schleswig-Holstein creates the army through general conscription. The old glory of Prussia of the seven years' war and the battles against the Foreign Oppressor combined to make the new institution popular from the outset. It made it possible for little Prussia of 1,000,000 men to put the field when the hour of liberation struck and together with its ally to vanquish the powerful Cossacks.

Nowhere has come nobody thought of giving up the blissful institution upon which rested Prussia's newly acquired power and position. No one dared to sacrifice the duty of soldier to sacrifice in the hour of danger all earthly goods and the last drop of blood for the common welfare. Thus the nobility, the middle class, and universal conscription and learned to regard military service as a natural duty.

Then when in the beginning of the year King Wilhelm called a strengthening of the army and a reorganization of its antiquated institutions, a theoretically limited representation of the people's will in the representation of the army, its voice against universal conscription but against its materialization in the modern army. But still opposition reigned when the Prussian people's army in 1861 against Denmark and in 1866 against Austria showed how correctly King Wilhelm had judged that much concerned military men in the rapid rise of the high school of an enlightened national consciousness not only for the army but for the whole German people.

When the young, more trained in the army rating, will life after their service is over, they take with them a fund of moral strength, increased efficiency, and deeply rooted in the ideas and in the philosophy of life of the entire German nation. It has been deepened and strengthened by the realization that Germany situated in the center of Europe, and on almost all sides by antagonistic nations, and that her very existence is threatened if she is not able to effectively defend her self.

This possibility however this unusual rising of a nation of 65,000,000 to death defying willingness to sacrifice and flaming enthusiasm was created primarily by the much concerned military men that had been in the high school of an enlightened national consciousness not only for the army but for the whole German people.

Where the young, more trained in the army rating, will life after their service is over, they take with them a fund of moral strength, increased efficiency, and deeply rooted in the ideas and in the philosophy of life of the entire German nation. That is the chief repeated reproach of our enemies with it's lack of proof to justify the war they criminally started.

However they also the proof and the undeniable facts prove the contrary.

Then when in the beginning of the year King Wilhelm called a strengthening of the army and a reorganization of its antiquated institutions, a theoretically limited representation of the people's will in the representation of the army, its voice against universal conscription but against its materialization in the modern army. Has NOT RETARDED CIVILIZATION.

This view however has by no means exerted a retarding and deplorable effect upon civilization. On the contrary it has produced many men and women who have raised in our land a submissive, blindly obedient soldiery drilled into deathless obedience. Exactly the contrary has always been the case. The school of the army has been for our nation physically as well as mentally and morally a building factor of our culture.

For the physical development of our youth the military service with its many sided demands upon all mental and physical qualities has been an enormous advantage of effect much more so than could have been achieved by devoting to sports.

At the same time characters were steeled through the iron discipline and self control and through the extreme exertion of all powers which have been domanded from each individual. Then, too there took place in the army an equalization of all social differences. Men of the highest class as well as the lowest, soldiers as well as the plain toil of the masses, and all learn to feel themselves members of one great entity in which equals and unequal are equally divided.

The strict discipline that is demanded throughout however is by no means based upon slavish submission, but rather upon the organization of thinking men. Carefully the recruits are educated to the recognition of their necessity and importance in the organization of superiors and subordinates. There has always existed in spite of all outward form a comradeship rooted on the one side in good will and on the other in confidence.

Certainly absolute obedience is demanded in the German army but it is not the same as absolute slavery. It is done in order to develop independence particularly so since the modern weapons have made necessary a lighter and open form of organization. The immediate influence of the superiors upon the subordinates. With the utmost care each individual is educated to the realization of his duty toward his superiors as well as to the understanding of his particular tasks the sharpshooter or the patrol rider the artilleryman etc. are taught to act independently and are trained that each individual. If his superior is killed can step into the latter's place and take the leadership of the group. This comrade ship of course is specific orders so that he is proud to be equal to these tasks and finds the same obedience and discipline as his superior who is commanded by the one whose place he took.

TWO FACTORS MUST WORK TOGETHER.

Two factors however must work together to achieve this result of independence—the mental capacity and ability and the moral strength which makes it possible to fulfill with contempt of death that which is in the highest of difficult situations and in the greatest dangers. Thus it is obedience upon which rests the inner contact of the German army but upon the personal man himself. The higher the dependence of all individuals rests its higher efficiency which is not equalled by any other army.

It is interesting to note that such achievements in our armies are carried out in their struggle against a numerically many times superior enemy such as fight as our entire nation carrying out many acts of daring to the colors. Each individual German ready to sacrifice himself with all that is his for the fatherland at the moment of danger all earthly goods and the last drop of blood for the common welfare. Thus the nobility, the middle class, and universal conscription and learned to regard military service as a natural duty.

Has ELEVATED WHOLE NATION.

German militarism everywhere condemned and repudiated as a curse menaced thus his protégé the views of our enemies holding standing—the German nation's greatest propagator of Kultur is richly rewarded. Great results that can be achieved by him elevated a whole nation mentally and morally has educated us to give up all forms of vice in life.

thought which also has been the guiding motive of the French policy. Russia on the other hand has carried on a continuous aggressive expansion policy in the Far East to acquire there free access to the sea with free ports and in the near Orient in order to realize the century old dream of the conquest of Constantinople and the domination of the Balkan peninsula.

Here Austria stood in her effusively way for the expansion of her dominions upon the destruction of that country and the crushing of Austria's ally Germany. In this direction the French and Russian alliance during the years past witnessed of tremendous armaments and war preparations which both countries carried through at the expense of their neighbors and their enemies.

It is not German militarism but French and Russian militarism grew into a European menace because with the same aggressive intentions they carried preparations to the extreme. In France that became evident through the reintroduction of the conscription law. It also evidenced itself in the fact that in that country the military budget per capita amounts to $700 while in Germany it is only $40. In Russia on the other hand the same tendency showed itself in the creation of more and more army corps in the recruitment of foreign troops in Poland and in the proposed building up of strategic railroads against the Austro German frontier.

GERMANY ALWAYS ON THE DEFENSIVE.

Germany always found herself on the defensive against these gigantic efforts on the part of the aggressors shown by the fact alone that even under the best military budget not all able bodied men could be drawn while in Prussia the number of carry arms were called to the colors and Russia maintained an army in peace which by far outnumbered all armies of Europe. The service was exactly that which our enemies now maliciously assert of Germany a training of the people in the defense which can never result in independent conscious achievement in war as the brainless Russo-Japanese war in the Russo-Japanese war, the Spanish-American war.

Despite the threatening aspect of the tremendous Franco-Russian power of Prussia and Russia, it had hardly resulted from them if England had not joined the war at the head of the two continental empires thus encircling the British Isles. It also evidenced Germany's fear. Albeit with the sea powerful England had felt sure of the victory. The English fleet was welcomed and made war in this way. The English and slender and delicate interpretation of German militarism was hung over the heads of the neutrals as a deceiving cloak to fool also the neutrals.

GERMANY'S STRENGTH ENRAGED ENGLAND.

Not so with England. Germany in its rise to power sought to outstrip the European continental countries. The equilibrium of these countries remained to the traditional policy of England seemed unbroken. This was not the case. Such a power was in the eyes of every Englishman a crime against the sacred rights of man.

So Germany's Germanic character developed more powerfully from day to day and threatened to become a really menace to British sea power. The English fleet was used to gather in the riches of the world without labor and contention. On top of all England may have been created which is true, it is strong enough to defeat the British fleet in an open sea battle.

The Franco-Russian militarism developed to the very extreme round a welcome at the British Isles.

In British navalism there really less violence to the world in quite a different way than in the development of the military power of the German Empire. That is the reason why England which for centuries had been used to gather in the riches of the world without labor and contention, now those of our opponents England and France had been used to gather in the riches of the world without labor and contention. On top of all England may have been created which is true, it is strong enough to defeat the British fleet in an open sea battle.

Grahame-White's Warning to London Come True.

Four Years Ago the Noted Aviator, Now an Officer of the British Air Corps, Censured His Country's "Official Apathy" and Forecast the Aerial Menace That Has Now Become a Tragic Fact

WHEN German air-ships flew over London recently, dropping ninety bombs and killing a number of people, the war office no doubt recalled the aerial menace warning of Claude Grahame-White, spoken in 1911. The well-known aviator, who is now an officer of England's air corps, said at that time:

"Weight-lifting machines of modern construction could leave foreign soil tomorrow, could make their way by air until they hovered over London, could drop explosives, or incendiary bombs, upon the streets and buildings of the city, and could fly back again to their starting point without once having need to descend."

Grahame-White was censuring what he termed the "official apathy" of England. He was pleading for more aeroplanes with which to combat the attack of an enemy—in the event that such an attack should ever come.

"Why are other countries devoting time and money unstintingly to strengthening their air corps, increasing the skill of their

Germany to raid the realm of King George V. with seeming impunity?

The answer to this question may be found in another declaration made by Grahame-White four years ago.

"There is one absolutely vital factor in an efficient military air corps that no money in the world could buy. That factor is represented by the priceless experience which France and Germany have acquired, not in the mere spending of money but by assiduous experimenting in all practical forms of aerial work. We in England are at least a year behind these countries in the development of the war aeroplane; and this year is represented also by extraordinary pioneer work."

"During this wonderful year of progress other countries have learned lessons that—even if we bought today an air fleet numerically equal to theirs—would enable them to be infinitely our superiors in the performance of all aerial operations."

An aerial attack on London has been the daily nightmare of the English people since the war began.

Almost every week since Dec. 9 there have been raids and rumors of raids on England. A summary of these will give airmen and perfecting their aerial organization? And why is it that in England sums which can only be described as paltry are set aside for war aeroplanes and men, and that permeating the official attitude toward this new 'arm' there is indifference?

We have acquired ten military aeroplanes, at least two of which are obsolete, and we have no plane at all as regards buying any more. We have two or three officers as expert airmen in connection with the air battalion; and there is an intention, I believe, to train a few more during the summer."

Did England shake off her apathy following this warning? To a certain extent, yes. Where she had ten military aeroplanes in 1911, she had 200 shortly after the beginning of hostilities with Germany. Also she had seven military dirigibles. Germany, the aerial activities of which concern England the most, had between 450 and 500 military aeroplanes and twenty-one dirigibles.

You may say that these figures do not compare so very unfavorably for England, inasmuch as a defending party must always hold an advantage over the attacking party. Why, then, is it possible for

Will This?

AERIAL machines in future will not be employed in units, but in large squadrons. Many people still think of the aeroplane, even for military purposes, as a machine to be used in twos and threes. But France, Germany and Russia have ceased to make this mistake. They are laying their plans for the employment of war machines, not in fifties, or even in hundreds, but in thousands.

Is Germany secretly building enough airships to attack England in fifties, in hundreds, in thousands? If so, will England be prepared to meet the attack? It might be well for her to heed the warning now four years old.

IS THERE NEED FOR A PUBLIC DEFENDER?

BY CAMPBELL ? MACCULLOCH

DR. J. H. STOLPER
FIRST PUBLIC DEFENDER OF THE STATE OF OKLAHOMA.

THERE is a concerted movement to introduce in the Legislature of New York and certain other States a measure that shall provide for the creation of the office of Public Defender in each and every county of the State. This official is to be paid by the State, or some subdivision thereof, and shall occupy himself with the defence of persons accused of violation of the Penal Code. His official duties shall exactly parallel the duties of the public prosecutor or District Attorney, and he shall be as diligent in defending the accused as the prosecutor is in prosecuting him. The situation is as though the vox populi should declare to its legislative representatives:

"You have engaged a talented man, equipped him with the power and dignity of a public office, conferred upon him the moral support of the community, have placed the communal treasury at his disposal and have set him to prosecute in behalf of the State each individual charged with the commission of a crime. In the interests of justice it is necessary that you should be as jealous for the welfare and safety of the individual as you are for the welfare and safety of the community itself, for the community is but the sum total of the individuals composing it. Hence it will be necessary that you engage a similarly talented man, equip him with the same powers and resources and set him to the defence of the individual under accusation."

In a nutshell, there is the situation at present as it is manifested in the workings of the public consciousness, and it would seem that there could be no opposition to such a plain case for the impartiality of justice. Yet there is opposition.

In principle all men are equal before the law. In practice very little actual equality is apparent, as any practising lawyer will be glad to affirm. It has been argued that the Fourteenth Amendment was designed to further enhance the equality of mankind before the law, and it does so act—in theory, or when ideal conditions are apparent; but there are vital differences in conditions, and these become more glaring as they are examined in the light of reason—not custom or legal practice. A single example comes to mind.

In the first week of April a missing witness in a most interesting criminal case was found and arrested, charged with perjury. He was locked in a police station. Now, the law provides that no man may be detained under arrest without specific charge for more than twenty-four hours prior to a hearing before a magistrate. Yet in this particular case considerably more time elapsed before this particular prisoner was brought to a preliminary hearing, and in order that the technical provisions of the law might be complied with he was removed from the first police station to another in another precinct before the expiration of the first twenty-four hours. Later on he was duly arraigned before a magistrate and committed for trial, to be later indicted by the Grand Jury. Had this man possessed resources in adequate amount a lawyer would have had him arraigned in court on a writ of habeas corpus and his rights would have been guarded, but he had no such resources.

Let us look at two parallel cases, aptly illustrative of the law's impartiality.

John Burns, a laborer, is arrested charged with homicide. Accidentally, he fired a dynamite blast without taking adequate precautions for the safety of human life, and as a result an infant in a perambulator was killed. He is indicted and locked up awaiting trial, which will probably occur some weeks hence. Burns' worldly possessions consist of a wife, three children, the clothes he stands up in and four dollars and sixty cents in cash. As he is unable to engage counsel the Court appoints to his defence "a gentleman of the bar" who is to serve without remuneration, thus gaining valuable experience. The prosecuting attorney, however, is not in need of gaining experience. He is a thoroughly experienced official—which is one of the chief reasons he occupies the position. He has any number of assistants, legal machinery and the practically unlimited resources of the county treasury. For Burns' prosecution he can send anywhere for expert witnesses. If Burns or his attorney want to send a postal card the former will probably have to borrow the penny or the latter will have to donate it. Let us leave Burns for the moment—in his cell.

William Jones-Smith, the youthful son of the Hon. William K. Jones-Smith, millionaire lumber man and ship owner and formerly a United States Senator, is arrested and charged with homicide. While driving his motor car he has run over a perambulator containing an infant and killed it. Young Jones-Smith is arraigned before a magistrate and committed for trial. An hour after his arrest he has been admitted to bail; after his commitment he has left the court with his father. The best lawyers that money can procure are engaged. Every trick and technicality is prepared in advance. Witnesses are searched for and well paid to remain where they can be found when needed—or the reverse. In fact the whole structure of defence is erected as carefully as talent and money may do it. Opposed to the prosecuting attorney is as great if not greater talent, as great resources for investigation and inquiry, as good if not better assistants and advisers. Compare these two cases. Are John Burns and William Jones-Smith equal before the law?

It may be argued that the lack of equality is not the fault of the law but the individual coming under the law. If John Burns had made the most of his opportunities he might have had at his command the resources of the Hon. W. K. Jones-Smith, and so on, with more fallacious argumentative piffle. The plain facts are that under our constitution the law sets out to administer impartial justice. It recognises that impartiality is the single possible application of justice in a democracy, and then it proceeds to erect a structure so partial that Simon pure justice is practically impossible under it until the individual accused shall have reached the point of power and influence of the State itself.

I do not claim these views as my exclusive property. They are only the logical outcome of experience, inquiries and experiments by men and some communities throughout the land. This exposition is the indictment, if you will, of an existing order of things—not of individuals. I am aware that by some it will be advanced that the demand for a public defender is but the socialistic doctrine of free justice in another guise. It may be that, or it may be something more essentially close to human affairs.

Readers of this publication may recall the case of Andrew Toth, the Pennsylvania steel worker of Polish extraction and birth, discovered in prison paying years of penalty for a crime he had not committed. He was released, and the most that could be done for him was to send him back to his relatives in Europe, a victim of what we call our free institutions. It has been long argued better that twenty guilty should escape rather than one innocent be punished. That doctrine is not wholly in line with impartial administration of justice. Far better would it be that no guilty should escape and no innocent suffer, and the very presence of one such case—brought to light—shows the need for society to take adequate precautions against a similar occurrence. In North Carolina some few years ago a negro girl was sentenced to prison for a misdemeanor. The term was short. Thirteen years after this girl was discovered still in prison. Her commitment papers had been misplaced or entangled with some others.

During 1913 the county of Los Angeles in adopting a new charter provided for the office of Public Defender. In January of last year such an official was appointed. His office was a duplicate in most respects of that of the public prosecutor. The results accomplished have been of a character most satisfactory.

Los Angeles has found itself applying a higher brand of justice than it believed possible.

At first it was feared the Public Defender would be an obstructionist to proper prosecution. J. D. Fredericks, the District Attorney of Los Angeles county, has written Walton J. Wood, the Public Defender, of the same county, as follows:

"When the office of Public Defender was first discussed I am free to say the idea did not appeal to me. * * * It seemed illogical in that the public was employing an officer to prosecute only meritorious cases, and it was his duty to dismiss or fail to prosecute those he did not feel worthy of prosecution. * * * I believe, under the circumstances, your position gives you a better opportunity to perform that duty [safeguarding the rights of the defendant] than the prosecutor has."

In a letter to the writer Mr. Wood says:

"So far as I know every man accused of crime in the Superior Court has called for the services of the Public Defender on arraignment excepting those able to employ their own attorneys. This has been done in spite of the fact that the Court has given them the choice of our services or of having some other attorney appointed for them. * * * In the civil department we have over one hundred cases a week presented to us. * * * We find there is a great need for an attorney for poor people who feel they cannot afford redress through any other means, or in very truth find the expenses of litigation, except through our office, make the remedy cost more than the result."

The first Public Defender in the United States was Dr. J. H. Stolper, of Muskogee, Okla. Under the inciting influence of Miss Kate Barnard, State Commissioner of Charities and Correction, the Oklahoma Legislature in 1911 passed a measure providing for such an officer after a bitter fight. She immediately appointed Dr. Stolper to the office, and though his work has been admittedly meritorious, particularly in the matter of bringing to justice offenders against the Indians, the affected interests have succeeded in the Legislature in stripping the office until it is nothing but a name. Miss Barnard, in a letter to the writer, says:

"The fourth Legislature introduced two bills abolishing the office of Public Defender. Both of them failed. Because I would not agree to appoint a man named by the grafters the Legislature refused to appropriate for my department.

At this time my department had over one thousand cases pending in the probate courts to be the heat of contest and the desire for victory sometimes forgets that the function of a district attorney is largely judicial, and that he owes to the defendant as solemn a duty of fairness as he is bound to give to the State full measure of earnestness and fervor in the performance of his official obligations.

Again and again this court has commented upon the course of prosecutors in this regard, but instances of such conduct are all too common. We have no doubt that in the present case the prosecutor's demeanor and his improper questions deprived the defendant of that fair trial which ought to have been his under the law. For this reason he should not be subjected to the result of a verdict so induced."

That the legal profession of the State of New York at least is not wholly a unit in the belief that a public defender is needed is attested in the report of the Law Reform Committee of the New York State Bar Association handed in January 22 of this year. This report, signed by A. T. Clearwater, George A. Blauvelt, F. W. Clifford and Stewart F. Hancock, states:

"We are advised that an attempt will be made to induce the Legislature to create the office of Public Defender, the idea being to create an official or set of officials in each county whose duty it shall be to defend persons charged with crime, and who shall be paid for their services either from the State or county treasury. This is a fad which your committee has been asked to commend to the favorable consideration of the association, a request with which it declined to comply. From time immemorial it has been the practice of courts to select from the junior Bar gentlemen whose learning and ability have attracted the attention of the courts and to assign them to the duty of defending penniless persons charged with criminal offences. For generations the younger members of the profession have done this without thought of compensation, regarding it as one of the honorable duties which they owe the Court and the profession. The practice has worked admirably and we see no reason to change it."

In rebuttal many eminent lawyers hold to the opinion that a Public Defender is a necessity. Samuel Untermyer has given this as his unalterable opinion, and it is concurred in by a great number of members of the profession in all parts of the country.

In so far as New York is concerned, the city thereof has in its power the creation of such an office under an existing statute. Probably not one person in a hundred thousand knows of the existence of such a provision, and for the benefit of those who may care to investigate it, if they will turn to Section 280 of the Greater New York Charter as amended by Chapter 680 of the Laws of 1907, Volume 11 (Laws 1907), page 1556, they will find that the said law provides that:

"The Board of Estimate and Apportionment may appropriate from the city revenues the sum of $25,000 per annum for the uses and purposes of the Legal Aid Society," &c.

To sum up the situation as it now exists, the law is as bound to provide an adequate defence as it is to provide an adequate prosecution, on the simple basis that, while the rights and welfare of the community are above those of the individual, the status of the community can never rise higher than the status of the individuals composing it. The law, in the person of the policeman, is protective to the individual as well as to the community, and there is no adequate reason why the community should put a man in jeopardy of his life, rights or property than that an individual should. And with special reference to the statement of the Bar Association committee already quoted may be recalled the instance in the Kentucky court where stood the moonshiner charged with crime, and to whose defence the Court assigned a "junior gentleman of the Bar."

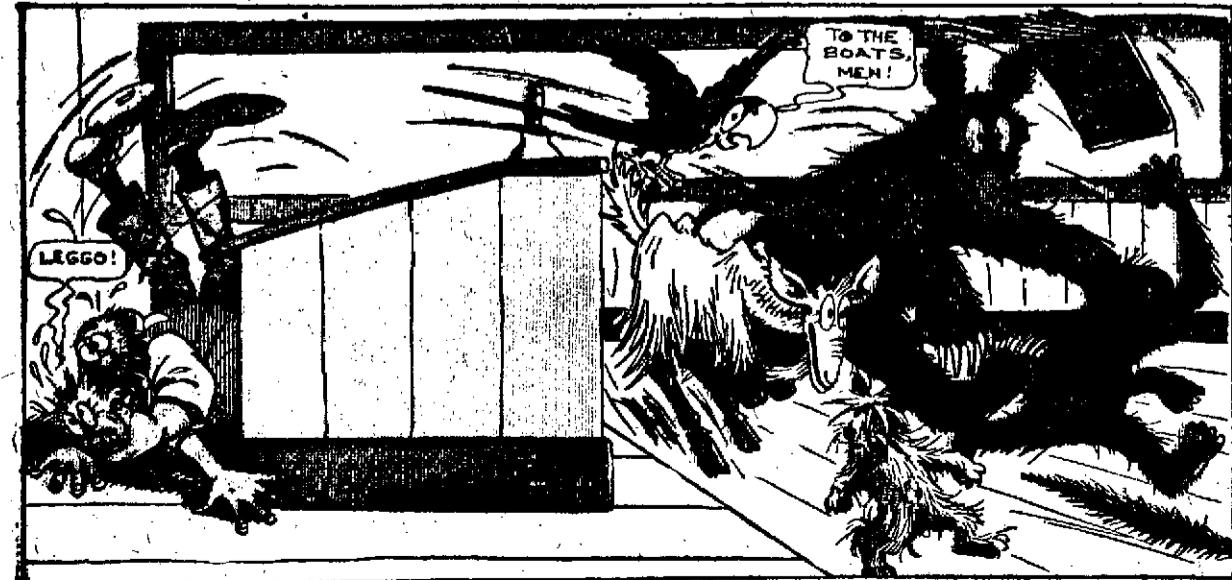

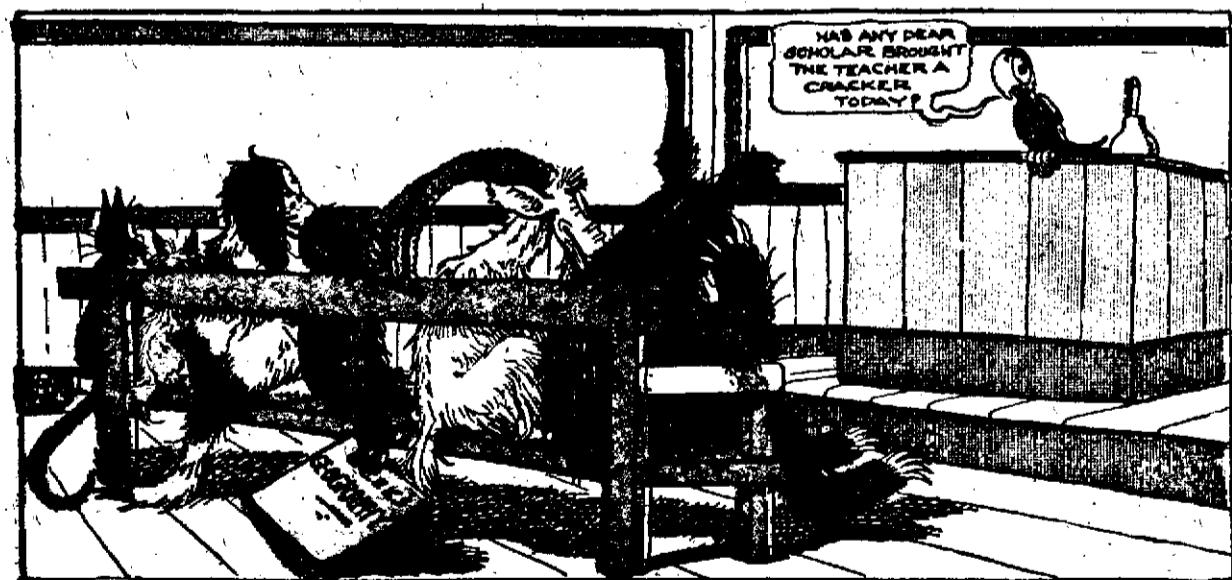

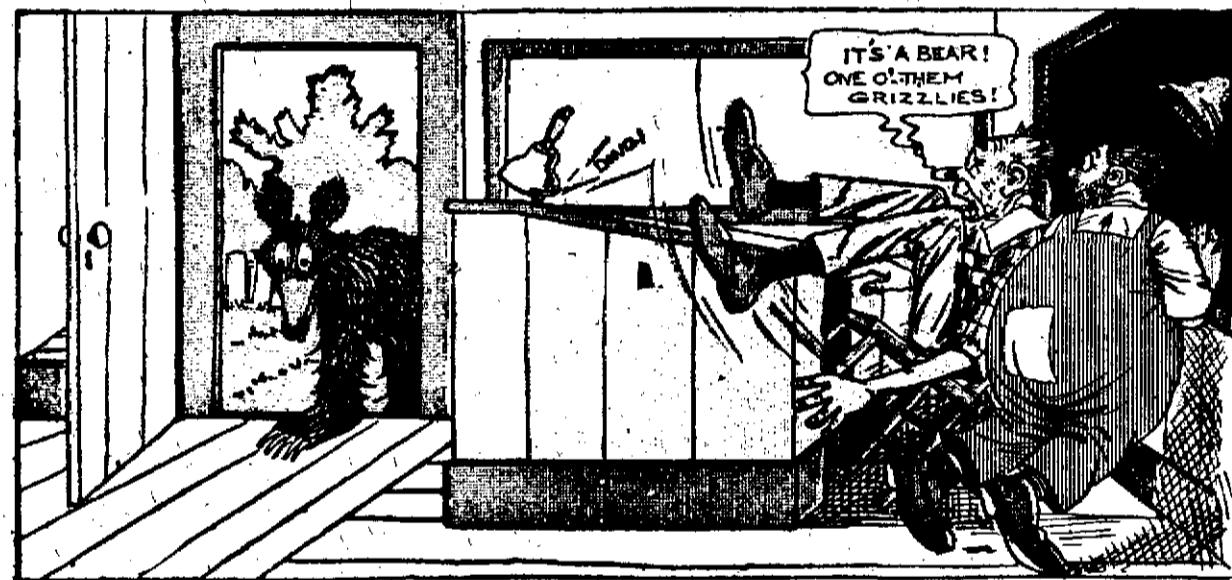

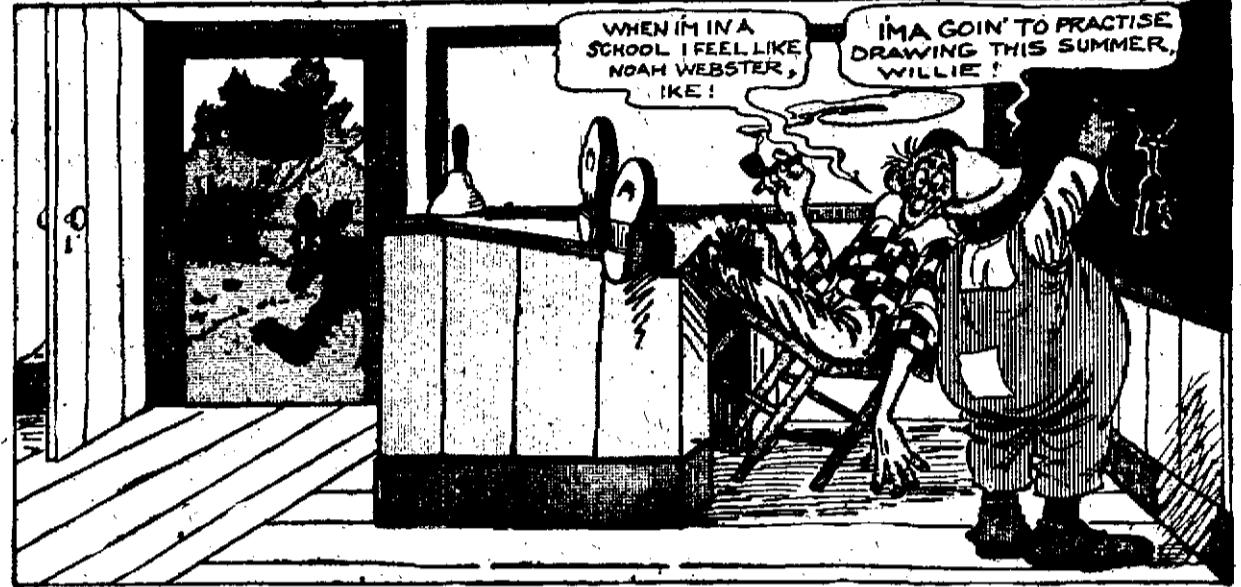

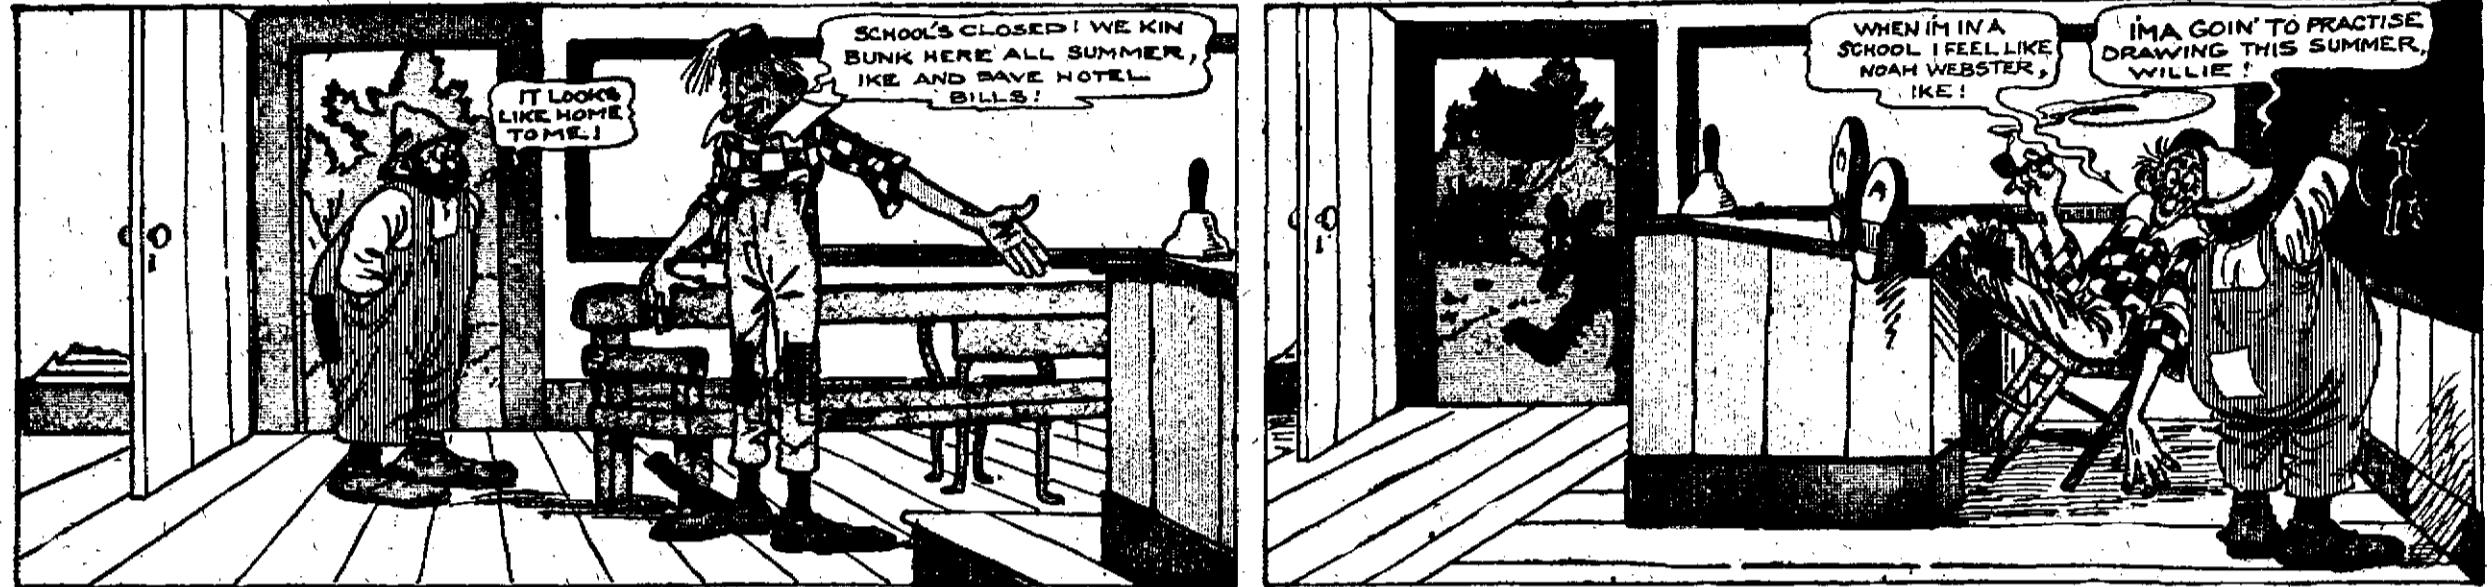

"Is that then my lawyer?" asked the prisoner.

"That is your counsel," replied the Court.

"Then I plead guilty," declared the prisoner.

Getting a Vacation for Mother

By DOROTHY DOLAN.

IF THERE is one question that presents itself to the housekeeper more than all others as the summer advances, it is how to get a vacation without upsetting the entire household. This question is fairly easy to solve for the housekeeper of means. She usually finds rest and escape from hot weather easy by taking a house in the country or going to a summer resort, preferably to the seaside.

For a Large Family.

Where the family is large and the amount to be spent on a summer outing is small the question is less easily solved. A simple and practical way is for the city woman to exchange houses with the woman in the country. By inquiring through friends and acquaintances or, perhaps better, by advertising in the newspapers she may find that the woman living in the country is equally anxious to spend a portion of the summer in the city, especially if it is cooled by lake breezes.

Their outing may be equally pleasurable if both women will try to get rest and recreation in new experiences. The country woman will find housekeeping in a convenient apartment or a small house play after ten months of hard work on the farm. The children no less than she may find plenty of recreation in the city parks, boating and playing outdoor games, and going to the theater.

Along with these amusements the tired mother will find rest and joy listening to plenty of good music in the parks and in the summer gardens. When she wants more serious recreation she can delve into art, science and history. She will find plenty of books on these subjects in the general and special libraries. Besides, many of our colleges and universities give summer courses on these subjects.

As for the city woman, living out of doors and getting at the heart of things should be the very best kind of recreation for her. How splendid to drink fresh milk from cows you have helped milk, and to eat the eggs which your chicks have laid.

Boon for City Women.

It will not take long for the city woman to appreciate all the sunshine and fresh air for the asking. How splendid to have infinite space and plenty of woods, to tramp across woods and meadows with nothing to disturb your peace of mind and body.

Just think how splendid to have enough garden to grow every variety of flowers and fresh vegetables you wish. The same amount of pleasure can be had from the company of frank, honest country people after meeting more complex and conventional women of the city. Should you not be fortunate in having some country family who wants to change country life for the city, go gypsying through the country.

Here is another popular way of spending a holiday. It was first made popular by several Englishwomen of noble blood. They grew tired of the elegance and conventionalities of court life and so they chose this simple way of passing their holiday. They hitched up an old gypsy cart to a strong easy jolting horse. Then they packed their children, provisions and dogs together. They had plenty of straw and covers for all. In this fashion they jolted days and days through small towns and country. Some of their American friends heard of their pastimes and tried it out with splendid results.

It has become so popular with us that some use a "house wagon." This is nothing more nor less than a flat roofed house on the wheels of an old truck. This is always provided with a fireless cooker, so the food can be kept cooking after it is given a start over a campfire.

Use Any Vehicle.

If you do not enjoy the idea of a wagon, you can use an old-fashioned vehicle with leather side curtains to keep out the sun and rain. You can carry the provisions in a large wicker basket strapped to the back of the carriage. You can carry plenty of cooked cold meat in the whole or made as sandwiches as you prefer. You should have many loaves of bread, canned vegetables, jars of jam and pickles, and coffee carried in a thermos bottle. If you are economical in your management, you can carry enough supplies for two weeks. When your provisions run short or fail or altogether, you can get fresh supplies at farmhouses or at the grocers and butchers.

Just think how splendid to eat your three meals a day out in the open, welcomed and kissed by the morning dew and by the warm rays of the mid-day sun. You will drive until you are tired and then you can rest on the grass protected by a large tree or under a large tent.

The children will enjoy their holiday as much as you do. They will not be worried by the ordinary routine of keeping themselves clean and they will go back to their homes fresh and happy. They will be sure to vote this the happiest summer they have ever had.

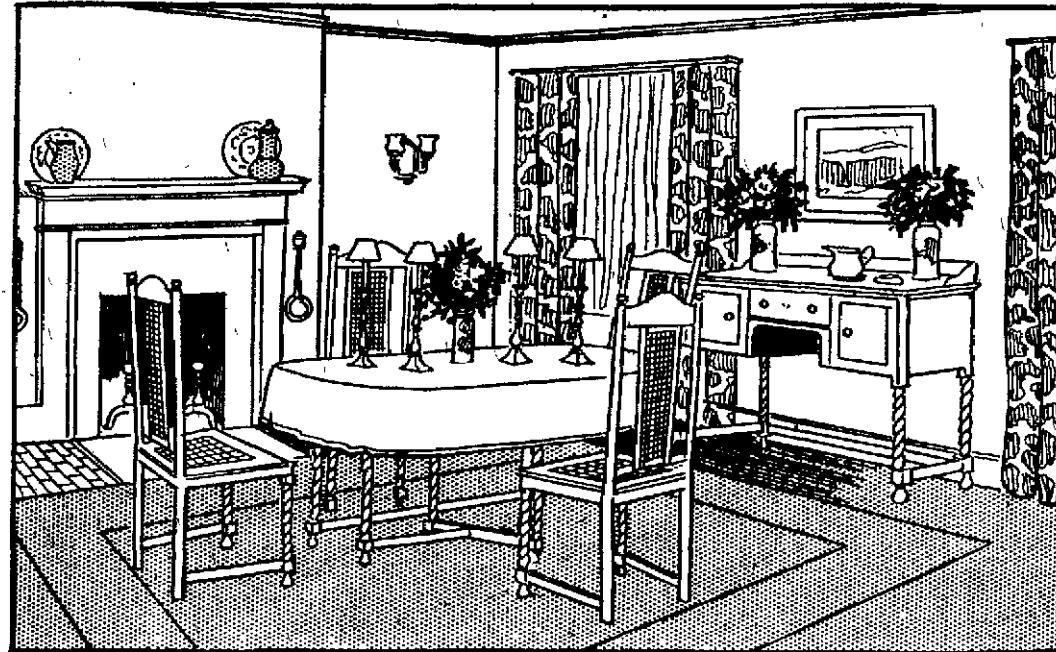

Scorched milk may be restored in flavor by standing it in a pan of cold water, to which a pinch of salt has been added.

Your standards should be higher than this. If you are fortunate enough to hold a place of influence and responsibility do not use it to make cliques. Use your position and influence for something better than for "pulling wires for yourself and your friends." Give every woman who comes under your control the same fair chance to win promotion and recognition and her just desserts.

If you have worked in a place for a long time and have learned the routine of your work and the standards of your office do not judge hastily nor condemn the efforts of some fellow worker who may be working against you. Whatever other principles you may forget or neglect, keep this idea of good teamwork ever before you. Bear in mind that men and women of rare tal-

Home Decoration and Furnishing

AT PRESENT the shops are showing some excellent reproductions of English dining-room furniture with a very soft brown finish. The lines are exceedingly good, being simple enough for the small country house or city apartment. The chairs may be ordered with or without the cane backs and seats. A blue and white color scheme with this set of furniture is delightful.

Have the walls tinted or papered a plain yellowish tan, the woodwork stained the brown of the furniture, blue and white tiles for the hearth, with a piece or two of old copper or pewter on the mantel shelf. Lacking these blue and white tiles, china plates or brass candlesticks would be fitting.

Hang an old English print over the sideboard or serving table; there are many excellent reproductions from which to choose, and for draperies over plain net curtains use a conventional design in blue and white.

The fabrics that are of linen or printed by the block process will wear like iron and will not fade; sometimes remnants are to be had at a great reduction or discontinued patterns, while perfectly good, are often greatly lowered in price. Watch for such bargains and the opportunities will certainly be forthcoming.

OWADAYS it is quite the thing to cultivate some one thing to do just a little better than some one else does. If you can dance, practice that art, and if impromptu sketching may be just what is needed, so remember the good ones you hear:

At an evening party where the guests were not well acquainted, the hostess did not have any especial feature, so she passed to each guest cards bearing various verselets, being careful to give to those she knew could do the stunts well. The first guest had this on her: Though riddles do our minds distress, We'd like two good ones now to guess.

And there were two good conundrums immediately forthcoming.

CONCERNING A WEDDING.

For years I have been reading your Sunday column. Having derived much benefit from same, I come to you with a budget of questions.

I am soon to be a bride; would it be proper, at a very simple home wedding, to have it at 6:30 p.m. with only immediate families, to do without music and also dispense with wearing gloves? Would it be proper not to have any attendants?

You may plan your wedding to suit yourself and your own ideas, as well as what seems to be the most convenient. You need have no attendants nor are gloves compulsory. I would have music, as it seems to be much easier to enter, and it takes the edge off and relieves any undue solemnity.

A harp or the piano will be sufficient.

CONCERNING A WEDDING.

"Tea in the garden" is apt to be found on many cards this season, and we are all endeavoring to spend all our waking hours, and some of us our sleeping ones, out in the open these days to make up for the unusually long, severe winter. But it was the clever little woman who supplies me with new ideas to suggest and give a garden shower for the bride who was to begin her married life in a suburban home. She waited until "they" were in the new house, and then called up about a dozen intimate friends, told her plan for each one to take a thrifty to have a good time, she is willing and even dares that other girls should have the same chance. She loves the things that most young girls do enjoy, dancing, games, winter and summer sports, and social amusements such as parties, and the theater.

However much she may enjoy dancing, she is willing to content herself talking through a dance and even the entire evening for her partner who does not dance. She finds an equal amount of pleasure in tennis, golf and swimming.

She has been trained or at least taught herself to make the best of every situation, whether the hardship is one of inconvenience or a great one. Even when it comes to finding herself in danger she keeps cool and steadies her nerves; she knows that this means she will be helpful to herself and others.</

A GREAT HIGH SCHOOLMayor Woodward has very properly characterized the proposed improvised additions should be discouraged by the city of Atlanta.

And the mayor is right!

The board of education acted wisely in refusing to build such an annex to the Crew satisfactory solution of the Commercial High completed and equipped a magnificent new courthouse at a cost of more than a million and a quarter dollars and this with but slight increase in the annual tax levied and without bonding the county for a penny.We believe that as the city represents four fifths or more of all county valuations, the county of Fulton should become interested in securing a great high school building for the use of both city and county, and which shall be the apex of the public school system of each. The county schools are now without high school facilities, and we believe the county will welcome an arrangement of this kind.This association will be hoped that both the city and the county authorities will be sufficiently impressed with the force of the suggestion that they unite in the construction of a great high school building, open alike to state and county, to start a movement which will be credit to both the city of Atlanta and the county of Fulton.The county has just constructed and equipped a magnificent new courthouse at a cost of more than a million and a quarter dollars, and without bonding the county to get it.The final payment on this new building will be made this year, leaving the county free to proceed now toward the erection of a great temple of education that will do as much for the children of the city and the county as has been done for the criminals and the litigants of both.By all means let this suggestion materialize!This is an idea worthy of development to the very fullest extent, and we hope it will strike a responsive keynote both in the council and in the county board!

FIGHTERS WITH A COME-BACK.

Whatever may be said of the Russian armies, they are proving that they are fighters with a come-back.Soon after a story of the capture of 300,000 of them—their retreat in wild disorder, they return to the combat reinforced, affording the enemy, if good fortune still be with him, an opportunity to capture other hundreds of thousands. They come back as regularly as they retreat.This is most annoying to a seemingly victorious enemy—when an army is beaten to its knees and will not "stay put." It is as if it had merely crouched for another Hom-mettled spring!The latest Austro-German claim is of the capture of 1,200,000 Russians up to forecast. In an interview in The Washington Post Mr. Charles N. Stewart, prominent business man of Chicago, says it is impossible for the most confirmed pessimist to view the future of America with anything but the utmost confidence and gratification:

"If the war continues, as it probably will, for a year longer at least, this country will experience the most prosperous period it ever has known. Our foreign trade undoubtedly will lag from what it was last year to twice the amount I believe. We shall get big prices for everything we have to sell, because Europe must have our products. Our wheat crop is up of wheat than last year, which is now the prediction of the department of agriculture. I look for wheat to reach $1 bushel abroad, which is not far from the price here, but the European nations at war will be glad to pay that much. With money plentiful as it will be, everybody who wants to work can find employment, and this makes prosperity."

Preachers of prosperity who have good texts for their business sermons will always have a national audience. They are doing good everywhere, and through enlightening interviews the people are coming to a better understanding of the war situation, which has its brighter business side.

A MEMORIAL WITH A MISSION.

The home mission spirit of the Ellen Wilson Memorial Fund for the Christian Education of Mountain Youth commands the movement as one to which all southerners, and especially all Georgians, should rally, though the movement is one which has attracted national consideration.

When a group of southern women met soon after the passing of the late Mrs. Woodrow Wilson to establish an appropriate memorial to her, the dominant thought was that the memorial take the practical form of benefiting the living. The various interests and benevolences of Mrs. Wilson were discussed, and the one which most touched the women who met to discuss the memorial was her loving and practical interest in the mountain people of the central south. For years Mrs. Wilson had given scholarships in mountain schools, had contributed to their establishment, and one of her first touches toward creating an atmosphere of her own in the white house was to adorn a room with furniture, hangings and ornaments made by the native mountain people.

Inspired by her interest in this direction, the committee decided to establish the memorial in the nature of fund to be used in scholarships through which deserving boys and girls in the mountain schools might be enabled to go to the schools already built for them. One arose, and asked, sarcastically: "Will our youthful friend be kind enough to state upon what basis of experience he ventures to take issue so directly with the previous speakers?"

The young man blushed but summoning courage, replied: "With pleasure sir! I base my conclusions upon 1,097 operations of this character, 98 per cent of which have been completely successful." It was William J. Mayo's introduction to medical fame—and it ended the discussion.

Finally, a smooth-faced young man arose modestly in the rear and differently asserted a doctrine different from all the other doctors that had been set forth.

The deans of the profession smiled at each other. One arose, and asked, sarcastically: "Will our youthful friend be kind enough to state upon what basis of experience he ventures to take issue so directly with the previous speakers?"

Women's Influence on Legislation

The great Humboldt, when asked for aid in reorganizing the stricken kingdom of Prussia, seeking to rise from the wreck of the Napoleonic invasion, replied: "Whatever you would put in the state, you must first put into the schools." To which women would add, "and into the women's clubs."

As a legitimate part of its work, the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs is engaging earnestly in a campaign for compulsory education, permissive kindergartens, Smith-Lever appropriation, protection of holly and other important measures. It is expected that the forthcoming legislature will go on record as enacting suitable laws to supply the legal power needed for these great accomplishments. The unanimous endorsement of these measures by the more than 20,000 club women of Georgia will become an invincible power that will touch the legislative lever and turn it toward the protection of the child and the home.

Reports from all of the district meetings show that club women are studying matters of current public interest and trying to understand their causes and probable results. They can meet the arguments both for and against all debatable questions of public policy.

In no department of the complex structure of human society is there greater need for constant and efficient training than in this one of legislation.

Women cannot cajole legislation. Sending in petitions wet with tears, buttonholing representatives and pouring into their reluctant ears the facts relating to their crusade, and imploring interest and action as a favor are not effective. Our aims must be accomplished by reason and clear understanding of the conditions calling for improvement.

We shall succeed only as we, as a body, call into concerted action all our ingenuity, adroitness and persuasiveness, carefully educated and wisely directed.

It has been too much the custom to sign papers of all kinds without knowledge or purpose. Women should not dissipate their power and influence. Their earnest effort should be to use the right of petition intelligently. Legislators have been heard to claim that the letters received from women do not show an intelligent grasp of the conditions sought to be remedied, nor the effect of the proposed legislation. The legislative department of the federation has stimulated keener and more intelligent interest in laws governing our state, and has greatly increased the effectiveness of woman's influence in helping to form a just and righteous public opinion in all matters relating to city, state and national betterment.

As one club writes: "When club women realize that an interest in legislation is one form of patriotism they will be more eager to study it."

From the earliest times, women have ever shown the highest patriotism, and while we may not be so presumptuous as to claim to understand all the measures before our august legislature, when it comes to the bills we have worked for and endorsed, let us study and master them; know the progress we have made, and keep up with the early considerations and developments.

By arranging with a member of the legislature for a copy of the legislative journal, the progress of bills can be followed with fair accuracy.

Georgia has no compulsory school law, and the length of the school year has a wide range. Significant action has already been taken toward the passage of a permissive kindergarten bill. The Smith-Lever appropriation will come up for consideration and must be directed. The preservation of our Holly and the establishment of a state flower must be the result of legislation.

These important measures will be up for consideration before the legislature that meets June 22, and their passage is anxiously awaited by women who have worked faithfully for them for the good results they will bring to Georgia and because the Georgia federation indorsed them.

We can perhaps boast few Aspasia and Theodosias, but since the beginning woman has exerted an influence upon the government of organized society and today each club woman has her duty to perform.

National Reclamation Service

The wonderful work that is being done by the United States reclamation service is the subject of an interesting article from C. E. Blanck, who is in part:

"The accomplishments of national reclamation today are real and solid, and upon the achievements of the past, we may now see a prediction of even greater success. The year just closed finds the service, as a whole, entrenched in the confidence of the intelligent public, and endorsed by the soldiers and sailors of the country."

The growing esteem of the service now that it has weathered the period of trials and mistakes, is evidenced in all almost every community on the part of the states and communities that its activities may be extended more broadly and generally.

Recognition has come to all the efforts and the work done, and recognition must wait upon the federal government for construction."

The record of accomplishment has been dramatic and epochal. Cases in the desert, responding to the midas touch of irrigation, have risen like magic. Wastes of sand and sagebrush have vanished forever, and in their place new and populous communities have been established.

In little more than a decade the engineers' work in the digging of canals, the leveling of land, the draining and constructing dams has been stupendous. All this economic service of so great importance cannot be measured in dollars and cents, but it holds a measure of freedom and independence to those who desire to go back to the land. This pregnant sentence of Henry Grady's almost epitomizes the work of the service.

A citizen standing in the doorway of his home, contented on his threshold, his family gathered about his hearthstone, with the evening news, was a picture of happiness and sounds that are dearest—he shall save the republic when drum tap is futile and the barracks are deserted.

The nation's social welfare of the nation is involved in the conquest of reclamation and conservation.

Not Taking Advantage of Aid Through Department of Agriculture.

"An Unused Opportunity" was the significant title of the June issue of Mrs. Pennybacker's, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, article in the April number of the General Federation Magazine, says:

"The accomplishments of national reclamation today are real and solid, and upon the achievements of the past, we may now see a prediction of even greater success. MEETS WEDNESDAY
FOR 60-DAY SESSION*Much Legislation of State-Wide Interest Will Come Up for Consideration During This Term.*SLATON TO ASK ACTION
ON LEASING STATE ROAD*Governor Will Urge Lease or Sale of Mansion—Harris' Inauguration Set for Saturday.

The general assembly will be called to order Wednesday morning in the state house for its regular annual 60-day session. Already the legislators are beginning to gather in Atlanta from all sections of the state. The state house on Saturday was visited by a number of senators and representatives, who passed the time of day with friends on the hill.

The Kimball house is taking under its shelter its annual quota of headquarters for candidates, new counties and this, that and the other. The lobby Saturday night already had its groups of "favorite sons" discussing the destiny of the state.

Among those who are already in town are John T. Boileau, clerk of the house; Representative W. H. Burwell, of Hancock county, candidate for the speakership, and "Fritz" Jones, of Macon, who will be Governor Harris' private secretary. Governor-elect Harris is expected Monday.

Governor Harris' inauguration will take place next Saturday.

Clifford Walker, attorney general-elect, will be in town on Wednesday and will also assume his duties on Saturday.

Persons and Burwell Conscript.

The election of the heads of the two branches of the general assembly this year holds prospects of no great excitement.

Hon. G. Ogden Persons, of Forsyth, senator from the twenty-second district, has a clear field for the presidency of the senate.

Representative Burwell is opposed for the speakership of the house by Representative J. E. Sheppard, of Sumter county.

Political prognostications are giving the edge in the race to Mr. Burwell. Mr. Sheppard is being backed by the production leaders. Mr. Sheppard, it would seem, is handicapped by the fact that he was very late entering the race as well as by the fact that Mr. Burwell, as presiding officer of the last house, made a great many friends among the legislators by his fairness and judgment.

The W. & A. Lens.

It is regarded by many that the big question facing this year's general assembly will be the matter of getting the Western and Atlantic railroad property, in all its details, in proper shape for a release of the road in 1919 advantageously to the state. The splendid credit of the state rests upon this one issue, as perhaps upon no other.

There are, of course, many perplexities which legislators believe, should be straightened out as soon as possible. These include the matter of satisfying Chattanooga in the question of the Western and Atlantic terminals there, the matter of granting a charter to the North Georgia Mineral railroad, which would build a line into Atlanta for the Louisville and Nashville paralleling the Western and Atlantic; the plan proposed in Atlanta and many other important angles.

Slaton Urges Action.

Some of the most important matters which will be brought to the attention of the legislature may be gathered from recommendations which Governor Slaton will make in his farewells message to the general assembly.

Upon the question of the state-owned property, Governor Slaton will recommend that a commission be created to take immediate steps looking to the re-leasing of the Western and Atlantic. It is the opinion of Governor Slaton, however, that while there should be some members of the legislature upon this commission, the commission should be made up chiefly by appointment of members by the governor. The governor also thinks that such a commission should be given power to act in the matter of re-leasing the road, such action of course being subject to the approval of the majority of the legislature. Furthermore, this, Governor Slaton believes that the commission should be authorized to defer leasing beyond the expiration of the present lease, extending the present lease or even operating the road temporarily. If conditions are such as to make it appear unwise to make earlier disposition of the road.

When the North Georgia Mineral railroad applied to the secretary of state for a charter, it was upon the request of the governor that the application for the issuance of the charter until the legislature had had opportunity to pass on the question. In his message Governor Slaton will call this matter to the attention of the general assembly and will urge that it take whatever action it considers wise without delay.

Lease or Sell Mansion.

Regarding the governor's mansion in Atlanta, which is located almost in the heart of the business district of the city, Governor Slaton will advise that the legislature should take some definite step authorizing its lease or sale or other disposition. He will point out the location makes the property of such great value that for the state to keep it for its present purpose is nothing less than wasteful.

Another important measure with regard to the financial affairs of the state, which the message will recommend, will be the creation of an auditing department, not only as a business necessity, but as an act of economy.

The governor will urge strict economy in the making of appropriations,

Suicide of His Wife Tremendously Tragic
But a Beautiful End

Prof. Dana So Describes Death of Young Mrs. Dana. She Held It Was Dignified to Die of One's Own Will.

Cambridge, Mass., June 19.—In a statement tonight Edmund T. Dana, assistant professor at the University of Minnesota, described the suicide of his young wife by drowning at Nantucket Thursday, as a "tremendously tragic, but beautiful end."

"Mrs. Dana," her husband said, "had always held the stoical idea that it is more dignified to die of one's own will than to leave the hour and manner to circumstances. Personally, I am glad it was an act of my wife's own choice, though not a horrid accident, though it was a pathetic mistake that made her feel the world would be better without her."

Continuing, Mr. Dana explained that his wife's health became run down after the birth of her child.

"She believed she would never be able to take care of the baby properly," he said, "and would be a burden in his life again." Her artistic sense made her feel that "it should be perfect or not at all."

Mrs. Dana was the daughter of Henry Holliday, a wealthy steel manufacturer of Wales. Her husband is a grandson of Longfellow, the poet.

She "Done a Wilson" And Then Departed
In All Her Glory*Folks at Terminal Station and Capitol Came to Life With a Jolt When the "Oracle of Sennille Hatchet" Descended Upon Them.

With a dazzling array of semi-Oriental garb, turban, veil and pill, Miss Marie Lancastaire, the self-labeled "oracle" of Sennille Hatchet, Ga. (which is near Looville, a few miles out of Bremen), bewildest the eyes of a big crowd in the Terminal station when she strode to the center of the waiting room and declared herself.

Word also came to the American government that General Jose Maytorena, the Villa commander in Sonora, objected vigorously to the possible landing of American marines to rescue Americans in the Yaqui valley, indicating that he would regard such action as a hostile invasion. Inasmuch as Maytorena promised to send troops to the region to protect foreigners the American government, which had decided to land marines only if absolutely necessary, it is understood, will consider the incident closed with the arrival of the Maytorena troops.

New Angle to Problem.

The situation in the Yaqui valley was overshadowed, however, by the cabinet crisis at Vera Cruz, where a new angle to the entire Mexican problem was created almost overnight. The dissension in the Carranza cabinet, according to official reports, resulted from a newspaper attack by one of the cabinet members on some of his colleagues; but in many quarters here it was said that the cause of the long-standing and is the culmination of differences between Carranza and Obregon which began when the latter occupied Mexico City several weeks ago.

The fact that Obregon had telegraphed insisting on the retention of the four cabinet members, Luis Cabrera, Rafael Zurbano, Escudero Vardugo and Jesus Verita—the first two of whom were in Washington for a long time as representatives of Carranza, was generally viewed as an indication of Obregon's ascendancy to a position of political prestige in the constitutionalist movement.

She first called to train Master Charley Griffin, who astounded at the multi-colored attire of the priestess from Sennille Hatchet, called, instead, to Polkemont. W. H. Andrews, W. W. Andrews, headed through the crowd, that had gathered around "mademoiselle," and told him:

A "Scrupulous" Taxi Driver.

"Get me a taxi cab—one with a scrupulous driver. I am en route to the office of his excellency, the governor. I have a sacred message from the voters of Sennille Hatchet and Looville. I will honor him with these flowers. (She pulled a bunch of south Georgia roses from the folds of her varicolored dress.)

The taxi driver, who had been waiting outside, said: "I must have a scrupulous taxi."

To relieve the congestion of people about the Sennille Hatchet priestess explained that she was a professional minstrel and a devotee to the occult sciences. Polkemont Andrews called a cab. She preferred a horse conveyance when a taxi driven by a beetle-browed chauffeur who needed a shave, excited her suspicion.

To the governor's office she drove. "May I serve you?" asked the polite Major Perry, secretary to his excellency, and custodian of the outer office, whom all must encounter ere confronting the governor.

"Lead me to him," she commanded. "To whom?" the courteous Perry asked.

"His excellency. I bear a message from the voters of Sennille Hatchet and Looville."

The Bouquet Goes Astray.

With a creditable play of diplomacy, the secretary managed to explain that pressing affairs prohibited the governor from seeing visitors, and that her business would have to be transacted through him. The subsequent consultation resulted in the bestowal of the bouquet of south Georgia roses upon the polite secretary.

Later in the afternoon, as she returned to the Terminal station en route to Sennille Hatchet, Colleen Andrews inquired if she had delivered her message to the governor. She explained that she had, in the manner of speaking, "done a Wilson."

In the manner of old unenlightened, the bluecoat queried: "What does mean Wilson?"

Whereupon it was conveyed that she had sent a note.

FACING CARRANZA

General Obregon in Revolt, and "First Chief" Must Yield or Lose the Support of the Army.

CARRANZA TAKES REFUGE IN VERA CRUZ FORTRESS

He Evidently Fears Uprising, and May Seek Asylum on American Warship. Obregon Rising to Position of Ascendancy.

Washington, June 19.—General Venustiano Carranza, original leader of the Mexican constitutional movement, is face to face with a situation that may eliminate him as a factor in Mexican politics unless he yields to the dictation of his commanding general, Alvaro Obregon, and other high officers in his army.

Official advices today revealed that four of Carranza's cabinet ministers had resigned, and that General Obregon was insisting on their retention as well as the dismissal of the members to whom they were opposed.

Word also came to the American government that General Jose Maytorena, the Villa commander in Sonora, objected vigorously to the possible landing of American marines to rescue Americans in the Yaqui valley, indicating that he would regard such action as a hostile invasion. Inasmuch as Maytorena promised to send troops to the region to protect foreigners the American government, which had decided to land marines only if absolutely necessary, it is understood, will consider the incident closed with the arrival of the Maytorena troops.

New Angle to Problem.

The situation in the Yaqui valley was overshadowed, however, by the cabinet crisis at Vera Cruz, where a new angle to the entire Mexican problem was created almost overnight. The dissension in the Carranza cabinet, according to official reports, resulted from a newspaper attack by one of the cabinet members on some of his colleagues; but in many quarters here it was said that the cause of the long-standing and is the culmination of differences between Carranza and Obregon which began when the latter occupied Mexico City several weeks ago.

The fact that Obregon had telegraphed insisting on the retention of the four cabinet members, Luis Cabrera, Rafael Zurbano, Escudero Vardugo and Jesus Verita—the first two of whom were in Washington for a long time as representatives of Carranza, was generally viewed as an indication of Obregon's ascendancy to a position of political prestige in the constitutionalist movement.

Now coming through official channels, Carranza had removed his headquarters to the old, isolated fortress, San Juan de Uloa, in the harbor of Vera Cruz, spread the impression that he feared an uprising against him in Vera Cruz. American warships lying in the harbor would give him asylum should he desire to escape, it was stated.

The probability of an uprising was denied by the governor, who drove to the office of his excellency, the governor. "May I serve you?" asked the polite Major Perry, secretary to his excellency, and custodian of the outer office, whom all must encounter ere confronting the governor.

"Lead me to him," she commanded. "To whom?" the courteous Perry asked.

Movement on Capital Halted.

The cabinet crisis in Vera Cruz has halted the movement of General Pablo Gonzales on Mexico City. It is not known what his sympathies are, but he has always been personally friendly to Carranza, and it is believed here he has halted his troops to await developments at Vera Cruz. General Candide Aguilar and several other prominent Carranza chieftains in the state of Vera Cruz are sympathetic with Obregon, and while there is little definite information available, the impression in official circles here is that Obregon might succeed Carranza as the chief of the constitutionalist movement.

Obregon recently lost his left arm in a battle near Leon against the forces of Generals Villa and Angeles. Just what relation the cabinet dissension at Vera Cruz may have on the possibility of a coalition of the Mexican factions to restore peace is not apparent as yet to officials here. Carranza has returned, a polite "no," to the offer of the British to make him, and the pro-Obregon opinion here has been that in this action he was supported by his cabinet and General Obregon.

President Wilson is patiently awaiting for the situation in Mexico to develop itself more clearly before announcing his next move. His statement issued less than a month ago warning all factions that they must unite or some other means would be found to set up an orderly government in Mexico was the last pronouncement of policy.

Wilson to Support New Coalition.

The president expects to wait a few weeks more for the factions to try to get together, but in the event of failure to do so, he will support the United States in giving to an entirely new set of Mexicans a chance.

The Atlanta Associated Charities sent to Mr. Shahanan on the latter's request a man and his wife several weeks ago. The man was to be "general, all-around farm hand" and the woman was to be "the Shahanan housekeeper."

They are the day-by-day directories of who's who and what's what.

In view of insinuations from sources unfamiliar to the convention cause that the drive of the convention leaders to negotiate toward a peaceful solution of the problems of Mexico has been inspired by weakness, General Villa has authorized Enrique C. Loría, confidential agent of the convention government, to issue this formal declaration:

"Not only is the convention government willing to enter at this time into negotiations for the restoration of peace in Mexico, but it wishes to place itself on record as promising that when the time comes when it can be done, it will be the offer to meet the unfriendly element upon a common ground will be immediately renewed as evidence of the sincerity of the convention cause.

The last clause in Mr. Shahanan's letter reads: "Was it not delightful and look what it cost me?"

The Atlanta Associated Charities letter of condemnation and sorrow states that he will write him, reminding him that the Associated Charities did not vouch for the couple further than to say that they needed work.

French Carry by Assault the Fond de Buval, Which Germans Have Desperately Defended Since May 9. Considerable Advance Also Made in Alsace—British Take German Trenches.

London, June 19.—With the fall of Grodok, the Austro-Germans are within 17 miles of Lemberg, capital of Galicia. They have captured Komarno, 20 miles southwest of Lemberg, and also have crossed the Tanew river. This movement to the eastward from Przemysl has been a rapid one for large armies and although the Russians have been given credit for opposing the advance with strong rear guards, the great masses of their forces have withdrawn, without much fighting, back to what is probably considered their strongest defensive lines, a short distance east of Grodok, where they hold strongly fortified positions on the heights of the chain of lakes and along the marshes partly enclosing that territory.

Earlier in the day a respite of the Galician situation from Petrograd said that the then existing disposition of the Russian forces in the vicinity of Lemberg meant a crisis and that the holding or losing of the line should determine the fate of the Galician capital. The Austro-German forces are within less than a day's march of Lemberg.

ALLIES GAIN IN WEST.

In France the allied forces report gains at various points. The French have at last completely surrounded and carried by assault the Fond de Buval, a narrow ravine east of the Lorette hills. This position has been defended with desperation by the Germans since May 9, and when it was finally taken by the French only a few of the defenders remained.

The maze of trenches known as the "labyrinth" has also been the scene of heavy fighting, for some of the passages have been taken and retaken several times. The French have captured several additional German trenches around Souchez, and in Alsace, have made a considerable advance, occupying, among other places, the town of Metzler, which the Germans set on fire before their evacuation.

The British again have attacked the German positions around Hooge, gaining a considerable stretch of trenches which, according to the latest advices, they are holding. Of this gain the German official statement makes no mention.

AT LEMBERG TEUTONS DRIVE.

Vienna, June 19.—(Via London.)—Grodok, 17 miles west of Lemberg, the Galician capital and Komarno, 20 miles southwest of Lemberg, have been taken by the Teutonic allies, according to an Austrian official statement issued here tonight.

The text of the statement follows:

ITALIANS LOCKED WITH AUSTRIANS IN GREAT BATTLE

Struggle Continues Along the Isonzo Front—Austria Has Sent Reinforcements of Best Troops.

count being given, the country will learn that not only the mountain troops but other corps have won on several occasions the right to its fullest gratitude.

"On the Isonzo front the struggle around Plava is assuming large proportions, and the measure of the success we have gained there becomes more and more evident. A naval battery shelled enemy batteries near Duino (on the gulf of Triest between Triest and Oderzo) with considerable effect.

"On the night of the 17th, while a naval seaplane was engaged in destroying the railroad station at Divacina on the Isonzo front, our aviators made an incursion over the enemy's territory, bombing with great effect, it appears, positions at Monte Santo and entrenched facing Trieste. The naval bombardment was from the Oderzo station on the railroad from Gorizia to Dornberg. All the machines returned unscathed."

AUSTRIANS ATTACK ITALIAN COASTS.

Rome, June 19.—(Via Paris.)—The following announcement was made today by the ministry of marine:

"The enemy attacked our coasts yesterday and this morning without results. An Austrian squadron appeared yesterday at the mouth of the Adige (near the Austrian border) and opened fire, but being attacked by our torpedo destroyers withdrew, having merely damaged a lighthouse. Our destroyers were attacked by seaplanes but returned to port uninjured.

"At the same time our aircraft bombed the Austrian Lighthouse at Salz.

"An Austrian destroyer fired several shots at Monopoli, in a fruitless attempt to burn the naphtha reservoir there. One of our dirigibles was bombed successfully in an ammunition factory near Triest last night.

"The small merchant steamer Maria Grecia was sunk by an Austrian torpedo boat in the Adriatic last night.

"The crew was put ashore on our coast near Salvi beach.

VALANDALISM CHARGED TO THE AUSTRIANS.

Rome, June 19.—(Via Paris.)—A raid by an Italian naval seaplane and dirigible upon Austrian positions on the Isonzo front is described in an official statement issued tonight at the war office. Serious damage is said to have been done to railroad stations and to Austrian reinforcements. All the machines returned safely to their bases.

The Italians are reported to have gained further successes in the important struggle developing around Plava.

The communication follows:

"During the 17th the enemy tried by long range artillery first and small attacks to reduce some of our most advanced positions in the Tyrol-Trentino region and Cadore. He was repulsed and vigorously shelled by our artillery.

"In Carnia we continued methodically to demolish the fortress of Malbergath with our artillery. On the afternoon of the 18th the guns of the fortress tried to reply to our fire, but were reduced to silence.

"Further details continue to come in concerning the action in the environs of Montenegro, mentioned in previous statements. These reports show that the mortal troops performed most praiseworthy exploits. When military reasons no longer prevent a full account.

ITALIANS FAIL, AUSTRIANS SAY.

Vienna, June 19.—(Via London.)—The Austrian war office has issued the following in regard to the Italian war effort:

"On the Isonzo front and on the Carinthian frontier quiet prevails after the last successful Italian attacks in which they suffered great loss. Friday afternoon a new enemy attack from Cividale began, checked in its inception by our artillery fire.

"In the Tyrolean frontier district Italian detachments which attempted to attack the mountain passes east of the Adige valley and the mountains have abandoned their unsuccessful attacks on the plateau of Folgarida and Lavarrone."

of the sincere intentions of the convention leaders.

"Governor Maytorena, in answer to a telegram, from General Villa directing him to send troops to restore order and protect foreign lives and interests in the Yaqui Valley, has sent 1,000 men, 100 troops for the ordered purpose. They were expected to arrive at the scene of the disturbances yesterday. The message conveying this information to the confidential agency came from Diaz' Lombardo, secretary of state of Chihuahua, last night, and by instructions from him the news has been communicated to the secretary of state of the United States. This prompt action by General Villa undoubtedly will furnish an effective remedy to the difficulty."

MEXICANS TO OPPOSE LANDING OF MARINES.

Nogales, Sonora, June 19.—Governor Jose Maytorena authorized the statement today that the entire forces under his command would be available to resist the landing of American marines on the west coast to protect foreign settlers of the Yaqui Valley.

A detachment of nearly 1,000 troops, was dispatched primarily to protect settlers and their crops from the Indians, but they had orders to resist and repel landing of American marines.

According to Maytorena's advice, the American warships should reach Tabori Bay near Guaymas late today. Maytorena's troops will encounter burned railroads, bridges and other obstacles, but he expects them to arrive in time to oppose any landing. Esperanza, the threatened American colony, is 90 miles southeast of Guaymas.

"The forces at our disposition," said the governor, "are sufficient to afford ample protection to all foreigners and their interests. There is no necessity for the landing of American marines at Tabori Bay or elsewhere."

TYPHUS FEVER IN MONTEREY.

Laredo, Texas, June 19.—Mexican nurses who arrived here today from Monterrey, though made sworn statements that they had knowledge of twenty cases of typhus fever in Monterrey when they left that city four days ago. The president of the members of the Order of Josephine, organized by Carranza authorities to leave Mexico.

Word came from Consul General Hanna today that ample Red Cross supplies now were available to supply the immediate needs of the poor of Monterrey.

PEACE CONVENTION AT MEXICO CITY.

El Paso, Texas, June 19.—General Villa favors Mexico City as the place for holding a peace conference, according to a statement issued at Aguas Calientes.

Villa takes the position that Mexico's troubles are national; that to hold any conference outside the country would lessen the dignity of the nation; that it makes no difference what troops may help to settle the dispute. Mexico should settle their own affairs within their own country.

The report from Washington of a split in the Carranza cabinet was the subject of much comment in Mexico. It was generally predicted that development none would venture a prediction as to its effect on Mexican affairs.

IT'S DEPLORABLE, ASSERT REFUGEES.

Galveston, Texas, June 19.—Three hundred and ninety refugees from Mexico were landed here today from the American liner the Buford, which sailed from Vera Cruz.

Few would answer questions concerning Mexican conditions, but all described the situation here as "deplorable" and many said that American intervention was the "only solution of the problem."

Interviews given in the United States are to the effect that Carranza and frequently the Mexican property of the person interviewed is damaged or his relatives and friends there subjected to indignities, and one man, explaining why he would not return home, stated he would never again be compelled to be used in connection with his opinion of affairs in the southern republic.

J. H. Tuller of Minneapolis, declared his belief that Carranza and his party were weak from hunger that they fainted in the streets. "I never saw any one actually starve to death," he added.

Many of the refugees said they had eaten poor Mexican rations, fastened with starvation, and Mr. Tuller said he provided for five Mexican families while there. Mr. Tuller is president of an American liner company, said to own several millions of acres of land in Mexico.

When the refugees left Vera Cruz they had foodstuffs were being transported to the capital and distributed to outlying states.

V. M. I. Commencement.

A large number of alumnae and students in the various departments of the institute met in annual session today and trans-

GIRL SURVIVOR OF THE LUSITANIA

MISS VIRGINIA LONEY.

"If the ship's officers had not assured us there was no danger and that the vessel would not sink I think more lives would have been saved." This is the opinion of Miss Virginia B. Loney, of Huntington, N. Y., a survivor of the Lusitania disaster, who arrived at New York on the American liner St. Paul, accompanied by Mrs. Harry Sedgwick. Miss Loney, who is 16, but large for her years, was greatly saddened by the loss of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Allen D. Loney, who accompanied her on the disastrous trip of the Cunarder. "Five minutes before the Lusitania sank," she said, "two officers went around the deck and assured us there was no danger. As soon as the torpedo struck us my father went below to get life preservers. He procured some, but used none for himself. My father and mother both insisted that I get into one of the lifeboats that was being lowered. I did not want to leave them, but they insisted in a fond way that I go. The boat was upset, and I was thrown into the sea, where I drifted for about ten minutes. Then I was picked up. My father and mother went down with the ship." Miss Loney took an oar that had fallen from the hands of a sailor who had collapsed, and did her share of the rowing until the survivors were taken aboard a trawler. While the St. Paul was being convoyed through the war zone by two British destroyers Mrs. Sedgwick, her companion, suddenly exclaimed: "See! There is a submarine!" Miss Loney became greatly agitated and, turning her gaze from the sea, said: "No, no. I can't stand it again!"

ion's business interests, but we must reserve the right to try to keep American ammunition from our enemies without scruple and with all the means at our disposal, and to cause every conceivable damage to Great Britain in the war of destruction which it forced upon us.

"Therefore the American demand to render ineffective our submarine war against every ship carrying American passengers is for us wholly reprehensible."

Count Reventlow, the naval critic, in a leading article along a similar vein, says:

"It is a moral duty to extract every possible advantage from the submarine weapon. Germany cannot let this weapon be shut up in a cage whose bars are formed by threatening notes of the United States and by international resolutions."

"Now is the time for Germany to inform the world clearly and sharply that it will not let limits and restrictions be drawn by other powers to the manner of using its submarines."

BRITAIN DENIES GERMAN CHARGE.

London, June 19.—An official statement made public by the British government today declared that the German submarine U-29, commanded by Captain von Trapp, who was lost by one of his majesty's ships. This belated announcement apparently was issued at this time to dispose of the report that the German general that the U-29 was rammed by a British tank steamer flying the Swedish flag.

German newspaper editorials reaching London today are all based on the theory that a British merchantman, an oil-washer, was sunk by the British admiralty, sank the German submarine.

GERMANY IS TOLD OF AMERICAN CRIME.

Berlin, June 19.—(Via London)—Dr. Anton Meyer-Gerhard, whose long report to Foreign Minister von Jagow, Dr. Alfred Zimmermann, under-secretary of the foreign ministry, contained a detailed account of the American section of the foreign office, acquainted these officials fully with the status of public opinion in the United States, will be given an opportunity to speak at a meeting to be held to-morrow at the residence of Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg before actual preparation of the German reply to the United States regarding submarine warfare is completed.

Whether Dr. Meyer-Gerhard, who was sent to Germany by Count Bernstorff, ambassador to the United States, will visit headquarters and present his views to Foreign Minister Willhelm in person is not known. In case the German reply probably will not be ready in less than ten days.

It may be stated regarding Mr. Meyer-Gerhard's report that the information brought by him contained little which was absolutely new to the foreign office and its chief value lay in presenting a report of the strength of the various currents of public opinion in the United States and the attitude of President Wilson and his advisers in a more positive and convincing form than could have been possible in a written communication.

Whether Dr. Meyer-Gerhard, who was sent to Germany by Count Bernstorff, ambassador to the United States, will visit headquarters and present his views to Foreign Minister Willhelm in person is not known. In case the German reply probably will not be ready in less than ten days.

NO U. S. MEDIATION FOR THE GERMANIES.

Berlin, June 19.—A Washington dispatch to The Cologne Gazette saying the question of peace is being discussed in America, and that the American people are in favor of mediation, is an assertion from The Morgenpost that Americans know well that a self-constituted peacemaker never is welcome, consequently he is not likely to force his will here.

Dr. Ignaz Jastrzemski, professor of political economy in the University of Berlin, discusses in The Tagesschau the impossibility of accepting the United States' demands so long as American governments do not give up their weapons to the opponents of Germany.

"Inasmuch as every state can forbid the export of arms, the doctor says, the American people can force the Germans to act as peace mediators."

MIGHTY ARIZONA LEAVES THE WAYS

Another Superdreadnaught for U. S. Navy Launched. The Arizona a Sister Ship of the Pennsylvania.

New York, June 19.—The new battleship Arizona was successfully launched at the Brooklyn navy yard today. The Arizona shares with her sister ship, the Pennsylvania, recently launched at Newport News, the honor of being the world's largest battleship. The Arizona slipped into the water at 1:12 o'clock.

The went to the river with the wine and water of her christening trickling in rivulets down her bow from two broken bottles, that awing, bound together by a long red, white and blue cord of silk. Miss Ethel Ross, of Prescott, Ariz., the sponsor, made a sailboat as the big hull quivered and side slowly forward; the froth of the wine spattered in a gown and the clothes of those in her party.

From the navy yard black with a holiday throng, from the spans of the Brooklyn and Williamsburg bridges, from the docks and piers along the Manhattan water fronts, from scores of ships, car and caravans of the East river, and from every vantage point of window and house-top in the vicinity, many tens of thousands saw the newest of American battleships glide down the ways.

Warren Davis of City.
Two hundred workmen with axes had been chopping away the restraining timbers for three-quarters of an hour, the invocation—Bishop Atwood, of the Protestant Episcopal church of Atlanta, who prayed that she might be "a terror to doers of evils"—had been said and the big crowd had stood long and patiently when three blasts from a whistle announced that the moment of punctuation had come. At a moment the signal was echoed from scores of steamers in the river, and their bellows was taken up and swelled by the salute of almost every steamer in the harbor, till the crash of the six buzzards was lost in the din.

The crowd clapped and looked expectantly at the big hull; the bands united in playing "The Star Spangled Banner," the ship repeated and above the悠游的声调, the bugle, the two bugles. They broke, a deafening roar went up from the crowd and in a few moments the battleship's stern was cleaving the waters of the East river.

The ship moved forwardly in the water, and carried forward by the weight of her 12,000 tons, swung far over in the river toward the Williamsburg bridge. A fleet of little navy tugs, dwarfed by her towering form, scurried astern to draw alongside and from them soon started back with the unwieldy captive toward the navy yard docks.

From the grandstand the christening was witnessed by Secretary Daniels, army and navy officers, and representatives of the city of New York, including Major Mitchel. After the launching, Secretary Daniels was the guest at a luncheon at the navy yard. General French, Senator Daniels, Senator Ashurst and others of the official party which represented Arizona at the launching also were present at the luncheon.

Arizona to Cost $15,000,000.

The Arizona will cost $15,000,000. She is sister ship to the Pennsylvania, recently launched at Newport News, and in size and armament one of the largest and most powerful craft ever built for any navy.

Ships of the size like the Arizona are built to give and receive punishment in sea battles. Their mission has little in common with that of the battle cruisers which have been the last refuge to escape each other during the European war. Speed is sacrificed in the construction of the battleships to weight of armor and against such a ship as the Arizona, with her broadside of four 14-inch guns and protection of more than a foot of the toughest steel that can be made around the vessel's vital parts, it would be difficult even to helpless and must depend on her speed and seek safety in flight. There are few ships in any navy fit to cope with the Arizona ship to ship.

The range of the Arizona guns is from 12 to 13 miles, as they will be set in her turrets, or as far as her gun-pointers and observers can see in bright weather. As previous trials on the sea fortress show, the Arizona's main battery will have a maximum elevation of nearly 20 degrees. It would be possible, it is said, to aim most of the guns at a distance of 10 miles to the range of the guns, but already they can shoot and hit farther. It is probable they would ever be called upon to do.

The Arizona will carry the three-

TRICK BOAT WHICH LANDED TROOPS. DAMAGED GUN IN CAPTURED FORT IN DARDANELLES.

In the picture is shown the steamship River Clyde, which was used as a transport in the landing of troops at Sedd-el-Bahr, on the Gallipoli peninsula. In order to deceive the Turks the British beached the vessel, which apparently was not under control, near the proposed landing place, and the crew took to the boats. The Turks saw in the occurrence nothing more than an accident, but that night thousands of soldiers who had been hidden on board effected landing under cover of darkness. In the lower picture is shown a damaged gun in a captured Turkish fort.

gun turrets which have been developed by American naval constructors in four-twin-turret rifles being held in four points, two fore and two aft.

In addition she will have a secondary battery of twenty-two 5-inch, long-range rifles for defense against destroyers, torpedo boats and submarines. The guns can be fired either broadside and around the entire circle with the exception of an arc of less than 30 degrees directly forward, for want of room to turn the guns.

For the forward turrets, four of the secondary battery guns, two on each side, are so placed that they can be fired in direct across the ship's bows, taking the place of howitzer guns of the old wooden ship day.

NEPHEWS OF POPE WITH THE ITALIAN ARMY

ONLY PROFITABLE PEACE WILL SUIT THE KAISER

Paris, June 19.—Extracts from a letter said to have been sent by Emperor William II to the King of Italy, published in the Bavarian court and published in Spain, are reproduced by The Mail. The emperor is quoted as saying in part:

"Our only object is a peace profitable for the German states. This peace may be concluded sooner than thought. If it gave for the time being only an incomplete result, it would still serve as a preparation for the future. It could be signed tomorrow if I wished."

"When my august grandfather placed the seal on its peace banner, he did not pretend to have rendered a completed work. The empire always is susceptible of growth. What is desired to put her through the Panama canal the locks and bends in the channel will be taxed almost to the limit to give her pauperism.

The Arizona is the fourth battleship to be built in a government yard and her place on the ways will be taken at once by the Arizona, a larger, and faster, but similarly armed ship.

YARCAN JURISDICTION GIVEN GEORGIA COURT

Decision Means a Reorganization of the Naval Stores Company.

Toledo, Ohio, June 19.—Reorganization of the Yarcan Naval Stores company is made possible, local officials said today, by the action of the United States district court in denying the application of James C. Blair, trustee of Toledo, for certiorari seeking a review of the decision of the circuit court of appeals of the fifth circuit which had decided the question of jurisdiction in favor of the Georgia court.

The decision is final, and it means that the United States court for the southern district of Georgia will specifically confine the administration of the property.

It was announced today that another sale will be ordered immediately, all the creditors having assented to the agreement.

All old stockholders of the Yarcan are to participate in the reorganization. The Empire Investment company, a St. Louis concern, under a contract with the creditors' committee, will advance $100,000 working capital.

Claims amounting to $600,000, or 95 per cent of the total, have been deposited with the creditors' committee. Claimants will be given bonds at par plus interest.

The reorganization committee consists of J. E. Knisely, of Toledo, and H. C. Tripp, of Cincinnati, and H. H. Mason, of Brunswick, Ga.

The Yarcan Naval Stores company, with general offices in Toledo and principal manufacturing plants at Brunswick, Ga., and Gulfport, Miss., has been in the hands of receivers since May 24, 1913. (Adv.)

WILL SOON FIX DATE OF "ATLANTA DAY" AT GREAT EXPO.

President Ivan E. Allen, of the Atlanta Convention bureau, has written to C. C. Hanson, commissioner of the Panam-Pacific exposition, asking that Atlanta, June 19, be designated as "Atlanta Day" at the fair, since those dates will be most suitable to visitors from this city and section. This action was taken after a meeting of officers of the convention bureau, chamber of commerce and Governor's Horse guard, who will be in Frisco on those dates.

Captain O. L. Rudisill, of the horse guard, will be in general charge of the big delegation on the Governor's Horse Guard special, which will include members of the guard, delegation of shriners in charge of Potentates, Frisco Adair, and private citizens.

The train will leave Atlanta on July 2, and the party will be away one month, visiting many points of interest in the west. Before going to the exposition they will attend the imperial council of the Shrine, in Seattle, Wash., which met in Atlanta last year.

Captain Rudisill Saturday received a telegram announcing a change in the itinerary which he had been seeking for several weeks. Instead of making the trip from Portland, Ore., to San Francisco by rail, the entire party will make the trip by boat along the Pacific ocean.

Tri-State Convention Closes.

Asheville, N. C., June 19.—The fifth annual convention of the Tri-State Water and Light Association of the Carolinas and Georgia came to a close here this afternoon, speakers at the final session including among others W. E. Lotspeich, of Atlanta; Gilbert C. White, of Durham, and J. T. Kerans, of New Jersey. The association decided to press on with its gold medal at the next meeting to the field secretary who puts forth the most effective efforts in behalf of the organization during the next year.

SIMPLE MERCY PLEA

WON'T SAVE BECKER

Governor Will Not Commute Unless Evidence Indicating Innocence Is Presented.

Ossining, N. Y., June 19.—Charles Becker, sentenced to die next month for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, was visited today in his cell in Sing Sing's death house by his counsel, Martin T. Manton, of New York. Mr. Manton remained with Becker half an hour discussing the case, but he could find no appeal to the governor. Becker's only hope of escaping the electric chair, since the court of appeals had refused to re-examine the record, was to argue on the appeal from his second conviction.

"Nothing to say; perhaps later," was all Mr. Manton would say after the interview with his client.

New York, June 19.—Charles Becker's plea to Governor Whitman for executive clemency will be denied unless he presents evidence indicating his innocence. The state's attorney general, in a statement to the press, said that Becker's only hope of escaping the electric chair, since the court of appeals had refused to re-examine the record, was to argue on the appeal from his second conviction.

Manton outlined Becker's plans as far as they had matured, upon his arrival here today from Ossining after an interview in the death house with his client.

Becker, with virtually no recourse left except executive clemency, had planned to appeal to the governor, Manton said. If clemency is denied then, Manton said, Becker would go to the chair still protesting his innocence, in all probability leaving behind no written statement.

What Becker's plea for mercy will contain, and what part the condemned man's wife will play in this fight for his life, were topics Manton said he could not discuss.

Albany, N. Y., June 19.—The impression prevails in legal circles that have kept close touch with the case of Charles Becker, the former police lieutenant under sentence of death for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, that his wife and attorneys can present new evidence pointing to his innocence. Governor Whitman will not commute his sentence.

A full hearing will be given either Becker's attorney or Mrs. Becker, but a simple plea for mercy is regarded as useless.

JAMES A. CONARD, ATLANTA PRINTER, WINS LAW DEGREE

James A. Conard, a compositor for The Constitution, and a member of the local typographical union, was admitted to practice at the Fulton county bar upon his recent graduation from the Atlanta Law school.

Since his early apprenticeship to the printing trade in Asbury Park, N. J., Mr. Conard has had a desire to study law, which he did not allow to flag during the eighteen years he has followed this trade. Soon after his arrival in Atlanta he enrolled in the institution from which he graduated a week ago, and largely through the kindness of R. C. Bruce, foreman of The Constitution, has been enabled to carry this course to completion.

NO SMALLPOX FOUND IN GERMAN PRISON CAMP

Berlin, June 19.—(Via London)—Assertions of an English newspaper that fifty cases of smallpox had developed in the Ruhleben detention camp are denied by American embassy representatives, who say there has been no smallpox whatever at Ruhleben. There has been, however, a considerable number of cases of influenza.

The prisoners at Ruhleben have organized the first concentration camp golf club. The British professionals of the Berlin Golf Club, who have had much time on their hands, have organized a short course within the race track grounds. The interned golfers sent for their clubs and they are now able to devote virtually their entire time and attention to the game.

Interest Shown by State Banks

Washington, June 19.—Members of the federal reserve board feel encouraged at the interest shown by state banks in regulations admitting them to the federal reserve system. Since the board announced the regulations the number of banks making inquiries has not been large, but it is said they are still some of the most prominent state institutions in several big cities have shown a disposition to enter the system.

Claims amounting to $600,000, or 95 per cent of the total, have been deposited with the creditors' committee. Creditors will be given bonds at par plus interest.

FREE CLINICS FAVERED BY DENTISTS OF STATE

Also Indorse Lecturers for the Public Schools—Officers Are Elected.

The Georgia State Dental association Saturday morning went on record as unanimously favoring a state appropriation sufficient to furnish lecturers and clinicians to cover the entire state and teach the children of the public schools how to efficiently cleanse and to keep sterile and pure the mouth and teeth.

Resolutions indorsing this movement were adopted and the president named the following committee to draft the proposed bill and seek its passage by the next general assembly: Dr. William Crenshaw, Dr. T. P. Hinman, Dr. M. D. Huff and Dr. S. W. Foster, all of Atlanta; Dr. O. Lee Chestnut, of Jackson, and Dr. O. N. Callahan, of McRae.

Dr. E. A. Tigner, retiring president of the association, approved of the movement and said:

"The movement arises out of the urgent necessity for warding off caries tooth-decay of children and for reasons even more urgent in its bearing upon the health after life in warding off elvular pyorrhea or Riggs disease, which is now more widely distributed, a greater menace to the health of the general public than pulmonary consumption."

Free Clinics Indorsed.

Resolutions were adopted indorsing the creation of free dental clinics in the cities of the state for the treatment of teeth of the poor; these clinics to be under the supervision of the local dental societies.

CITY MAY PLANT LAND IN ALFALFA

T. H. BRANNEN

Councilman Claude Ashley Will Urge This Course in Effort to Reduce Atlanta's Forage Bill.

Atlanta's forage bill, which has increased within a few years to about $100,000 per year, has caused city officials no little concern, and many of them have been investigating with a view to devising ways and means for cutting down this expense.

The city at the beginning of the year had twenty-four automobiles in service, which materially cut down the feed bill, and with appropriations already made, they will have a total of forty-eight autos before the end of the year. This saving, however, does not reduce the forage bill to the extent desired.

Councilman Claude Ashley, of the fourth ward, has hit upon a plan that he will put before general council in the form of a resolution that he believes will mean a saving of about $25,000 per year in the forage department, and at the same time utilize some of the city's property from which Atlanta is now getting no income.

Plant Land in Alfalfa.

He will be joined by Councilman A. W. Farlinger, also of the fourth, in an effort to get council to plant 50 acres of the city reserves on the McDonough road in alfalfa next fall. This plot they propose as a test and later they expect to get the entire 150 acres of the tract planted in alfalfa. If that proves a success, they will recommend the extension of the alfalfa farm to the 500 acres of land at the city disposal plan.

Councilman Ashley planted the first alfalfa farm in Fulton county, and now has seven and one-half acres in cultivation. He has made a study of the grass and harvests seven crops per year from his patch, at an average of one ton to the acre at each cutting.

At the conservative estimate of five cuttings per year from 200 acres of city property, Councilman Ashley estimates it is $25,000 per year, the maximum estimate of seven cuttings per year, which he says can be gotten from the property in question, since it is adjusted to adapt it to alfalfa, the city could harvest a crop worth on the market $35,400.

Georgia Hay Better.

"Alfalfa grown in Georgia is 20 to 20 per cent better for our stock than that grown in the west," said Councilman Ashley. "The stock can eat up to 100 pounds of hay a day, while much of the western hay is a dead loss. The dairymen after making experiments report they are willing to pay more for Georgia hay, and the stockmen take the same position.

"We now have more than 200 acres of land from which we get no income whatever. It is my aim to adjust the alfalfa growing activities so that the disposal plant, which is rich as can be found in the state, will add greatly to the value of the city's idle lands by soving them in alfalfa."

Mr. Ashley says he is willing to give a portion of his time in looking after the experiment, if it would help in convincing them that it will mean a big income and a great saving each year.

Another Chance Given To Escaped Prisoner Who Tries to Reform

After escaping from prison two years ago, A. H. Wilson, a young white man, returned to Atlanta a few days ago, believing that the past had buried him dead and that since he had reformed the law would let him alone; his wife would come back to him and all would be well again. He was taken up and arraigned in the police court Saturday afternoon.

But he faced the judge on the "Golden Rule" and despite the claims that he had had a chance given him he was given "another chance."

Two years ago Wilson was one of those unfortunate who fell under the evil spell of the gang leaders who were plotting on revolution after being given several chances to make good. He violated the probation law and was sent to the city chaingang in two cases for sixty days. His wife left him. After six days in the chaingang he thirty-one days he escaped and went to Chattanooga. For seventeen months he stayed sober and worked hard.

Prisoner Johnson said:

"I am going to give this man the chance he wants despite the unserved sentence. I will let him pay fine of $15.00 to offset the two months he was away from the city and will give him two weeks to get up the money. You can go, Mr. Wilson, and may God bless you."

SAVE THE CYCLOMAMA, URGES GEO. FREEMAN

SURVEY COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN NAMED BY FRED J. PAXON

Fred J. Paxon, chairman of the committee recently appointed by President Wilkinson, of the chamber of commerce, to make a survey of the city government of Atlanta, has announced the chairman of the subcommittees which will investigate and report upon the resources, methods of expenditure and the maximum efficiency of the several departments of the government.

Subcommittee chairman are: Mrs. M. W. Walker, parks; H. A. Maier, fire department; R. L. Cooney, streets; Ivan E. Allen, city finances; E. Murray, hospitals; Mrs. Nellie Allen, black pensions; Dr. J. E. Paul, sanitation; John C. Hall, J. M. B. Horsey, public offices; T. T. Flaggler, taxation; Mrs. Emily MacDougall, library; Lindsey Hopkins, waterworks; Mr. W. H. Parks, water system; Mr. Charles E. Harrison, charities and penitentiary; Harrison烟雾 nuisance; Mrs. P. J. McGovern, bridges, buildings and fire sewers; Captain Edward J. C. Kortz, police department.

Harrison Jones has been appointed vice chairman of the survey committee. He is a man who, in his pressing business engagements will keep him out of the city for much of the time. The members of the several committees will be named by the chairman.

"Surely Atlanta is not going to allow the picture with all its historical association and sentiment to rot down when it could be saved," said Councilman Freeman Saturday. "I inspected the cyclorama and I was ashamed of Atlanta and of myself for the condition there."

"During the recent rains three feet of water stood in the basement of the building, the lower edge of the picture was rotting away from exposure and the building is a veritable fire-trap. We need a permanent fire-proof building and if there is a way we are going to get it."

Councilman Freeman proposes to secure by charter amendment that all income from the cyclorama, which is about $5,000 annually, to be used in defraying the expense of a concrete and brick fireproof building.

"There is no future for art study, and like others, I become more interested in it every time I see it," said Councilman Freeman. "Ten years from today, if you propose presenting it, it will be bought by thousands of people who visit this section, for it carries a more vivid picture of the war between the states than any other painting I have ever seen. A donation from today is certain to be considered one of the great paintings of the world."

"Atlanta cannot afford to be derelict in her duty. In the matter, we should have enough patriotism to get behind the proposition and by issuing bonds or by some other means save the building."

Playing a Joke With Another Man's Horse Dangerous This Time

Because O. H. Sims, a white youth of Fairburn, tried to play a joke with another man's horse, he was arrested, arraigned in the police court Saturday afternoon and came very near going to jail for larceny.

He hired a horse from J. M. Thompson, of College Park, to take a ride into the country. While driving through Atlanta, he stopped in a wagon yard and when bartered for a horse trade tried to make one just for the fun of the thing, he claimed. It happened, however, that Thompson's wife, who was present, recognized the horse and had Sims arrested.

Although Sims claimed the whole thing was a joke, the recorder said that it was for the fact that the trade did not consummate he would send the young man to jail for larceny.

The case was dismissed, the recorder remarking:

"At least I've got a joke like that another time. Sims, somebody may have the horse laugh on you."

DR. HALL WILL TELL OF WAR EXPERIENCES

Dr. J. J. Hall will preach today, both morning and night, at the Jackson Hill Baptist church. At the night service he will relate some of his experiences in the war zone. While abroad last year, Hall preached in some of the leading churches in England and Scotland, was in Germany—on a mission of peace—at the start of the war and passed through Liege just before the German troops poured in there.

ROOSEVELT AND TAFT ATTACKED BY BRYAN

New York, June 19.—William Jennings Bryan, addressing a labor meeting at Carnegie hall here tonight, attacked former Presidents Roosevelt and Taft as leading sponsors of organized internationalism in the use of force in international affairs, while the former secretary of state declared were imminent to the true interests of this country and to the cause of international peace.

In reviewing a number of extenuating circumstances, Judge Landis said: "Still the defendant resisted a government official charged with a certain duty, and this court must uphold the honor and dignity of the United States government. It is the duty of this court to impose such a stinging fine that the defendant and men like him will never commit this offense again. It is the function and essence of this court that the defendant be fined 2 cents, without costs."

SAVING CYCLOMAMA, URGES GEO. FREEMAN

Councilman Will Ask Council to Pass Resolution for Charter Amendment.

Save the cyclorama and the famous picture of the "Battle of Atlanta."

This is the appeal Councilman George

Freeman, of the third ward, will carry to the general council Monday afternoon when he will ask the passage of a resolution calling for a charter amendment providing for a new building for the great war picture.

"Surely Atlanta is not going to allow the picture with all its historical association and sentiment to rot down when it could be saved," said Councilman Freeman Saturday. "I inspected the cyclorama and I was ashamed of Atlanta and of myself for the condition there."

"During the recent rains three feet of water stood in the basement of the building, the lower edge of the picture was rotting away from exposure and the building is a veritable fire-trap. We need a permanent fire-proof building and if there is a way we are going to get it."

Councilman Freeman proposes to secure by charter amendment that all income from the cyclorama, which is about $5,000 annually, to be used in defraying the expense of a concrete and brick fireproof building.

"There is no future for art study,

and like others, I become more interested in it every time I see it," said

Councilman Freeman. "Ten years from today, if you propose presenting it, it will be bought by thousands of people who visit this section, for it carries a more vivid picture of the war between the states than any other painting I have ever seen. A donation from today is certain to be consid-

"Atlanta cannot afford to be derelict in her duty. In the matter, we should have enough patriotism to get behind the proposition and by issuing bonds or by some other means save the

HARRISON OPPOSED FOR TAX ASSESSOR

George Sims, James R. Sewell and F. E. Maffett Are Seeking Position.

J. L. Harrison, one of the city tax assessors faces strong opposition when the election is held by general council on the first Monday in July.

George Sims, formerly in the city clerk's office, but now attached to the municipal court, James R. Sewell, president of the West End bank, and F. E.
Maffett, member of the board of health from the tenth, are candidates to succeed Mr. Harrison.

Mr. Harrison has held office as one of the city tax assessors for twenty years, but it has been charged openly in council that friction has arisen in the office.

C. D. Meador whose term as assessor, also expires on the first Monday in July, is expected to succeed him himself without opposition. He has also been in the office for many years J. N. Maleo, the third assessor, will hold office until July, 1916.

The city attorney has prepared a charter amendment to be presented to the legislature which, if passed, will separate the tax assessors from that of the tax receiver, held by Chief Clerk

George B. Beauchamp.

This is considered the first step by council to completely reorganize the department. Advocates of the change claim it will mean several million dollars annually increase in the personal tax returns.

There was little change during the past few days in the race for chief of the fire department. Friends of Captain W. D. Cody are sanguine as to his victory over Chief W. B. Cummings the incumbent, who is a candidate to succeed himself.

The Cody faction claims an overwhelming majority of votes, while the friends of Chief Cummings claim it will be a close race.

Captain John Terrell's friends do not expect him to be elected on the first ballot, but claim that if he shows strength he will have a good opportunity to win on the second. They are agreed to have a strenuous struggle to Cody in the event Terrell does not poll more than eight votes on the second ballot.

STAGE STORIES OF MONMOUTH

Conducted by L. E. Marshall

CHAPLIN AT ALAMO 2 IN NEW COMEDY ROLE

Divides the Week's Bill With "Three Weeks" for Popularity With Public.

Charlie Chaplin, the funniest man on earth, in the newest Essanay comedy, "Work," is one of the features at Alamo No. 2 for Monday. This two-part comedy is conceded to be one of the most side-splitting comedies ever filmed. This is the first showing of the Chaplin Essanay comedy, "Work," and lovers of the great fun-maker will revel in his laugh-producing antics.

Tuesday, "Braga's Double," a two-part Essanay drama, will be seen, with Nell Craig as the beautiful Dominga Medina, in a series of startling adventures, and Sheldon Lewis as Emile Braga, a sly, one-faced American of the criminal type, all by the account in the thrilling subterfuges that these clever rogues adopt to thwart the investigations of the police.

"The Goddess," which appears the same day, in its seventh episode, affords contrast to "Braga's Double" in a quaintly beautiful visualization. Anita Stewart, the incomparable actress, in these series she is bewitching.

For Wednesday, Thursday and Friday Elinor Glyn's great novel of thrilling adventure and romance will be pictured depicting the story of a queen without a country and a king without a throne. The film version is quite as fascinating as the novel itself. Those who have read the novel will notice that the picture follows it almost without variation. The story has been told in every glorified tongue and read by millions of people.

The remarkable likeness of the principals of the cast to the characters in the novel add greatly to the film version, and the audience is impressed that they are actually living the lives of the famed lovers. Madeline Traverse as the tall and regal-looking young Queen, and with her royal carriage makes a most enchanting prima donna, and Myrtle Hutton as Paul Verdayne answers the author's description of a handsome young Englishman who is a wolf but not vicious.

The rest of the cast deserves the protection of those excellent interpreters of their respective parts. There are 280 scenes in the photo-play many reflecting the sumptuous splendor of royalty all variously pictured.

GEO. KLEINE TO MAKE
"WOMAN NEXT DOOR"

Owen Davis' famous play, "The Woman Next Door," is being filmed by George Kleine in his New York studios, work on which was started last week. Irene Fenwick, the dainty star of Kleine's "The Computers" and "The Spendthrift," will be in the leading role with a supporting cast of Broadway players engaged especially for this feature.

Della Connor, that pretty ingenue whose work in "Kleine's Office," "Stop Thief," "The Computer," and "Who's Who in Society," attracted wide attention and who is now appearing in "Braga's Double" production, "Nobility Home," will be seen in the support of Miss Fenwick.

The Clarke-Caunder company is engaged in making the interior scenes for the two-reel mountain story, "The Mate of the Primeval," exteriors for which were made in the Bear Valley region recently.

"THE DICTATOR" COMES TO GRAND MONDAY

Rose Coghlan in "Sporting Duchess," Also on Bill
For This Week.

A week scintillating with bright photo-dramatic features is the treasure in store for Grand patrons.

Some of the biggest stars of stage and screen are booked for the coming week. John Barrymore, Ross Coghlan, Myrtle Stedman, Francis X. Bushman and others come in four extra attractions as outstanding offerings.

"The Dictator," the thrilling diplomatic and war drama, by Richard Harding Davis, is the offering for Monday and Tuesday. The leading role is played by John Barrymore.

Wednesday Miss Coghlan appears in "The Sporting Duchess," the fourth Lubin contribution to the Vitagraph-Essanay-Lubin-Selig combination, and one of the most dramatic productions of Lubin's history.

"Graustark," with Francis Bushman, will play a return engagement Thursday at the Grand, and will be the highlight of Grand patrons who were unable to see this strong picture when it broke attendance records a few short weeks back.

Myrtle Stedman in the leading role of "The Wild Olive," a tense, passionate love story built around the career of a wild, reckless girl and the reckoning with her heart to which she is brought, will be the offering Friday and Saturday.

The Famous Players Film company's five-part photo-adaptation of the popular George Eliot play, "Middlemarch," by Richard Harding Davis, affords John Barrymore, the infinite comedian, and those immediately concerned with him in the projection of fun and pleasure. The play will take the palates of a large and thoroughly appreciative audience. He is as dry in his methods as he was in "The Man From Mexico" and his other sensational comedy scenes, "Are You Men?"

Myrtle Stedman and Forrest Stanley are the features of a splendid co-starring combination which was specially assembled by the Oliver Morosco production company for its production of "The Wild Olive," the attraction Friday and Saturday.

Opening with a mysterious murder, the Lubin production of "The Woman Next Door" is the latest offering from the studio.

Significant of the idealistic reputation of Lois Weber and Phillip Smalley is "Scandal," their production since their return to the Universal fold after having made "Hypocrites," the sensational, and other photoplays for the young American audience sentence to death for a murder he never committed, together with enthusiastic admiration of the mountain girl who hid him in her cabin studio, combine to move the heart and stimulate the imagination of joy, when the second jury reverses the verdict of capital punishment and renders a sweeping acquittal.

The subject was suggested to Miss Weber, who wrote the story and scenario, in an editorial of March 21, 1915. In this article the editor stated that if one could sit behind any of the windows that face the avenue of club windows, one could witness a long, long goings-on hour after hour in the course of a sewing circle in the afternoon.

The Smalleys are earnest and seeking in their efforts to carry real messages to the world. With this intention they produced "Hypocrites" and "Scandal" depicts the same conception of "the poison monger" that Shakespeare embodies in the character Jagor in "Othello." In this instance, however, the character of "Scandal" are visualized and its manifestation is brought down to modern days and our own back yards. The picture is strong. It keeps close to the human element. Miss Weber writes of real people, not of exaggerated puppets stretched out of all shape and address. She is able to depict a more popular and more popular picture and more powerful than "Hypocrites." It is near to every one's life and applies to every one who walks out of the picture house. The Smalleys are not peculiar to either rich or poor. Even the unfortunate inarticulate dumb can receive benefit from the picture as some of them probably "knock each other by means of their swiftly moving telegraphic fingers."

Scandal is set in still, dangerous surroundings, repellent object and through the fast fleeting feet of the five reels it appears to wreak woes upon the characters in the play.

BEHIND THE SCREENS

WITH BRIT CRAIG.

Tread of Times.

In view of the rapid rise to popularity of the sex drama in pictures, it is with pleasure, the Kerfluka Film corporation announces the following modish releases:

Cigarette Clara, the Cruel Creature.

Stella, the Stealthy Siren of Sixty-Something Street?

The Kerfluka corporation vouches to the public that each of these marvelous productions contain a sufficiency of such dramatic elements as midnight taxicabs, "crushed billets," wine and women (with or without song as required), bad debts, wronged wives, deceived husbands, wine agents, chorus girls, bank defalcations, rebellious servant girls, bad cooking, divorce grousing, widows, bullets and booze.

You Can't Get Away From It.

"The bewitching creature tastes to the full the joys of life and drinks deep of the elixir of sorrow."

Who started the openwork collar for a man?

Where did Theda Bara learn all she knows?

Who stopped "Hypocrites in Seniora" Ga?

If that really was Annette Kellerman?

Why they don't have pretty girls any more in the box offices?

When is the legitimate drama coming back?

What Did We Do to Deserve It?

The question of the popularity of "Scandal" then is purely speculative.

Wormwood.

"Wormwood" comes up to its name—it leaves a bad taste in your mouth.

My second husband used to compare me with a sort of moulting insect.

Having never tasted a moulting's glove I don't know any too much about it, but that second husband was in a position to know everything available about bad taste.

Virtue, a sweetheart, a bouquet of illness, and a number of other requirements to the plot are murdered in "Wormwood." It is a picture of pictures.

Among other things, it minders that joyful attunement with life you might have had when you went to see it.

Anne Gholi must have either had a bad tooth or a carbuncle at the time.

It was adapted from a Marie Corelli novel. Miss Corelli must have either had a bad tooth or a carbuncle at the time.

Silvia must be an awful thing.

But it can't be half so depressing as the story built around it. One of the most objectionable features about the movie is the lack of one of the heroes, Silvia. He never overcomes such an immense handicap in the second reel. The wonder is such a natural supplies the lack.

Silvia wants to enter the priesthood.

Falling in, he becomes submerged head-down in the water.

It is the trouble of contriving to bring him to the surface and find a way by which he might overcome the ailment, the authorship of whom—which is not only absurd but kind.

Outside of the name of "Silvia," the fruits of absinthe (which we are told is the reason the French never grow old) are the only things mentioned in every other essential to the plot.

Give Us This Day.

"Alane's execution is only a day off."

San Francisco, Cal., June 19.—(Special)—At last! We have arrived in San Francisco, the biggest, most amazing city in the west—a perfect wonderland. None of us girls has yet had time to get our bearings. We are so bewildered by it all.

It has been a glorious trip. We have for our comfort and pleasure, and the city is the finest, best-arranged imaginable. Several virolas with 10,000 records—just think of it!—furnished music all the while, and we danced continually in the parlor and observation cars.

There have been no accidents, no sickness—noting to mar the pleasantness of the trip. In Kansas City we stopped over for a night—had a great crowd greeted us at the station, and a speech of welcome was delivered by Mayor Jost. We stopped in Toledo too, and gave the town an appreciative "once over."

Other Entertainments.

We were entertained at dinners and dances in Denver, Pueblo, City and Dancer. Prominent society women gave us a dance in Denver, which may

I pause to say, is one of the most pic-

which we came.

We won't undertake to describe the Grand Canyon, where we spent an en-

cards are most feeble things conceivable when stacked up against the Grand Canyon.

We were all interested in the stopover at Los Angeles, New Mexico, where we were introduced to our first Mexican scenes. We were impressed with Albuquerque, New Mexico, also, where we were carried through a typical Indian village and saw with our own eyes Indian home life.

From the San Francisco exposition

we go to Universal City, where the

People are as eager over this as any of the towns because there we expect to meet many of the biggest stars of the screen, and to be initiated into the mysteries of the picture-making business.

Outside of that, we are all to be cast for roles in a picture that is to be

are as eager places as picture actresses. Who knows?

Anyhow, here's to Universal City!

CAPITOL GOSSIP

Colonel John T. Boileau, clerk of the house of representatives, has announced that in the coming term of the legislature he will retain Hiram Moore as general clerk of the house, and O. H. E. Bloodsworth, Jr., of Forsyth, as calendar clerk of the house.

A great deal of interest now centers in the successor of D. F. McClatchey, for years reading clerk of the house, who will be elected as secretary of the senate to succeed the late Charles S. Northern. Colonel Boileau stated that he has not yet made up his mind about this member of his staff.

Burwell Here.

Representative W. H. Burwell, of Banks county, who is candidate for the speakership of the house, arrived in Atlanta Saturday and will remain until the convening of the legislature. He will make his headquarters in the Klimball house. He is opposed for the speakership by Representative J. E. Sheppard of Sumter county, who is running on the prohibition ticket.

Mr. Sheppard supported Mr. Burwell, and the speakership of the last house, but withdrew before the session convened, allowing Mr. Burwell to be elected without opposition.

Grice Forms Partnership.

Attorney General Warren Grice, whose term expires next Saturday, has announced that he has formed a partnership with J. Ellsworth Hall, of Macon, with whom he will practice law upon his retirement from office.

Mr. Grice was appointed by Governor Slaton to succeed Attorney General Thomas S. Fielder, who resigned to run for the United States senatorship. Mr. Grice will be succeeded by Clifford Walker, of Monroe. Mr. Grice is a native of Hawkinsville.

Money for District Schools.

Governor Slaton on Saturday signed warrants for $2,000 each for the educational agricultural colleges. When these sums have been paid it will make a total of $6,000 each that these institutions have received this year. Their annual appropriation is $10,000 each, the money to come from the sale of bonds issued by the state department of agriculture. State Treasurer W. J. Speer will mail out the checks early this week.

New Sort of Safe.

John Johnson, a negro grocer, of Vinings, a suburb of Macon, is a prisoner in Bibb county awaiting developments in a charge of arson made against him by Captain W. R. Joyner.

Johnson, so the story goes, left his store one night recently, and shortly thereafter the fire department was summoned to the building.

Captain Joyner has just visited Valdosta, where he went to gather evidence in connection with the burning of the store. Johnson claimed $300 and valuable papers.

The papers, it is said, were later discovered in possession of Johnson's wife.

Located in College Park, the beautiful residential suburb of Atlanta—the educational center and commercial metropolis of the South—Cox girls enjoy a rare combination of suburban and metropolitan advantages.

The lovely campus of twenty-eight acres, with its flower, shrubbery and stately forest trees, affords a delightful home environment of security, comfort and quiet for the pursuit of study and ideal facilities for recreation and outdoor sports. With an elevation of 1,100 feet above the sea, in a delightful winter climate, dormitories and class rooms equipped with modern conveniences, the health record of the institution is unsurpassed in all America. The absolute freedom from malarial diseases has attracted a large patronage from the lower South since before the Civil War.

To these natural advantages...the city of Atlanta adds unparalleled opportunities to profit by contact and acquaintance. No other city in all the South approaches Atlanta in its power to attract the world's great lecturers, statesmen, authors, educators, theologians, artists, singers and musicians. By special arrangement many of these are introduced from the College platform at all times accessible to Cox students at a minimum of expense.

The course of study is that of A Grade colleges, supplemented by elective courses in Piano, Voice, Violin, Theory, Harmony, Counterpoint, Oratory, Drawing and Painting, Domestic Science (Cooking, Dressmaking and Millinery), Stenography and Typewriting. IN THE THEATERS

BONITA, HEADLINER AT THE FORSYTH THIS WEEK.

Keith Vandeleur.

(At the Forsyth.) A brilliant array of vaudeville will usher in the mid-season week Monday, when one of the brightest galaxies of Keith attractions opens at the Forsyth.

The popularity of the busy little theater during the summer season is assured because of the pleasant company afforded patrons and the meritorious brand of vaudeville that is being served this season, promises to establish summer records with which no southern theater can compete.

The popular Miss Bonita, Lew Hearn and the renowned Bonita, with a doubt the most fascinating beauty upon the vaudeville stage. For years she has been the supreme original entertainer.

They have only recently returned from a triumphal tour of Europe, where they were the brightest lights in the company of England's most notable musical review. Returning to their native soil, they have organized a new vaudeville offering, entitled "Bright Lights, Musical Comedy." It is undisputedly the most effective vehicle that has been built around their entire historic careers.

Lew Hearn is an eccentric comedian, with a reputation in Europe as well as America. Bonita has been the star of many musical comedies notably "Snow," which had such a glorious run away, recently most remarkable achievement however, was in the lead role of "Wine, Women and Song."

An irresistibly laughable exaggeration of the dithyrambo-drama, "You Jack Daven," in the making of the celebrated Jack Gardner and his "Immenses" company. It is a new departure in vaudeville, and exceedingly original. Gardner has turned his back upon the lyric stage, and will become a dramatic star. He will be long remembered by play-goers for his success in "The Chocolate Soldier," and "Madame Sherri."

The brand-new idea of Gardner's embraces the moving pictures, with which he is associated in the production of "Snow." In "Snow" the main action is enacted upon the screen itself in a situation with ludicrous effect.

The present drama has become one of vaudeville's most attractive features.

Europe contributes most of these pantomime offerings. One of the most recent importations is the Schwarz company of incomparable mimics, and night.

Nelson Whitney's Crown Lifted by Charlie Dexter

Dexter Wins Southern Championship And Medal Play-Off From Whitney; Frank Clark Sets a Course Record

By Dick Jemison.

Charles L. Dexter, Jr., of Dallas, Texas, is the new southern amateur golf champion, defeating Nelson Whitney, the title holder in the thirty-six holes match play round held Saturday afternoon, two up.

Mr. Dexter's victory was an exhibition of golfing nerve, as he was shown practically all of the way never being up to the standard of the game until he reached the sixteenth hole in the afternoon round.

It was one of the most exciting, if not the most exciting, golf match ever staged on the local course, and so brilliant were the recoveries, and so nervy some of the puts, and approach shots that the bad shots that were scattered through the cards were overlooked by the gallery.

And speaking of the gallery. It numbered close to 500 in the morning round, and in the afternoon crowd grew to 600, who were sure going for their money. They witnessed every kind of golf, some good, bad and indifferent, and some of the most brilliant.

Win Low Medal Also.

At the last moment, just before they were ready to start on the first tees in the morning round, Whitney and Dexter agreed to play off their tie for the low medal score in their match play round, to be decided also the winner of the low medal score.

Therefore, the two biggest cups of the tournament goes to Dallas, and Mr. Whitney takes back to New Orleans the third runner-up, so that he has come in as southern tournament, to add to the four winning trophies that he already has.

It is a fitting setting to a splendid tournament like the low medal, and it will meet in the finals, and there were many who believed, after having seen the two players in action in their earlier rounds, that this would be the program.

But there were few that were willing to concede the lanky Longhorn a chance to win from the clocklike play of the champion, though there were many who insisted that they thought he stood the best chance of any of the other contestants.

But Whitney's play lacked its clock-like precision on Saturday, especially in the afternoon round, and hanging on gamely and fighting every step of the way, the new champion pulled what appeared to be an hopeless match out of the fire within the last few holes.

Splendid Recoveries.

All through the two rounds there were splendid recoveries by both men, Whitney apparently being impervious to traps, bunkers or anything else, playing just as well out of these as he did in the rough.

But he was off on his putting, and this is what kept the match close, with Dexter fighting to hold some of the shorter ones that he was showing when his chances ended in the match for wins.

But Whitney subbed a couple of drives during the afternoon round, and facts his drive, but he stuck to his usual standard. This was just to the lanky Texan's liking, for he was smashing them a mile from the tee.

Dexter's niblick shot out of the ditch on the sixth hole was a marvel, and earned him a spontaneous outburst of applause. But his perfect third, a tenth hole, in the morning round was a pure master golf one under par on this long hole, a drive, a second and a putt.

Whitney contributed a couple of niblicks on the sixteenth hole in both rounds that elicited considerable applause from the crowd.

Two Tell-Tale Shots.

If there is any one or two shots that one can put their names on, then the match on Saturday had three shots that were played on the fifteenth and sixteenth holes in the afternoon round, not to mention one on the sixteenth.

He topped his drive on nine, and everyone thought it was all off now, when Whitney slammed one straight down the valley. The gallery was further convinced when he slammed his second into the woods, and Whitney ripped off a beautiful braze straight for the pin.

But the gallery and Whitney had reckoned without Dexter, who, after his first tee, studied the shot and then taking a long chance, dashed into the ball with everything he had from the ground up. The ball passed over the green clear and the ball holding the green and rolled just a few feet beyond.

Whitney got well on in his second, one of the two missed putting he made, and putted his short putt and this shot out of the trees, a chance shot, if you will give Dexter his opportunity. He seized it and ended with a one.

Then came that wonderful 40-foot approach putt on the sixteenth green that laid his ball within six inches of the cup and won the hole, closing his one up to one for the home during the two rounds. Whitney showed his game ness. He gave his putt a chance, but the ball holding the green and rolled just a few feet beyond.

It was Dexter's jigger pitch out of the bunker, his second shot on seventeen, when it looked like Whitney would get his hole in one, but the shot that sent him to the home hole with a half a hole in his favor, and a half a hole that he needed to win the championship. It was to this it played a wonderful pitch and cannot be explained. It had to be seen lie and all to be appreciated.

How the Match Progressed.

Whitney took the lead on the second hole in the morning round and increased his lead on the second hole, but Dexter came back one when he won the fourth.

The fifth was halved, but Whitney won the sixth, putting two up again, Dexter won the honor back, winning the seventh. The eighth and ninth were halved and they turned with Whitney one up.

In the afternoon round, the match when he won the tenth hole, it is a coincidence that he won this hole every time that he played it during the entire tournament, and on this occasion it gave him an edge in the match.

The eleventh and twelfth were halved, but Whitney took the lead again on the thirteenth, but Dexter halved the fourteenth increased it to two upon the fifteenth. The sixteenth and seventeenth were squared, and at lunch time Dexter was one down when he won the final hole.

In the afternoon round, the first, second, third and fourth were halved, Whitney won the fifth and sixth, putting him two up, halving the second. The eighth was halved and Whitney turned it for the last nine, two up.

The tenth Dexter came in, bringing him down to one up. The eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth and fourteenth were all halved, and Dexter squared the match when they got to the fifteenth with the remarkable check shot as the keystone.

Dexter took the lead for the first time during the round when he won the sixteenth and held this to the end upon the seventeenth.

When Whitney missed his putt that gave him a chance on the eighteenth green he conceded the hole and put the new champion won, two up.

Crowd Gives Ovation.

The crowd went wild over the victor. They roared onto the green and seized the new champion and would have carried him on the green had he permitted it.

The general sentiment did not seem to be against Whitney, but for Dexter, every one saying as the match went along that Whitney had held the championship long enough, and they were in favor of some new man winning it.

Then, too, even if Atlanta could not win the title, a near Atlanta did win.

Dexter is related to an Atlanta man, Mr. George L. Dexter, the insurance man, is his uncle, and this made the match with a tinge of local interest attached to it.

It was the most exciting golf match ever staged on the local course, and so brilliant were the recoveries, and so nervous some of the puts and approach shots that the bad shots that were scattered through the cards were overlooked by the gallery.

And speaking of the gallery. It numbered close to 500 in the morning round, and in the afternoon crowd grew to 600, who were sure going for their money. They witnessed every kind of golf, some good, bad and indifferent, and some of the most brilliant.

This promises to be a big year for the younger stars of the American league. The names of men who are playing their first seasons as regulars in the Ban Johnson circuit have been very conspicuous in the accounts of games decided in the last half, and some of them have been almost continually since the campaign started. I do not recall another recent year in which the juveniles have made such a stir.

GIRLS ARE INTERESTED IN AUTO CONSTRUCTION

Studebaker Chassis Provided for Instruction at St.
Mary's College.

"Do mechanics interest young ladies?" "Yes," answers Miss Mary M. Callahan, director of the physical training department of St. Mary's academy and college at Notre Dame Ind., "and much more than is ordinarily the case, as I have found, if she is a motor car enthusiast."

Miss Callahan is in position to speak competently on the subject for her suggestion the faculty of St. Mary's adopted a course of study for the young ladies who might be interested, and this was not given to them alone, as the students who did not drive or had access of cars, the others were possibly looking into the future. It is probably the first instance of its kind with institutions located in the country, young ladies, but the announcement comes of more than ordinary interest from the fact that it evidences the rapidly growing popularity of motor driving among the fair sex."

It is not regarded essential, with present simplified methods of automobile construction, that the owner be familiarized with the knowledge of the parts entering into the construction of the car, but nevertheless this knowledge adds to the satisfaction of owning and greatly increases the pleasure of driving. Those who have not yet so familiarized themselves for another important reason it is recognized as insuring better care and less abuse of the car.

Miss Callahan consulted with officials of the Studebaker corporation relative to the best methods for installation of the course of training and securing the cooperation of the young ladies. She found the method agreedable to lending every assistance possible, from appreciation of the general good that could be made to result to the automobile manufacturing industry. The public spiritiveness of Studebaker also prompted the tender of a completely equipped Studebaker chassis for the use of the class.

According to the instructor, great interest is being taken by the young ladies in the work, and they show while learning to drive, even more than during the indoor term, their appreciation and knowledge gained from the lessons given. A photograph Miss Callahan had taken of the class and sent to Studebaker shows the young ladies familiarizing themselves with motor and mechanical construction, and the relation each function of motor machinery bears to another. Fifty points are the limit for any line of work in the physical education department of St. Mary's. Miss Callahan explains in outlining her method of construction, "at the close of the indoor term" she states, "oral and written examinations were held, twenty points being the highest number given, while for driving twenty points were apportioned."

St. Mary's college is located at a high point in the banks of the St. Joseph river at a point directly opposite where De LaSalle disembarked in making his explorations of the Mississippi valley grounds are healthily situated and ideal for driving drives while the surrounding country affords opportunity for delightful trips, so that the recreation and pastime found in motoring are an impelling incentive which explains the enthusiastic response given the plan to establish a course in motor car construction by the students.

This inauguration may be regarded as commendable, as it is an endeavor made to broaden the field of practical training and learning, that the young women of the future may be properly equipped for independence.

With increasing popularity in travel and covering greater distances, many car owners considering tours are at sea where to get information as to reaching certain destinations, the more reliable sources to view. Studebaker dealers will usually be found able to furnish valuable information in this way and are anxious to accommodate all inquiries.

BUICK OFFICIAL SAYS NO DANGER TOO MANY AUTOS

The amazing growth of the motor car industry is a source of never ending surprise to the public—both the questions are simple enough if the motoring public and the great outside public as well. Every day the question is asked, "Where does all the money come from to pay for these automobiles?" And also "When will the point of total saturation be reached?" R. H. Collins, known as Trainload Collins throughout the Buick organization, for which he is general sales manager, says the answers to such curious ones will look a little below the surface. "People ask where the money comes from," said Mr. Collins, "and there they stop. The public does not stop to think that the tremendous addition that the automobile has made to the aggregate wealth of the country. Every man or woman who buys an automobile soon finds that his or her efficiency is increased a hundred fold or more. This means, when you get right down to brass tacks, the motor cars, instead of subtracting from the wealth of the nation, add to it. The man who owns an automobile makes more money than ever before he became an automobile owner. His efficiency increases as if by magic. Result: He adds to his own wealth and the wealth of the community."

"There is no such thing as 'the point of total saturation' as applied to automobiles. In other words, the more automobiles the more wealth."

COBB DEFIES BAN TO RUN HIM OUT

report was not a creature of my own imagination, but a matter of sufficient seriousness to warrant an investigation by our manager in his official capacity. Mr. Jennings is willing to stand by the statement that he was warned of that he investigated and made the warning to Mr. Johnson. If Mr. Johnson is going to order my baseball demise for printing that truth, he can order the hearse for any convenient time."

"When I get ready to make any direct accusation against a club in the American league I will come right out and name it, and will have the evidence to back me up. Right now, however, will go right to Ban Johnson with my proofs. This is not the first time that there has been a rumor of signs stealing in the American league. The Diamond Club, according to what New York was getting them some years ago, and that matter was brought to Mr. Johnson's attention. There isn't any harm in bringing somebody out of the game, then dropping him. On the contrary, the matter was hushed up."

Detroit has been accused of stealing signs. Connie Mack came out with an interview last Wednesday in which he said that he used to do it. As proof, he said that there was an advertising sign on our fence with an Indian's head on it, and that it was visible to all. This latter is true, but the eyes were operated by a small boy, hired by the concern owning the advertisement. The kid stood up in the sign and made the eyes roll by means of a string lever.

When Jennings heard that Mack had made a complaint, he investigated and found what was going on. He forced the boy to stop looking the "googoo" eyes right away, then he, Connie of the Athletics, was on our club at this time and he knows that we did not get any information from that sign. He would not hesitate to say so now, if there had been anything crooked about it.

Connie Mack, too.

Eddie Plank, the former Philadelphia pitcher, recently told Edgar Willert, an ex-Tiger, that Connie Mack had kidney trouble and couldn't pitch in one game, so I don't see where Mack has any license to make a kick now. He knows perfectly well that the Detroit club is not going to do with that mechanical sign and he ought not to create a false impression.

I want to make it very plain that even if it should be proved that the White Sox have tried illegal signs, it would be without the knowledge of Mr. Comiskey. I have the greatest respect for him as a sportsman and know that he wouldn't countenance anything on this sort of a comment. Such a thing as managers putting it over on the owner has been known, however. I know that Mr. Comiskey is a man of honor. If he learned that his club had done anything out of the way, he always has stood for clean base-

The thought occurs to me that perhaps all these sensational interviews given out by the league president are designed as advertising. It seems to me that every time I put an eye, there is a faint mark about it, and sometimes it looks like the old circus dodge of getting the people excited artificially. I think Mr. Johnson's idea is that he would abandon the object of being made a freak. If my ball playing is not enough to attract the fans, they will have to stay away as far as I am concerned, for I will not be made the "goat" in some

CHANDLER $1295

The Pioneer Light-Weight Six

The Chandler announced its New Season's car in January, at a price of only $1295. That price was hundreds of dollars under the price of any other really similar character.

And now, in spite of price reductions and new models rushed out in the hopes of meeting the Chandler competition, the Chandler is still under-priced.

Such a car at such a price literally stamped the trade toward the Chandler. And it continues alone in its leadership of the high-grade light six field.

THE HOME GARDEN

Conducted by Prof. R. J. H. DeLoach,

Director Experiment Station, Experiment, Ga.

A New School Idea.

It is conceded by all that our trees are being reduced far too rapidly for the good of the country-at-large, and some remedies have been suggested for such a condition. The one universal remedy is education, but there are many practical suggestions by which conditions might be changed and perhaps help to educate the people. What we need is more trees of the right kind, far more trees of any kind, but especially those we have been doing.

School Gardens and What They Have Been Doing.

Schools have recently become much interested in the garden idea, and yet most of them restrict their activities to growing flowers, common vegetables and ornamental plants. This has had the tendency to discourage the schools in garden work because the flowers and vegetables usually spend their nature about the school grounds, and consequently the work or most of it is lost except its training value. There can never be any permanent visible results of the average school garden aside from the interesting studies in plant life and a few simple lessons in applied botany.

A Forest Nursery.

It seems to us that a forest nursery would supply a real need in the schools and help to do constructive work in a way that results can be seen and enjoyed.

Local communities all frequently wish for different varieties of trees, and would secure them if they could without difficulty find them.

Here is where the school will be able to do a real service to the community and in this way win the good will of the patrons and the people as a whole.

A small forest nursery can be planted consisting of such varieties as will have great interest to begin with and then extended to all varieties that seem to be needed and that the community could use to advantage.

When to Begin Preparations.

In the fall is the time to prepare the land. Break it thoroughly and fertilize with barnyard manure, a leguminous winter cover crop such as crimson clover, would help. Collect the seeds in the fall from such trees as fruit in the fall, and store them until autumn before planting in the spring, and buy other seed from nurseries, if you wish trees and are not able to find seed growing. Everything should be ready for the spring planting.

Each Pupil Must Have Some Definite Work.

Each pupil must have some definite work. Something to do to have each pupil try to raise a given number of trees, and prepare them for resetting, and then get part of the trees.

There are groups of pupils who certain groups of pupils can plant a certain species of tree, while another group of pupils can try another species, and in this way the work is being done at the same time, and the community will have introduced into it a great many new kinds of trees, it is said by an authority that if only one tree is planted in a place where it may grow into usefulness and beauty, the work of the nursery may be indefinitely more, when a hundred seedlings are produced and many of them allowed to perish.

Something should remain as a permanent reminder of the good that has been brought about by the undertaking.

During Vacation.

It will be very little trouble to care for a nursery during vacation. Hoeing and weeding must be done every two or three weeks, and this must be arranged for in such way that it will not interfere with the work of the school, for itself how this can be done.

A forestry club could be organized, or the Tree Growers' association, or an agreement made that the work would be done after. Next week we shall give suggestions on the kinds of trees that might be grown and how to get the seed.

A review of local building operations for the past week shows that a large number of permits of fair size have been issued. There was a good assortment of apartment houses, permits, a large number of dwelling permits, and quite a few business buildings. Several other permits of considerable importance are to be applied for at an early date.

The aggregate building for the month to date is now well over the $100 million mark and compares favorably with building permits issued for the corresponding period of last year.

Wrecking Orphans.

Work on wrecking the Orpheum theater, of Richland, Va., and Colonel John Adair, Atlanta, her agents, is having plans drawn for a four-story, brick and steel construction building to be erected on the east side of Wilton street, between the Chamberlin-Jones-Dubose property and the Vaudette theater. The plans will be completed in a few days. Morgan & Dilon are the architects.

This building will have a plate glass front for all four floors, and it is said, will cost approximately $50,000, it being planned for store purposes.

Connelly Building Steel Work.

Building operations on the Connally building are now proceeding rapidly, and work on the steel structure has commenced. The steel work will be delayed for several weeks when it becomes necessary to drive piles to get a good foundation.

NOMINAL BUSINESS ON STOCK EXCHANGE

Free Wild West Show Is Staged Behind British Front—King of Belgians Took Day Off and Attended—Daring Riding of the Indians Amazed French.

Frederick Palmer, who is at the front in France for the Associated Press, sends the following:

British Headquarters in France, June 19.—King Albert of the Belgians, who has not had many afternoons off during the last eleven months, took one off to see a show—gymkana. He has stuck as close to his job in what remains of his kingdom as has any desk-ridden business man who cannot be induced to go to the mountains or to the seashore.

Whether living in their own houses, or refugees whose houses in the fighting zone have been demolished by shells, the French people in the rear of the British front have not had many afternoons off either. The women, the old, the crippled and every child who could hold a hoe has taken the place of the able-bodied men away at war.

With the crops all in and the wheat ripening, word came that strange pictures mortals from somewhere beyond the Arabian Nights' country, known as the British Isles, had come.

Belgians in French barns and out-buildings were going to give an exhibition of horsemanship.

Like Free Wild West Show.

Everybody was invited and there was no admission fee. It was like a free wild west show on the outskirts of a New England village, with a chance to see a heroic king, and if he really were as tall as the people had said.

The scene was a small plateau hardened by hoofs of the cavalry drill, the one space in northern France which the industry of those too weak to fight had not made green with cultivation. Across the sweep of fields and groves which hid the trenches and batteries along the British front was an almost unbroken silence, but further north a section of the battle ground, scarred like a gigantic maimed snare eagle.

There French guns, hundreds of French guns, were busy tearing away the German works known as "the labyrinth." There men were being killed or wounded every minute, but those living near the front thought nothing of that. They are as used to it as is anybody living in the neighborhood of Niagara Falls to their roar.

Joy in Hearts of Indians.

Joy was in the Indians' hearts, the joy of a warming sunshine to children of the sun fair out of a winter icebox at last. The joy was shown in their dark eyes, it glistened on their white teeth and it gleamed on the white of their lances.

The German armies invading France were unable to use their forces to the best advantage over so short a front as the British front, but further north a section of the battle ground, scarred like a gigantic maimed snare eagle.

They are free of swaths, the clothing which the king-emperor had supplied to them to keep them warm in Flanders cold. Sunshine had dried their muscles under their bronze skins. Sonnay and Kansas in dog days would not be too hot for them. They would be something like India and home. And while "sahibs" said two more months—July and August—which were warmer, they were cooler.

Those who survived the trench warfare were going to show how well they had kept themselves through the mud. Particularly they were going to show how well they had kept their horses amid the mud and dust. As with the Cossack, praise their horses and you praise them.

Contrast and picturesqueness, if you please, in the way past of these easterners, a bit out of Africa.

This spring the representatives of the British army coming into France have tried to make good their record of the momentous developments of the gigantic duel between the principal opposing fortresses of Metz and Verdun. Metz delivered the first blow, Verdun the second.

FOREIGN SITUATION THWARTS ACTIVITY

Bearish Onslaughts, However, Curbed by Strong Support—General Conditions Continue to Improve.

New York, June 19.—(Special).—The stock market was uncertain in its bearing during the last week, with certain speculative stocks of companies having war orders, or metal companies, soaring to new high records, but with the standard stocks showing no definite tendency. Expectations of a long day's session, consequent to tension of international relations, in a reply from Germany to the latest American note had a damper on all activity. Whereas, as during most of last week, there had been a decline in all stocks except that which had been advanced to the note, in a way acceptable to the government of this country, it has given place to a feeling in banking and financial circles that we have a commanding influence of demands of the United States will not be made, there will be sufficient attempt to meet the demands so that an open rupture can be avoided. General conditions of prosperity still continue throughout the United States, continue to show improvement, and as result of reports of such good support was given stocks whenever attempts were made to depress them during the last week.

The general tone of the market, however, showed that general confidence is returning. There has been a marked increase in interest shown by people who have been out of the market for weeks, but without much buy resulting from their greater interest. All crop advices continue to show that there is a great demand along the line. The spot market has been active, with direct orders for steel rails and other products received recently, while orders for war munitions and cars, and locomotives, have been given by the government, and export orders for steel have been received from foreign countries. The grain country did not advance materially since agricultural prospects became so bright. Metal stocks suffered somewhat from real sales, but the times have advanced during the two months when other shares were either standing still or were moving lower. The great trouble with the market is that its leaders are mostly men of limited knowledge, and permanent, permanent strength, while many of the leaders have been "cats and dogs" of former days which have been favored with attention because of peculiar conditions, and the leaders as for instance war orders or unusually high prices for the products they turn out. Nothing has developed to cause those who have been predicting an extended upward movement before long to change their ideas.

Money Very Easy.

The money market continues very easy, with call and time loans at low rates and with borrowing demand light as compared with available funds. Demand sterling and franc exchange rates at New York almost level during the last week, with sterling about 1 cent to the pound below parity, and at the lowest figure thus far possible, while the rate of 1 cent to the pound was a cessation of extension of credit. However, the outlook is for only small importations of gold and for continued extension of credit, despite the condition of exchange. The private exchange market due principally to the fact that J. P. Morgan & Co. have ceased to steady the market by purchasing bills is in decline, and the central bank of Great Britain will have to negotiate large credits here before exchange will recover. There has been talk of the British government buying up all the American bonds which can be had, giving government bonds in exchange, and sending the securities to this country to offset the trade balance against Great Britain. Such a move, if it could be effected, would do much to offset the weakness in sterling exchange for months to come. It is reported that the French government has already secured such bonds, and the American bonds from France are on the way over now. In the meantime, the balance of trade in favor of the United States continues to grow. It fell to $4,000,000 in this month, but the outlook is for larger exports during the last half of the month than the first half.

Large War Orders Continue.

Another large number of war orders was reported last week, with the Standard Oil Company placing large orders for cars and locomotives in addition to those received previously, with buying of large quantities of apparel of all kinds, and war munitions of various kinds. Companies general of which had not been prominent in war business before. Among the most profitable orders which have been placed in this country since the war began are those for automobiles and tires. Manufacturers of each have had nearly normal trade at home and have shipped or are working on thousands of automobiles and hundreds of thousands for Europe.

July Tax Exempt.

There will be about $65,000,000 corporation bonds and notes maturing during July, of which all but a small part have been provided for. During the second half of year there are only about $10,000,000 maturing, as compared with over $500,000,000 for the first half year.

Recent good buying of bonds newly issued with money so easy will probably make it very difficult to renew securities in the near future unless the German situation should grow acute again. The investment buying of old issues as well as new offerings of both bonds and stocks is still large, although prices for high-class securities have not advanced much and are still very low as compared with recent prices. It is possible to get a rail-road railroad bond of the first class at prices yielding nearly 5 per cent, although in normal times such securities can seldom be purchased to yield much more. These are popular issues which are relatively high, however, and which are yielding little over 4 per cent now, though such are usually below such a yield base.

Government Interference Staged.

The general belief in financial circles is that the government will not accept the decision dismissing the suit against the Steel Corporation. The recent reversal of the conviction of members of the New York Coughlin gang, company of criminal registrars of trade under the Sherman act, is believed to have made the criminal section of that act a dead letter. The civil section has been twitted by the Standard Oil and American Tobacco decisions, and its effects further weakened by recent decisions, so that it is the view at Washington, according to reliable sources, that only a few lawless companies will be able to present continuities. The buying and construction program of the road are expected to each be followed up in proportion by other railroads.

Gasoline Prices Cut.

Following the Standard Oil company of Indiana, the Standard Oil company and other petroleum products, the Standard Oil company of Kansas has taken similar action, with others reported to do the same in the course of the war in the country. This section of the United States, while there is some evidence of such a move in other sections of the country. The Standard Oil company of New Jersey is also following suit, but there is keen competition in business. There is some talk to the effect that the companies controlled formerly by the Clayton anti-trust act are to be followed up in proportion by other railroads.

New York Financial.

New York, June 19.—Mercantile paper, $10.00, 40 days, 34.74; demand, $4,782; cables, $1,708; France, demand, $444; cables, $435; Marks, demand, $2; cables, $1,000; Germany, cables, $486; cables, $1,000; Russia, demand, $2; cables, $1,000; Mexico, cables, $23; Bar silver, $4.45; Mexican dollars, $6. Government bonds steady; railroad bonds steady.

Cotton Seed Oil.

New York, June 19.—Cotton seed oil was a shade easier under scattered liquidation. The result of the war in the country is considered a sign that it will go ahead with new construction work as well as replacing old rails. There had been talk that the road would postpone its new construction work to present continuities. The buying and construction program of the road are expected to each be followed up in proportion by other railroads.

Conditions in Mexico have slightly improved, and several companies there which had been idle for a long time are about to resume operations. The most important of these, the Greene

Steel Market Stronger.

The steel market has been considerably stronger during the past week, with several advances in prices, and with a general firming of quotations all along the line. The spot market has been active, with direct orders for steel rails and other products received recently, while orders for war materials and locomotives, and especially iron and steel shrapnel, have been placed in this country, owing to various regulations and the competition of a parcel post and express companies. The parcel post and express companies have again the most active features as a group, but their course was variable, with a majority of net declines. Only one issue, however, was steady, and that was forwarded directly to the Philippine city as the center for American trade throughout Asia.

The income tax returns indicate that the income of the nation will be larger than had been at first estimated, and may reach $35,000,000, which will go a long way toward making up the heavy drain of imports. In view of this, it is impossible to say that any emergency measure will be resorted to—such as selling bonds to aid government finances this year.

Europe's Large Purchases.

With Europe's purchases rising, at the present unprecedented rate, and with foreign exchange at its present low level, one of three things must happen: First, England must send us gold, or else loan us money. Second, gold must establish credits through a formal loan or through private banking operations. Third, if gold is not arranged, or credits are not arranged, England, France, and Germany must fall back to us some of the $40,000,000 worth of our industrial and railway bonds and railway stocks which for generations have been accumulated by foreign countries.

Shipped bankers in this country have been faced with the very outbreak of the war that sooner or later Europe will balance its accounts with us by heavy sale of our securities. As a matter of fact, selling began months before the outbreak of the war, and it is evident that labor troubles had been practically settled by the submission of the Lancashire disputes to arbitration and the cotton strike had been withdrawn, while they were at this time last year, and it is most probable that the most important factor in the general situation, rates for all periods, including over the year, failing to lower levels.

The demoralization witnessed in the foreign exchange market, and the potential aspects, the most important development of the week. The money of virtually all European countries is held in high regard, and there is an establishing a high premium for the American dollar. Further large sums of British gold came from Canada, but this inflow offered only partial relief in the delicate international credit situation.

As a matter of fact, selling began months before the outbreak of the war, and it is evident that labor troubles had been practically settled by the submission of the Lancashire disputes to arbitration and the cotton strike had been withdrawn, while they were at this time last year, and it is most probable that the most important factor in the general situation, rates for all periods, including over the year, failing to lower levels.

The demoralization witnessed in the foreign exchange market, and the potential aspects, the most important development of the week. The money of virtually all European countries is held in high regard, and there is an establishing a high premium for the American dollar. Further large sums of British gold came from Canada, but this inflow offered only partial relief in the delicate international credit situation.

Ideals As Applied To Service

"It takes a long time to bring excellence to maturity," said a great philosopher nearly two thousand years ago, and today his words ring out the same great truth.

This store believes that it can learn nothing without being taught. It is learning something every day—and you, our public, are the teachers, for only through your criticisms can we bring even the present excellence of its values and service to maturity.

Intelligent attention and a quick perception of the customer's requirements are, of course, a necessary and requisite part of the store service always and our people here co-operate to make that as much their pleasure as their duty.

It is coincident with the progress of the store.

Some Hot Weather Essentials

AEROLUX PORCH SHADES will make your porch the most delightful spot in the home. They will also convert it into an ideal sleeping room—perfectly private, yet cool and airy. They keep out drafts and wind, and you will not be awakened by any flapping of the shades, for this is prevented by the remarkable No-Whip Attachment with which these shades are equipped.

Telephone Main 3033—and we will send a man out at once to quote prices and show you samples.

AWNINGS—one of the most essential of summer comforts. Awnings here are made by experts, of the "John Boyle stripes," to withstand the hot sun, high wind and beating rain. Have your awnings been made? Telephone Main 3033—our awning expert will do the rest.

CREX RUGS—are ideal summer floor coverings for summer. They are cool looking, artistic, inexpensive; they do not hold germs or dust, therefore are absolutely sanitary. With so many strong points to commend them, small wonder they are so popular. Let us show you the various styles and sizes here, and how very little the cost is.

COMFORT CHAIRS—camp stools and canvas steamer chairs for your porch or lawn. They are priced at 25c to $4.50. A good reclining steamer chair, with canvas cover, costs only $2.50.

East Lake Country Club

Center of Social Life

The country house of the Athletic club at East Lake and the golf course was the resort of practically the whole of the social and club world, at some time yesterday or last night.

The playing of golf in the southern golf championship was followed by a tennis-dance in the afternoon and a dinner-dance at night, when the tournament trophies were awarded, and to all these features invitations had been extended to the members of the Druid Hills, Capital City, Ansley Park and Driving clubs.

A tremendous gallery followed the golf players, the many women enthusiasts adding a picturesque feature, most of them rich in color and their smart "sport" clothes.

Afterwards the spacious club veranda assembled many parties for tea and dancing, and in the evening a company of five hundred was seated for dinner at tables on the porches and terrace. Dinner was followed by dancing.

This evening there will be music from 8:30 to 9:30 o'clock at the clubhouse porch.

This clubhouse, with its broad porch overlooking the tennis courts and swimming pool, will doubtless be very popular these warm evenings.

Quite a number of the boys and girls of the college set have returned to their homes and will be at this dance.

Mrs. Frank Swinney, of Constitution, Ga., Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Stalling, Mrs. K. C. Crayton, of Atlanta, and Mrs. Jim Lee, Mr. R. G. Almand, of Blount Park, Fla.; Mrs. E. L. Shields, of Blount Park, Fla. The occasion was a very happy one, and Mrs. Almand received many pretty presents.

Birthday Dinner.

Mrs. M. W. Gober entertained at an informal dinner Friday, at her home on Norwood avenue, in Kilkwood, in honor of her husband's birthday. A large cake was the centerpiece on the dining table. Sixteen guests were present.

REGENSTEIN'S

In the Social Whirl

By Isma Dooly.

In their enthusiasm over the contestants in the golf tournament the week Atlanta beauties forgot the tan and freckles the heat and sun brought and many of them were part of the galler that followed the sport. Morning and afternoon the fair sight-seers assembled at the Druid Hills club and East Lake club and the pretty toilets added picturesqueness to the scene.

Nearly everybody wore white and when there was the opportunity was colored sweaters were to be seen many of the new silk woven ones attracting the envy of those not possessing them. Now and then one saw a pretty parasol. Atlanta women are slow in adopting this very English fashion of the parasol for nearly all occasions. There were some white ones and a few bright colored ones but not the number that would indicate that the parasol goes about with the golf stick in the bags of smart post-women at more northern climes than England.

In the afternoon hundreds of pretty women assembled at the club at the tea hour and it was a great treatable that no expense was spared in the attire of the many out-door picture groups of the pictorial women could make. Druid Hills and East Lake was a rich field for the artists eye hour during the week.

AT EAST LAKE

Yesterday afternoon at East Lake the gathering for the tea dance was even the prettiest in a club house and the girls were groups of people. Many from all the clubs coming the gathering was one of the largest in the history of East Lake. There were many little parties arranged for last night and parties came all during the evening.

The managements of all the tennis clubs were highly commended by the visiting golfers for the efficient way in which the large gatherings were handled each afternoon and evening during the tournament.

IN THE POOL

The first of a series of parties at which Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Adam will have during the summer month was that of Tuesday evening who their guests were invited to the swimming pool at 8 o'clock. Later a beautiful repast was served at their home and then the entire party went to the Druid Hills club house to dance.

The swimming pool was refreshing to those who did not venture in. The majority of the gentlemen took advantage of it but there were many of the ladies who did not in their attitude of staying out the advice of the over-enthusiastic men who when asked by her do the opposite. Mother may go out to swim cautioned her first also to the hickory limb then told her don't go near the water.

But there were enough pretty faces showing above the surface of the water to suggest the idea of so many lotus to the graceful swimmers were Mrs. James J. De Key, Miss Minnie Ansley, Mrs. Clarence Strickler, Mrs. Frank Boland, Mr. Isabel Robinson, Mrs. Harrison Jones, Mrs. Frank Hollingshead, Mrs. Velveteen Thomas, Mrs. Lula Nash, Mrs. Lula Day, Mrs. Margaret McLean, Mrs. Lula Campbell and Mrs. Morrison McNutt.

They were very satisfied of their headgear of first and conscious a little of the fit of the fit. But once thoroughly in the pool refreshed by it they forgot the headgear and were ready to plunge in and try almost anyfeat suggested in a part of the pool pleasure.

Mrs. Adam's menu for supper was well selected there were delicious olives and nuts, also the necessary trifles, fruit, cake and others. That were big platters filled with fresh hot rolls, bacon biscuit and Smithfield ham, salad to tempt the appetite and then the ever delicious home made ice cream and cake.

Golden Wedding Anniversary.

On Monday June 14 the Rev. and John Marion Hood celebrated their golden wedding anniversary with a reception from 6 to 9 o'clock at their home in West End. Only the family and a few old time friends were present. Miss George Cooper being the only guest who attended the wedding which took place in South Carolina just one year after the civil war.

Quantities of shafta daisies and sun roses were used in the reception room, the girls who helped in the decorations carrying out the idea of the golden wedding day. On the vine in closest porch a punch bowl was emblazoned with the name Ferns.

An orchestra furnished a program of old songs and during the playing of that wedding march a pretty ceremony was the placing of gold band wed rings upon the fingers of both. At the time of the wedding fifty years ago gold was unavailable for the ring and small silver ones were used. Not until 1890 was gold band substituted for the silver one.

Many beautiful gifts and happy congratulations were showered upon this couple throughout the day they being well known in both Georgia and South Carolina.

At the golden wedding four genera-tions were represented. The children of Rev. and Mrs. Hood were Mrs. Carol Morgan Dickinson of Villa Rica. Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Thompson of Memphis. Mrs. F. B. Paschal Mr. and Mrs. Charles Strickler Jackson Mrs. Jane Hood Miss Bonnie Lee Jackson and Mrs. Hodges.

Mrs. Hood was gowned in white voile and lace and wore a orange bouquet of sunred roses tied with gold colored ribbon.

RICH'S SALE OF NEW SUMMER GOODS

A Masterful Merchandising Movement Based Upon Our Buyers' New York Purchases

RICH'S is not a store of dreamers nor drones, but a store of doers.

Led by our merchandising manager, our buyers went to market in early June to help New York wholesalers and importers "clean house."

Because our first prices are always fair, goods seldom remain long here.

Hence we are always ready to turn market conditions to the advantage of ourselves and our customers.

In the present instance we have made a ten-strike—the choicest goods of summer are here at savings often reaching a half or more. If you know values, Monday should see you at Rich's.

A Charge Account at Rich's
